Druggists Who Sell Dr. Miles' Nervine Agree, If It Fails, To Refund Cost.

Of course we reimburse the druggist. You know him, and trust him.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is medicine for your nerves.

It is a novel theory—not of anatomy, but of treatment; first discovered by Dr. Miles, and since made use of by many wide-awake physicians, who appreciate its value in treating the sick.

If you are sick, we offer you a way to be made well—Dr. Miles' Nervine.

This medicine is a scientific cure for nerve disorders, such as Neuralgia, Headache, Loss of Memory, Sleeplessness, Spasms, Backache, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy or Fits, Nervous Prostration, etc.

By toning up the nerves, Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine will also cure those diseases of the internal organs due to a disordered nervous system.

"My brother had nervous prostration, and was not expected to live. I prevailed upon him to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and now he has fully recovered. You remember I wrote you how it saved my life a few years ago, when I had nervous trouble. I preach its merits to everyone."—REV. M. D. MYERS, Correctionville, Iowa.

IN FEMININE FIELDS.

Club women in San Francisco are to start a woman's municipal league.

Miss Sarah Louise Gilman, of Hallowell, Me., has just resigned as a school-teacher, after constant service of 52 years, during which time she has had as pupils some of the leading men of the state's history.

Though totally blind, Miss Delia Pittsford, of Selma, Ind., has practical charge of a large Sunday school class and of the choir of a leading church in Selma. She also does considerable literary work and is a skillful typewriter.

The arrangement of the cascade gardens and numerous other fine landscape decorations at the world's fair was the work of Miss Ada A. Sutermeister, a trained landscape architect, and for some years Mr. Kessler's assistant.

Mrs. Mary J. Tillinghast has served continuously as police matron for 13 years in Providence, R. I. She is on duty from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m., when she is relieved by the night matron. During the past year over 1,200 women and girls and over 1,600 boys have come under her charge and influence.

Three prominent English women who are devoting themselves to the science of astronomy are Lady Huggins, Miss Agnes M. Clerke and Mrs. E. Walter Maunder. Lady Huggins is the wife of Sir William Huggins, and it is acknowledged that considerable of his success in spectroscope has been due to her, his assistant.

Monroeville, O., has a woman bank president in the person of Mrs. Annis M. Stenz, who is a financier of ability and has managed her large private fortune in a manner that has multiplied it many times. Mrs. Stenz was the wife of a former bank president of the First national bank of Monroeville and was recently chosen to fill the same office herself.

Mrs. Fannie Stenhouse, who had much to do with creating early sentiment against the Mormons, died recently at Los Angeles, Cal.

THE WEAK SPOT.

A weak, aching back tells of sick kidneys. It aches when you work. It aches when you try to rest. It throbs in changeable weather. Urinary troubles add to your misery. No rest no comfort, until the kidneys are well. Cure them with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. W. M. Dauscher, of 25 Water St., Bradford, Pa., says: "I had an almost continuous pain in the small of the back. My ankles, feet, hands and almost my whole body were bloated. I was languid and the kidney secretions were profuse. Physicians told me I had diabetes in its worst form, and I feared I would never recover. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1890, and I have been well ever since."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Dauscher will be mailed to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers, price 50 cents per box.

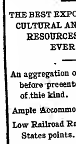
Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic



Paxtine is in powder form to dissolve in water — non-poisonous and far superior to liquid antiseptics containing alcohol which irritates inflamed surfaces, and have no cleansing properties. The contents of every box makes more Antiseptic Solution — lasts longer — goes further — has more uses in the family and does more good than any antiseptic preparation you can buy.

The formula of a noted Boston physician, and used with great success as a Vaginal Wash, for Leucorrhœa, Pelvic Catarrh, Nasal Catarrh, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, Cuts, and all soreness of mucus membrane.

In local treatment of female ills Paxtine is invaluable. Used as a Vaginal Wash we challenge the world to produce its equal for thoroughness. It is a revelation in cleansing and healing power; it kills all germs which cause inflammation and discharges.

All leading druggists keep Paxtine; price, 50c. a box; if yours does not, send to us for it. Don't take a substitute — there is nothing like Paxtine.

PERSONAL PECULIARITIES.

Miss Helen Gould says the memento that she prizes more than anything else she possesses is the flag which the sailors of the Raleigh voted to give her in preference to the city of Raleigh. It holds a prominent place in her home at Lyndhurst.

Sir Henry Thompson, the eminent English surgeon, who died recently in his eighty-fourth year, was, in addition to his surgery, especially distinguished for his study in matters of food and diet, and because he was one of the earliest and constant advocates of cremation.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans is a baseball enthusiast and seldom misses an opportunity to see a game. He has been visiting Mrs. Evans' sister in Poughkeepsie, and while there attended a contest of the Hudson River League and "rooted" uproariously for the home team, which won.

Sarah Grand says that American women are, for the most part, more thorough, more intelligent, better informed, larger minded, and more agreeable to meet than their British sisters. The average Englishwoman is dull, idle, sluggish, and incompetent; the average American is busy, bright, energetic and capable.

One of the most enthusiastic of all those who follow the elusive golf balls over the Chevy Chase links, near Washington, is Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court. He has turned threescore and ten, but he declines to agree that he has, therefore, passed what some have called the "dead line" of active life.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie cares little or nothing for jewels. When she goes out to a function or to the opera she sometimes wears pearls, but these are not of fabulous size or price. They are extremely modest and afford quite a contrast to the jewels which some women wear. At best, Mrs. Carnegie does not care for functions or society in general. She makes a delightful hostess at Skibo castle, where she has received royalty, and these are qualities which always win with the higher classes abroad.

NUBBINS OF NONSENSE.

Sooner or later the patient taxpayer is called upon to foot the bills.—Chicago Record-Herald.

It is because a man doesn't know a woman that he asks her to marry him. —Chicago Daily News.

The man who invented mirrors deserves a— But the chances are that the inventor of mirrors was a woman.—Chicago Tribune.

Being rich is a relative term, after all. A boy with a dime is sometimes richer than a man with a million dollars.—Somerville Journal.

In the interest of accuracy and at the risk of being voted ungallant, we desire to state that it is not always proper to refer to the end seat hog as "him."—Washington Post.

WISDOM AND WIT.

A man does not have to be guilible to be gentle.

Try as hard as you please, you can never find out a woman's weighs.

"No, Willie," said Mr. Cumrox, "a groundhog is not necessarily a real estate man."

Some people are so economical when it comes to truth as to be positively parsimonious.

"Prepare yourself for the wurst," said the dachshund to the fox terrier, as they entered the sausage mill.

RACE DONE?

Not a Bit of It.

A man who thought his race was run made a food find that brought him back to perfect health:

"One year ago I was unable to perform any labor, in fact I was told by my physicians that they could do nothing further for me. I was fast sinking away, for an attack of grip had left my stomach so weak it could not digest any food sufficient to keep me alive.

"There I was just wasting away, growing thinner every day and weaker, really being snuffed out simply because I could not get any nourishment from food.

"Then my sister got after me to try Grape-Nuts food which had done much good for her, and she finally persuaded me, and although no other food had done me the least bit of good, my stomach handled the Grape-Nuts from the first, and this food supplied the nourishment I had needed. In three months I was so strong I moved from Albany to San Francisco and now on my three meals of Grape-Nuts and cream every day I am strong and vigorous and do fifteen hours' work.

"I believe the sickest person in the world could do as I do, eat three meals of nothing but Grape-Nuts and cream, and soon be on their feet again in the flush of best health like me.

"Not only am I in perfect physical health again, but my brain is stronger and clearer than it ever was on the old diet. I hope you will write to the names I send you about Grape-Nuts, for I want to see my friends well and strong.

"Just think that a year ago I was dying, but to-day, although I am over 55 years of age, most people take me to be less than 40, and I feel just as young as I look." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

ANSWERED ADVERTISEMENT

Story Told by Young Man Who Responded to Widow's Appeal in Newspaper.

"It is my firm belief," declared the man with a story at the back of his mind, says the Washington Post, "that everybody has had a similar experience only the rest of you are afraid to tell yours."

"Undoubtedly," encouraged his friends, "but let us hear yours."

"Well," the story teller went on, "it concerns the first and only time I ever answered a matrimonial advertisement. It had been inserted by a widow who desired correspondence with an eligible man not averse to matrimony. Of course, I gave a fictitious name and address when I wrote, but I received an answer promptly.

"In this the widow gave her real name, her address and her telephone number and suggested that I call her up and make an appointment to call upon her. I did so with alacrity."

"And did you really go?"

"Certainly. I went out and rang the bell, and she herself came to the door and invited me to step inside.

"'Is this Mr. Spaulding?' she asked.

"'No,' I answered gravely. 'I am Mr. Spaulding's friend. Mr. Spaulding was called out of town very unexpectedly late this afternoon and begged me to come out here and explain the situation. I will admit to you,' I added, 'that I know the matter under consideration between you and him and if you will permit me, I should like very much to sit down and talk with you a few moments.'

"'Delighted,' she repeated, leading the way into the parlor and seating herself.

"'What I can't understand,' I continued, 'is why a woman like yourself, young, good-looking and evidently in comfortable circumstances, should have to advertise for a husband. Surely, you know plenty of men.'

"'I know it must seem strange,' she said. 'Of course, I do know a great many men, but in my circle of acquaintances there is not one that is really a suitable match for me.'

"Now, you know," said the story teller, "that that is a very plausible situation. Ask yourself if it might not happen to any one. Then, of course, she began quizzing me about Spaulding. I told her he was tall and a blond. She was pleased with that, because, she said, she was very partial to blonds.

"'I am sorry about that,' I said, 'for I had hoped if you and Spaulding shouldn't agree you would let me call upon you.'

"'Well,' she said, archly, 'I have known brunettes whom I admired.'

"Altogether, I suppose, I was there 20 minutes when I rose to go.

"'Won't you tell me what your name is?' she asked.

"'I can't see that that matters,' I answered. 'Spaulding is the man you are interested in. But I am Spaulding's friend, as I told you in the beginning, and in case you and he fail to come to an agreement, you will hear from me.' Then I made an appointment for Spaulding with her and left. And that's the end of the tale."

"Didn't you ever go back?"

"No," came the indignant answer. "I wasn't looking for a wife—it was simply a lark."

LACKING IN SOME PERSONS.

By this "strange sixth sense" you always know about where you are. It is to some degree a memory for back tracks and landmarks, but to a greater extent an instinct for the lay of the country, for relative bearings, by which you are able to make your way across lots back to your starting place. It is not an uncommon faculty, yet some lack it utterly. If you are one of the latter class do not venture, for you will get lost as sure as shooting, and being lost in the mountains is no joke, writes Stewart E. White, in Outlook.

Some men possess it, others do not. The distinction seems to be almost arbitrary. It can be largely developed, but only in those with whom original endowment of the faculty makes development possible. No matter how long a direction-blind man frequents the wilderness, he is never sure of himself. Nor is the lack any reflection on the intelligence. I once traveled in the Black Hills with a young fellow who himself frankly confessed that, after much experiment, he had come to the conclusion that he could not "find himself." He asked me to keep near him and this I did as well as I could, but even then three times during the course of ten days he lost himself completely in the tumultuous upheavals and canyons of that badly mixed region.

Another, an old grouse hunter, walked twice in a circle within the confines of a thick swamp about two miles square. On the other hand, many exhibit almost marvelous skill in striking a bee line for their objective point and can always tell you, even after an engrossing and wandering hunt, exactly where camp lies.

Bridges in Korea.

Some idea of the delights of travelling in Korea is given by the following description by a traveler of the "bridges" in that country: "A first-class bridge in Korea is simply an assortment of planks nailed together. These are scarce. A second-class bridge is a series of isolated stones, from one to another of which the visitor may jump. A third-class bridge, much the commonest variety—is invisible, its position being indicated by a couple of posts, one on each side of the river. They mean that you may safely wade across, as the water will—probably —not go much above your chest!—London Mail.

HE WAS WILLING TO PAY.

But Was a Little Too Foremost in Ordering the Help Around.

A lively looking porter stood on the rear of a car in the Pennsylvania depot. A fussy and choleric-looking old man clambered up the steps. He stopped on the platform, puffed a moment, relates the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and then turned to the young man in uniform and said: "Peter!"

"Yes, sir!"

"I am going to St. Louis. I want to be well taken care of and can pay for it. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir; I hope—"

"Never mind what you hope. You listen to what I say. Keep the train boys away from me. Dust me off whenever I want you to. Give me an extra blanket, and if any fellow has the berth above me, slide him over into another one. I want you to—"

"But, say, boss, I—"

"Don't talk too much, young man. Here's two dollars. Now I want to get the good of it. Not a word, sir."

The train was starting. The porter swung off to the platform.

"All right, boss," he shouted. "I'm powerful sorry you wouldn't let me talk, but I ain't going out on that train."

PLAYING GOLF IN THE SOUTH

Most Enjoyable Features of the Game Are Those of the Little Black Caddy.

When you manage to bring off a more than ordinarily good shot it is a treat to note the expression on the face of your little negro caddie, says Country Life in America. The look of exuberant joy and pride and the triumphant glance at your opponent's "boy" is followed by a series of soft, melodious chuckles which only a darky can do justice to, as much as to say that he, and he alone, had done the trick, to the utter confusion of the rival caddies. Some of these darkies make good caddies, but the majority are too indolent or uninterested to be more than mere beasts of burden, knowing little of the game and caring less. They tell a story of one—a novice—who at the end of the day's play, after cheerfully following his employer through every bunker on the course and into all sorts of impossible places on the sides, rather startled him by guilelessly asking: "Is you gwine to work to-morrow, boss?"

Of Wide Interest.

Breed, Wis., July 18—Special—Chas. Y. Peterson, Justice of the Peace for Oconto Co., has delivered a judgment that is of interest to the whole United States. Put briefly, that judgment is, "Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best Kidney medicine on the market to-day."

And Mr. Peterson gives his reason for this judgment. He says: "Last winter I had an aching pain in my back which troubled me very much. In the morning I could hardly straighten my back. I did not know what it was but an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. After taking one box I can only say they have done more for me than expected as I feel as well now as ever I did before."

Pain in the back is one of the first symptoms of Kidney disease. If not cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills it may develop into Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism or some of the other deadly forms of Kidney Disease.

Wrong House.

An attendant at Mount Vernon not long since found a lady weeping most bitterly and audibly with her handkerchief at her eyes. He stepped up to her and said:

"Are you in any trouble, madam?"

"No, sir," she sobbed.

"I saw you weeping."

"Ah!" said she, "how can one help weeping at the grave of the Father of His Country?"

"Oh! Indeed, madam," said he, "that's it! The tomb is over yonder. This is the ice house."—Indianapolis Journal.

Just think what hardship and suffering would follow if the political machinists should strike this year! You needn't be alarmed, however.

I am sure Piso's Cure for Consumption saved my life three years ago.—Mrs. Thos. Robbins, Norwich, N. Y., Feb. 17, 1900.

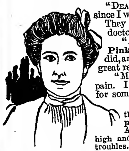
Miss Alice M. Smith, of Minneapolis, Minn., tells how woman's monthly suffering may be quickly and permanently relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain and could find no relief, but one day when visiting a friend I ran across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change. I use it occasionally now when I am exceptionally tired or worn out."—MISS ALICE M. SMITH, 804 Third Ave., South Minneapolis, Minn., Chairman Executive Committee Minneapolis Study Club.

Beauty and strength in women vanish early in life because of monthly pain or some menstrual irregularity. Many suffer silently and see their best gifts fade away. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps women preserve roundness of form and freshness of face because it makes their entire female organism healthy. It carries women safely through the various natural crises and is the safeguard of woman's health.

The truth about this great medicine is told in the letters from women published in this paper constantly.

Mrs. C. Kleinschrodt, Morrison, Ill., says:—



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered ever since I was thirteen years of age with my menses. They were irregular and very painful. I doctored a great deal but received no benefit.

"A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and after taking a few bottles of it, I found great relief.

"Menstruation is now regular and without pain. I am enjoying better health than I have for sometime."

How is it possible for us to make it plainer that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will positively help all sick women? All women are constituted alike, rich and poor, high and low, — all suffer from the same organic troubles. Surely, no one can wish to remain weak and sickly, discouraged with life and without hope for the future, when proof is so unmistakable that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure monthly suffering — all womb and ovarian troubles, and all the ills peculiar to women.

SHOUTED FOR TEDDY

SETH BULLOCK, OF DEADWOOD, THE PRESIDENT'S FRIEND.

A STRENUOUS WESTERNER

Typical of a Class That Roosevelt Likes—The New Western Cabinet Officers — Strenuosity Seems to Be the Thing.

Washington.—While the funny men of the newspapers may go to extremes in caricaturing the strenuosity of President Roosevelt, there can be no doubt of his "strenuosity." He simply has to "do things." He is not of the kind that can be waited upon effectively.

Insistently Shouted for Teddy.

It is this desire to move that caused him to like the west, where his strenuosity found full sway. It is the same characteristic that caused him to make of western men his closest friends, and for the westerners to take to him.

No incident of the Chicago convention was more greatly enjoyed by the president than one in which one of these western friends played a prominent part. The friend in question was Seth Bullock. He was a delegate to the convention from the northwest, and his tall, sparse frame loomed up on the horizon and emitted shouts for "Teddy" at every opportunity. But even his western ardor did not seem to dispel the frost in the atmosphere, and Bullock determined to demand eastern assistance. His style called for cheers, bands of music and action, and he could not understand why New York the state which claimed "Teddy" as its own, did not awake to the necessity of the occasion. The first day passed without a demonstration such as suited Bullock, and at its close he was disgusted, but determined that another should not pass in the same way. Taking with him that unmistakable air of the west, he walked over to the headquarters of the New York delegation and announced:

"I'm Seth Bullock from Deadwood. I'm for Teddy. I'm from the west. You fellows from New York are frosty—you're good only for icing tea. We've got mosquitoes in the Black Hills that have more blood in them than you fellows. Now you whoop her up tomorrow or I'll make trouble. Get action."

New York woke up the next day.

It takes electoral votes to elect, and the eastern states have the votes, but Roosevelt would rather have the friendship of men like Bullock than of the magnates of Wall street.

The Story of Bullock.

Seth Bullock is well known among the politicians from the northwest who come to Washington. They know that he can get closer to Roosevelt than the majority of men who wear senatorial togas. Henry Barrett Chamberlain, the editor of the Voter, tells his story as follows:

Danced to Bullock's Music.

Bullock was the first sheriff of Helena in the pioneer days and the first sheriff of Deadwood, when the Black Hills contained as picturesque a set of cut-throats as ever existed. Bullock is now the government's forest reserve representative of South Dakota, a man of means and calm.

He has the voice of a woman, the garb of a minister, the silence of a confidential clerk of Morgan or Rockefeller. Yet in the best of his days, when he represented the first law and order introduced to the mining camps of the Hills (where by the way most of the fortune of Mr. Hearst has come from) Bullock as a sheriff put, as I am told, some 25 men out of existence. He kept no notches on his gun nor do I know that he has ever talked of his past duties as a sheriff—but he got action.

I have been told by old residents of Deadwood who remember the days of '76 and '77 that when the citizens' committee called for Bullock to come to Deadwood that he arrived in the garb of a circuit riding minister—no pistols in sight, no display of leather breeches or bespangled sombrero. Wild Bill was at that time in his prime and it is said that Bullock asked him:

"I'd like you to be my chief deputy."

To which Wild Bill replied: "I can't do it, Seth, because I have friends on both sides. I'm neither for nor against you."

That afternoon Sheriff Bullock walked down the narrow way of the old gulch of Deadwood and had his coat and his boots spat upon by indignant stage robbers, gamblers and murderers, who resented his appearance. Still he remained calm. But when he started on his return trip through the gulch where now is a prosperous and law-abiding city they say he slipped his hands back of his clerical coat and began shooting, and when the calm of evening came upon the town there were five desperadoes out of existence. He deliberately hunted them up, told them what the law of Deadwood was to be, asked for their objections, and when these objections came enforced by a six-shooter he began shooting.

The next day, having information of the proposed hold-up of the Deadwood stage at Lone Tree by bandits, he visited the spot and put two or three ambitious freebooters out of existence. After that he was recognized as the sheriff of Deadwood. In a year's time he made the gulch a respector of the law. He killed only when it was necessary to uphold the law, and in all that time they tell me his voice never rose above the tone level of a woman's.

Strenuous Cabinet Officers.

Roosevelt's preference for the men who do things is well illustrated by his choice of new cabinet officers. Paul Morton, the new secretary of the navy, has been "doing things" effectively all the 47 years of his life. In his chosen field he made a success that might well be envied by any man. Without the assistance of prestige he began his railroad career as a clerk in the land office of the B. & M. railroad of the Burlington system at Burlington in 1872. An ability and desire to hustle soon promoted him above his fellows, and he was transferred from the land office to the freight department, where he soon became assistant general freight agent. From that again to the passenger department as general passenger agent of the Burlington system, and ending his career with the Burlington as general freight agent.

Secretary Morton.

In 18 years from his beginning as an unknown clerk in a railroad office he rose to one of the most important official positions on the road, and to places of prominence in other large corporations as well. It was Morton's strenuosity that accomplished these results, and it was his strenuosity that attracted President Roosevelt to him when he was in need of a cabinet officer.

Victor H. Metcalf is another type of the strenuous westerner. Though of eastern birth he has been a resident of California so long that he has become thoroughly assimilated, and carries with him all the breezy hustle that is characteristic of that section.

An Interesting Character.

Many quaint and interesting characters are to be found among the specialists of the government departments; men of unusual ability who have buried themselves in a bureau where they have for years followed without molestation the bent for which they were peculiarly adapted.

Studied Big Geographical Problems.

Adolph Lindenkohl, 71 years of age and a German by birth, though a naturalized citizen of this country since 1854, died recently. He was the senior draughtsman of the coast and geodic survey, and had been connected with that department for 50 years.

He spent much of his leisure time in studying the vast physical problems relating to the earth, devoting himself especially to physical geography, oceanography and deep sea temperatures, densities and currents. Numerous articles upon these subjects were written by him and have been published as appendices to the coast and geodetic survey reports, in Petermann's Mitteilungen and in the American Journal of Science. He was always much interested in geographical exploration and spent a good deal of time in compiling maps from original sources, unofficially.

His ability was rewarded in the coast survey by promotion through all the grades of his profession until he became a recognized authority on chart publication. Being endowed with a remarkable memory for facts and dates, his intimate acquaintance with the chart work of the survey during the 50 years of his service was of very great value in all matters concerning the compilation of charts from the older records, and the numerous drawings compiled and made by him during the last half century are said to bear witness to the skill and fidelity which distinguished his career. During the civil war, from 1862 to '64, he was detailed to serve with the union army as topographer.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

The Official Program.

The official program of the Minnesota state fair of 1904 will be published, as for the past two years, by the board of managers, under the immediate supervision of Secretary E. W. Randall. Each year original designs for the cover have been prepared and the book has been printed with great care and distributed on the grounds under the direction of Mr. Randall. Mr. Randall wishes it stated that no person or persons are authorized to publish any other program or souvenir of the fair. No publication except the official program will be distributed on the grounds. The details of the publication of the official program this year will be handled by Horace B. Hudson, who will be assisted in St. Paul by G. W. Anderson. This year the fair opens August 29 and closes Sept. 3.

Lost in the Woods.

After being lost six days in the dense woods of Erie and living on berries and water and sleeping on the ground, Charlie, the 4-year-old son of Fred and Mrs. Weirauch of Frazee, was found in the woods three miles from his father's home and nine miles from Frazee.

He was almost naked, all his clothing but his shirt was torn off by the underbrush and his body was burned by the sun and torn by the brush.

Mrs. Weirauch left home to pick berries and the boy strayed away. When he could not be found at evening it was feared that he was drowned in the Otter Tail river, where his brother was drowned some years ago.

Detroit and Frazee sent out over 100 men and the Commonwealth Lumber Company sent men and teams, but for five days he could not be found.

Fell to Death.

Frightful Death.

The most appalling accident in the history of the Minneapolis lumber mills occurred at the Itasca mill, when John Knordsik was instantly killed by a circular saw. He was a new hand and had just started to work in the afternoon. He was given charge of the conveyors that carry the wood to the saws and was told not to move from the platform on which he was at work. Forgetfully he stepped onto the conveyor and before he could cry for help was carried with the wood into the saws. His body was cut into eleven pieces and thrown several feet, almost at the feet of the horrified workmen.

Another Great Victory.

Minnesota wins another sweeping victory in the butter scoring contest. Commissioner W. W. P. McConnell received a telegram from St. Louis containing this information.

The highest score made was 98½, and this mark was reached by three Minnesota buttermakers, N. Sivering, Knatvold; W. B. Johnson, Arlington; W. B. Fadden, Pluto.

The next high score was 98, and this was reached by E. P. Greely, of Alden, and J. C. Joslin of Winston.

In the dairy butter department the tub sent by Mrs. M. A. Holmes of Owatonna scored 95, and in the prints the exhibit of the Minnesota Butter and and Cheese company scored 92.

While there has been a good deal of sharpening of political knives since the state convention, it is to be hoped that they will get dull enough before the November election to give Roosevelt the big majority that he deserves from this state.

We find by inquiry in this end of Clearwater county, that E. H. Reff who is a candidate for nomination for clerk of court of his county is a popular candidate among the masses of the people, who have had occasion to do business with him at his office at Bagley, and they will give him their support for re-nomination and election to the position that he filled with credit to himself and the county.

The Northfield News has repudiated the plank in the Republican platform endorseing Gov. Van Sant's fight against the Merger, and the Minneapolis Tribune has repudiated the plank endorseing Senator Clapp for re-election. From the stand point of party loyalty we don't see that such action is a whit better than repudiating a part of the ticke nominated.—Glewood Gopher.

The talk of E.J. Sullivan again becoming a candidate to succeed himself, as sheriff of Polk county does not appear to originate from himself. While there has been no kick on Ed., as an official, yet there is an unwritten law in this county, that two terms of the sheriff's office had ought to satisfy one individual, and he should step back and give some one else a chance, especialy where there is a man in the field that is so justley entitled to this nomination and election as is Louis Gonyea.

We feel pretty safe in saying that Rereprcsentative Simons will be opposed at the primarys on September 20th by no less a person than that good republican and hustling business man, Wiley Tindolph. While this information does not emanate from Mr. Tindolph himself, his friends are useing every available argument to bare to induce such a well qualified man to enter the field. If he does decide to make the run Mr. Tindolph will be enthusiastically indorsed both at home and generally throughout the district, where he is much better known than the average politicin. When it comes to qualifications Mr. Tindolph has everything—tact, ability, honesty, progressiveness and with all a thour knowledge of the needs of this section of Minnesota. Here's hoping he will become a candidate and will be nominated and electeq. —Thief River Press.

We publish the above for the benefit of our subscribers in the 61st district who are interested in drainage and are looking for a Moses to deliver them from any more Simons in the legislature from their district.

A HEAVY LOAD.

The announcement of Swan Torkelson for the nomination of sheriff of Clearwater county will meet with the approvel of a large number of his friends in this end of the county, who did not approve of the high handed method for his removel from office by a few politicians, last winter, and are glad to see Mr. Torkelson give the people an opprotunity to be heard on the question.

BITTER MEMORIES LINGER.

Never did effect follow cause more swiftly, surely and ruinously than did the panic of 1893 follow the Democratic tariff tinkering. Under the McKinley tariff law of 1890 the country had prospered generally and solidly but Mr. Cleveland and the party that elected him were not pleased with such a condition. They wanted to do some tinkering, and they did it with such success, from their own point of view, that the business of the country was paralyzed, the wheels of industry made idle and millions of wageworkers deprived of employment.

That time of panic, of stress and suffering has not been forgotten. Bitter memories of it still linger in the minds of the American people, who knew at the time, as they know today, that the bond issues of 1894-96, of which Mr. Cleveland appears to be so proud, were only an attempt to repair some of the damage wrought by the Democratic "ripping up" of the protective tariff.—Providence News.

J. Q. A. on Reformers.

So much is now being said in connection with the centennial of Cobden's birth of reform that it is profitable to refer to John Quincy Adams' views of reform as written to a reformer of nearly seventy years ago:

"You have pursued reform for its own sake, without making it a trade or profit or honor to yourself. Such reformers have small chance of success. Reform must have its martyrs before it has its cardinals and its princes. With most men reform is a trade, with some a swindling trade, with others an honest but yet a lucrative trade. Reform for its own sake seldom thrives."

And the tariff reformers don't reform for their health.

Ruthless Statistics.

Some one has taken the trouble to figure it out and finds that exports from the United States to foreign countries in four years of Republican administration at Washington exceeded by $2,323,000,000 the exports during the four years of the last Democratic administration. During the Republican years the Dingley tariff, which, according to Democratic and free trade teachings, should discourage and diminish exports, has been in effect, while the Democratic administration had the benefit of the lower duties of the Wilson-Gorman law, with many competitive foreign products on the free list. Advocates of tariff reduction tell us that high duties shut us out from trade with other countries. Unfortunately for them the statistics of our national trade ruthlessly refute their assertions. —Troy Times.

Bryan Confirmed.

Mr. Cleveland's indorsement of Judge Parker confirms Mr. Bryan's belief that the New York jurist is the candidate of the Wall street element in the Democratic party. The Nebraskan's reply to the Cleveland interview is in effect, "I told you so."—Albany Evening Journal.

Don't Forget It.

It must not be forgotten that the Democrats still worship at the free trade shrine and at their first chance would experiment again with their old fetich of a "tariff for revenue only."—Boston Advertiser.

THE TARIFF NATIONAL.

It Cannot Be Tinkered For Particular Sections.

New England business men are clamoring for reciprocity with Canada, because they think it would be cheaper to bring certain commodities across the border than to import them from more remote sections of our own country. But how would those sections of our own country view it? It may be for our selfish advantage to have cheaper coal and iron and lumber, but how about Pennsylvania and Alabama and Ohio and Michigan? In turn, it might be advantageous to them to import cotton goods from some other country, but should we in Fall River stand for a reduction in the tariff on manufactured cotton fabrics?

If the tariff is to be tinkered with for the benefit of this or that particular section of the country, it might be just as logical to do so for individual states and towns. The resultant hodgepodge of tariff legislation, however, can be better imagined than depicted. So long as tariffs are to be negotiated as national questions the many must give way in the interests of the few. If the iron and coal industry of Pennsylvania is worth protecting by national legislation, New England must defer her selfish desires for the benefit of Pennsylvania. If the cotton industry is to have the benefit of discriminating duties, other sections must yield for us. It is one of the striking instances of either the beauties of co-operation or the weaknesses of a system which makes the many suffer for the benefit of the few, just as you look at it.

And yet it is a necessary part of our system. If we adopted any system which provided for legislation of one kind for one state and of another for another state it would be but a short time when the very foundations of the government would be imperiled. If the nation is to stand a unit its commercial restrictions and regulations must be national. Any attempt at revision must rest on the most careful investigations as to the relative maximum of good to be derived and the minimum of hardship to result. To successfully keep the tariff constantly adjusted to changing conditions would entail constant study by the wisest of commissions. When the Democratic party can scarcely hold together its own factions, divided on the pettiest issues, we don't believe it is in any position, even remotely, to grapple with so complex a problem as tariff schedules.—Fall River Herald.

THE TARIFF NECESSARY.

Foreigners Are Overtaking Us In Methods of Production.

Free traders cannot deny that wages are much higher in this country than in Europe, but they seek to make it appear that an American workman can do so much more than an Englishman or German that a protective tariff is not needed. As a considerable share of the workmen in this country are foreigners or foreign born that assertion is clearly wrong.

The advantage which American workmen are supposed to possess in labor saving devices is passing away. If it has not passed already, in many industries. The exportation of labor saving machinery has long been a marked feature of the exports, and this machinery is extensively copied in Europe. With similar labor saving devices and longer hours, European workmen can meet American competition in almost any industry. That is why free trade would necessarily mean a reduction in wages to the European standard.

Quite Serious.

The Republican managers should lose no time in denying Governor Vardaman's assertion that President Roosevelt is a boll weevil. If the statement is allowed to go unrefuted the electoral vote of Mississippi may soon be hopelessly lost.—Kansas City Journal.

Easily Understood.

One has only to recall the state of American industry the last time the people gave the tariff rippers a chance and its condition ever since the rippers were driven out of power in disgrace to understand what tariff ripping really is in practice.—Buffalo News.

Franklin Roland of Meadows was doing business here on Friday last and while his team were eating their dinner took occasion to explain some of the causes of the ill feeling, that the people of this end of Clearwater connty have for Bagley. In the first place, says Mr.Roland "they do't take any interest in trying to give us any assistance to get a passlable road to our county seat north from Leon,and we are now accostomed to calling that the jumpping off place.We of course attach a share of the blame for this to county Commissioner Johnson of Leon, but until the people of Bagley show a disposition to show us that they want to do business with us and assist us to get a road to them we shall continue in the future, as in the past to do our business at McIntosh and Fosston". The north western part of Clearwater county is the best bart of the county and will be to Bagley what eastern Polk has been to Crookston.

Druggists Who Sell Dr. Miles' Nervine Agree, If It Fails, To Refund Cost.

Of course we reimburse the druggist. You know him, and trust him.

It is a novel theory—not of anatomy, but of treatment; first discovered by Dr. Miles, and since made use of by many wide-awake physicians, who appreciate its value in treating the sick.

If you are sick, we offer you a way to be made well—Dr. Miles' Nervine.

This medicine is a scientific cure for nerve disorders, such as Neuralgia; Headache, Loss of Memory, Sleeplessness, Spasms, Backache, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy or Fits, Nervous Prostration, etc.

By toning up the nerves, Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine will also cure those diseases of the internal organs due to a disordered nervous system.

"My brother had nervous prostration, and was not expected to live. I prevailed upon him to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and now he has fully recovered. You remember, I wrote you how it saved my life a few years ago, when I had nervous trouble. I preach its merits to everyone."—REV. M. D. MYERS, Correctionville, Iowa.

Proved Beyond a Douht.

Middlesex, N. Y., July 25.—(Special)—That Rheumatism can be cured has been proved beyond a doubt by Mrs. Betsey A. Clawson, well known here. That Mrs. Clawsoo had Rheumatism end had it had all her acquaintances know. They also know she is now cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it. Mrs. Clawson tells the story of her cure as follows:

"I was an invalid for most five years caused by Inflammatory Rheumatism, helpless two-thirds of the time. The first year I could not do as much as a baby could do; then I rallied a little bit and then a relapse. Then a year ago the gout set in my hands and feet. I suffered untold agony and in August, 1903, when my husband died I could not ride to tha grave.

"I only took two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and in two weeks I could wait on myself and saw my own wood. I dug my own potatoes and gathered my own garden last fall. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills put tha Kidneys in shape to take all the uric acid out of the blood.

Miss Nellie Holmes, treasurer of the Young Woman's Temperance Association of Buffalo, N.Y., strongly advises all suffering women to rely, as she did, upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your medicine is indeed an ideal woman's medicine, and by far the best I know to restore lost health and strength. I suffered misery for several years, being troubled with menorrhagia. My back ached. I had bearing-down pains and frequent headaches. I would often wake from restful sleep, and in such pain that I suffered for hours before I could go to sleep again. I dreaded the long nights as much as the weary days. I consulted two different physicians, hoping to get relief, but finding that their medicine did not seem to cure me, I tried your Vegetable Compound on the recommendation of a friend from the East who was visiting me.

"I am glad that I followed her advice, for every ache and pain is gone, and not only this, but my general health is much improved. I have a fine appetite and have gained in flesh. My earnest advice to suffering women is to put aside all other medicines and to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS NELLIE HOLMES, 540 No. Division St., Buffalo, N.Y.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

BELLE MANIATES

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

TALL and admirably proportioned, with a most distinguished air, modest in bearing, straightforward in manner and frank of countenance and possessed of a captivating personality, Philip Hathcourt was well equipped to win favor in the eyes of women. But Leigh Cornell, the one woman to whom his heart inclined, was still fancy free.

Though they were the best of friends he shrewdly divined that he would be forcing an issue if he told her of his love.

"I hear you are going to sing a solo at St. Luke's next Sunday," he said, as they sat in the box at the theater one night.

Yes; I am to sing 'Angels Ever Bright and Fair.'"

"I shall come to hear you. By the way, we shall have a guest at that time—a friend of my younger brother. He is quite music mad, I believe."

"Who is he?" she asked, carelessly.

"An Englishman—though he spent his boyhood in America. His name is Reginald Derybshire."

"Oh!" she cried, her eyes full of interest. "Did he live here in this city years ago, and did he fall heir to a title and estates in England?"

"Yes," he replied. "Did you know him?"

"When we were children we sang in a a vested choir. We were given the duets, more because I was so fair and he so dark then from any blending of voices. They thought we made a tableau, I suppose. It was like a romance, his becoming Lord Somebody and crossing the seas to his estates, and I! Well, my lines were cast in far different places."

Sunday morning found him in the Hathcourt pew, his brother and their guest, Reginald Derbyshire, also present.

Young Derbyshire had gone to England full of American ideas and with a stolid determination not to become "English," but it was only natural that an impressionable boy should insensibly and by degrees receive the imprint of English sentiments. Gradually he became molded in the character of the country which had been his birthplace, and at last England claimed him for her own. Soon after attaining his majority he again visited his old home. He had an eager interest in everything pertaining to his old life and hunted up his former friends with enthusiasm. He had ever cherished most tender recollections of the little pansy-eyed girl who had sung and played with him. It was of her, in fact, he was now thinking as he appeared to listen to the sermon.

He had scarcely glanced at the members of the vested choir until now, when the organ pealed forth at the close of the sermon, a young girl rose and faced the congregation. She looked as tender and pure as an archangel in her white robes, with eyes uplifted to the oaken rafters of the little chapel.

"One of Raphael's Sistine Cherubs!" thought Reginald.

At the rising cadence of the song and the exquisite play of the silvery timber of her voice his memory awoke.

"Leigh!" he gasped, as the old, familiar air and words rang out. How they took him back to the Sundays of his boyhood!

"And I taught her that song!" was his triumphant thought.

She finished. There was a momentary silence like that solemn pause which follows a benediction. Then, with a tremor in his low, gentle voice, the old pastor offered a heartfelt prayer. Outside the church Reginald waited for her. When she came he rushed forward with impetuous and outstretched hand.

"Leigh!" he cried, eagerly.

A bright, glorious flush rose to her cheeks and a happy light shone in her eyes as she grasped his hand, while Philip, standing by, felt like kicking this newcomer to the ends of the earth.

"I knew you as soon as you began to sing—our old song!" he exclaimed.

She wondered, with a sudden divining, of the reason that Philip had not told him of her. Reginald accompanied her to her home and they talked of other days—the days when she had sung in the choir and the unhappy days that had followed, when her father had died so suddenly, and to support her invalid mother the little Leigh had sung in dance halls and on pleasure boats. At her mother's death, just before he had come into his possessions, she had been adopted by some wealthy people.

"There have been changes indeed in your life since the day I taught you the song you sang to-day," he observed.

"No greater changes than came into your life, my lord," she retorted.

Early in June they were invited to a house party at Roselawn, the country home of the Hathcourts. One afternoon, as Reginald sat beside Leigh on the piano bench watching the slender fingers that glided so softly over the keys, he was struck by a new expression in her eyes. The dazzling brightness of her face had given way to a strange, sweet quiet. Hitherto he had regarded her as a gay little playmate. It occurred to him now that she was a woman.

"Leigh!" he half whispered, "do you remember that when we were children I was your little lover?"

She looked at him with startled eyes. Something in his tone and eyes warned her whither his thoughts were turning. He noted her changing color and pulled himself together. It was not right to flirt with this girl! He was about to turn the conversation into safer channels when, with some hurried excuse, she rose and left the room.

While he was reflecting on girls in general and Leigh in particular Mrs. Wendell, one of the very few who knew Leigh's history, entered.

"You look as conscious, Reggy, as Leigh did just now. It would be a pretty romance if your boyish attachment for Leigh should end in your carrying her to your ancestral halls!"

"Oh, Mrs. Wendell, you know that as loveble as Leigh is, a fellow in my position couldn't overlook the days she was nothing less than a street singer. It wouldn't do in England, you know!"

Leigh, returning to the music room, heard the speech. Her eyes, usually so bright and tender, flashed with spirit as she quietly and unobserved left the room.

There was a grand ball at Roselawn that night and Reginald was one of the first to enter the ball room. Mrs. Wendell hurried to him.

"Oh, Reginald, I've something awful to tell you! Leigh overheard what you said about her having been a street singer. She just told me she heard you!"

He gave a cry of dismay.

"No, not really, Mrs. Wendell! That is awful! Believe me, I shall make amends. I shall ask her to marry me."

Just then a beautiful vision swept past him. Could this figure so slender and stately in trailing gown be that of little Leigh? As she passed through the long room at the side of her adopted father Philip Hathcourt did not remove his eyes from her.

"Leigh," he murmured, as they stood apart for a moment, "may I have the first dance?"

She turned slightly pale, hearing the intensity of his voice, but quietly gave him the promise of the dance. Then Reginald came hurrying toward them.

"Leigh, you were so late in coming!" he cried. "May I tell you how gloriously beautiful you are to-night?"

"You are too late! I have promised it to Philip."

The first dance ended Reginald hastened to claim her for the next one. It had semed to him that his code of honor demanded by way of apology nothing short of a proposal. But to-night her heightened beauty and the intoxicating delight he felt when dancing with her made him forget any motive but love. His wooing was audacious, passionate and importunate. Her refusal, calm, undaunted and unalterable.

"I don't understand such inconsistency, Reginald," she replied. "To-day you were proclaiming that you could not marry a street singer!"

"Spare me, Leigh!" he pleaded. "I didn't love you then. You are prejudiced now by reason of that unfortunate and careless remark. Take time, and let your heart soften towards me."

She laughed tantalizingly.

"I don't love you, Reginald! And I never will."

"You did, or were on the verge of it," he protested.

"When?"

"This afternoon before you left the music room so suddenly. I saw it in your eyes."

"You may have seen love there," she said, slowly, "but not for you."

A quick passion seized him.

"I know for whom! Someone whose feeling for you isn't equal to mine—someone who will not—"

"Stop!" she commanded. "My answer is final. Take me back to the ball room."

She was experiencing a slight exultation in the realization of the power a woman can wield over man. This feeling made her eyes more luminous and her face more radiant. They passed Philip in the doorway of the pavilion. He drew back out of view, all the wounds in his heart beginning to ache at the sight of the proud, happy bearing of the girl, whose countenance was glowing and flashing with excitement. He came up to her quickly.

"Will you dance this with me?"

"Certainly," she replied.

"I don't want to dance now," he said, when Reginald had withdrawn. "Let us go to the house, but not to the ball room."

They went into a deserted room, dimly lighted by candles, to a deep window embrasure which looked out on the garden at the back of the house. The moon flying swiftly through great, floating masses of clouds sent a silvery beam upon the gold of her shining hair. Her eyes were full of depth and color.

A little French clock chimed out 12 strokes.

"This is the noon of night," said Leigh, trying to speak lightly.

"Leigh, I have no right to ask—but, did Reginald propose to you to-night?"

"I have no right to tell, perhaps, but I will. He did."

"And you accepted him?" he asked, tensely.

"No, I refused him."

His arms were about her. "Then, Leigh, let me tell you, I—"

"Wait!" she cried.

Her voice was sharp and strained. She drew away from him.

"I want to tell you something—something about my early life. You do not know that when I was a little girl—"

"You sang on the boats and in dance halls," he interrupted, "to support your sick mother. I heard it before I met you. I think it was that which first made me love you!"

She turned soft, wet eyes to his.

"Oh," she said, with a little gasp of joy. "And to think all this time I've been dreading to tell you!"

NOTES ON NATIONALITIES.

Tame snakes are used in Morocco to clear houses of rats and mice.

Russia has the most rapidly increasing population of any country in Europe.

Dogs in Hamburg are taxed according to size. The bigger the dog, the higher the tax.

The language of the republic of Hayti is French, while the language of the republic of Santo Domingo, on the island of Hayti, is Spanish.

The average age of the Japanese navy is lower than that of any other navy of the world. No one over 20 years old is accepted for enlistment. The average height is five feet four inches—less than the average height of any other navy in the world.

A German society has lately published an interesting paper on the subject of ecclesiastical anathemas launched in the middle ages against animals. Among the maledictions cited is that of a pastor of Dresden, who in 1559 cursed the sparrows for distracting his congregation.

Canada's Attractions.

The Dominion Exhibition is one that attracts hundreds of thousands each year. This year it will be held in Winnipeg, Manitoba (Canada), and with the material assistance given it by the Dominion Government, it will be one of the most successful ever held. Besides the number of special attractions that will be offered, there will be brought together an exhibit of the Agricultural and Industrial resources of Canada such as is rarely attempted by any country. Visitors will be there in large numbers from the United States, owing to the low rates offered by railways, connecting with the Canadian roads. It is expected that Hon. Clifford Sefton, Minister of the Interior, will be there on the opening day to declare the exhibition open. A splendid opportunity will be afforded by this exhibition to meet friends. Hotel accommodations will be quite ample.

Frederick Cogswell, of Cambridge, Mass., who has just resigned as a superintendent of schools, was an instructor for fifty years.

John O. Heald, of Orange, N. J., offered $100 for the best Yale song, but none received come up to his expectations.

A Beautiful Young Society Woman's Letter.

ST. PAUL, MINN.
531 Wabasho St.

Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.,
Dear Sir:

"I took Peruna last summer when I was all run down, and had a headache and backache, and no ambition for anything. I now feel as well as I ever did in all my life, and all thanks is due to your excellent Peruna."---Bess F. Healy.

The symptoms of summer catarrh are quite unlike in different cases, but the most common ones are general lassitude, played-out, tired-out, used-up, run-down feelings, combined with more or less heavy, stupid, listless, mental condition. Relish for food and the ability to digest food seems to be lost.

Skin eruptions, sallow complexion, biliousness, coated tongue, fitful, irregular sleep, help to complete the picture which is so common ot this season.

Peruna so exactly meets all these conditions that the demand is so great for this remedy at this season of the year that it is nearly impossible to supply it.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring the drug habit.

Thousands of women suffer from pelvic catarrh and catarrhal nervousness and don't know it. If you feel fagged out, begin at once taking Dr. Hartman's Peruna. It will relieve your catarrhal affliction and all your organs will be restored to health. Buy a bottle to-day, as it will immediately alleviate your case.

WASHINGTON LETTER

SUMMER-DAY GOSSIP OF THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

EX-SENATOR HENRY G. DAVIS

Senator Davis.

Washington.—Of all the men who have places on the national tickets none is better known or better liked locally in Washington than former Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia. Senator Davis for many years has been a familiar figure in the streets of the capital and about the hotels. From his home in West Virginia Washington is the most convenient city of any size and hardly a week passes, winter or summer, without finding him here. His relationship to Senator Gorman and Senator Elkins and his business connections with John R. McLean and other district millionaires have brought him here even more often than would otherwise be the case. Seen in the company of any of these men he does not seem to be their senior, although there is no one of them to whom he cannot show a score of years in retrospect. He has the sturdy form and the springy step of a youngster of 60, and there is not a sign that can be observed of the encroachments of extreme age. An early life on the farm and hard work on the railroad undoubtedly have had much to do with this, and an abstemious life has had more.

With all his millions—and Senator Davis is credited with a fortune ranging all the way from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 according to the imagination of the chronicler—he has never yet been known to indulge in extravagances of any kind. His tastes are as simple as those of Russell Sage. When he was in the senate and had rooms at the Arlington hotel the members of his family used to make their own dresses and a sewing machine was constantly running in their modest apartments.

Congressional Campaign Open.

The Old Method of Collection.

The republican and democratic congressional committees are both hard at work here with headquarters established for the sending out of documents during the campaign.

For campaign purposes the congressional committees are chiefly document bureaus and have been ever since they first began to take an active part in electioneering.

Away back in the seventies and the early eighties they had in addition the task of collecting funds from the unfortunate government employes who were expected to contribute a certain percentage of their salaries to the campaign fund of the party which happened to be in power.

Jay Hubbell, of Michigan, became notorious during the campaign of 1880 by his demands upon the government clerks and by the systematic persistence with which he brought them up to the captain's office to settle. Hubbell worked in harmony with the national committee, but he was chairman of the congressional committee and really achieved a reputation which he did not fully deserve.

That was before the days of the civil service regulations, which made the solicitation of campaign funds from government employes unlawful. It has been a good many years since there has been any suggestion of a scandal of the kind. A great many government officials contribute to the campaign funds of their party and their contributions are always welcome, but such a thing as solicitation is no longer known.

Mortons Republican Friends.

Paul Morton.

Washington is well pleased with the acquisitions to the cabinet which have been made within the last month. Both Secretary Morton and Secretary Metcalf promise to be among the most popular officials in the administration circle.

Paul Morton finds a great many friends in Washington whom he used to know well at the time his father was a member of the cabinet of Grover Cleveland. Curiously enough a number of these have followed his own example and have transferred their allegiance from the democratic to the republican party.

One of the first men whom Morton met when he reached Washington was his father's old private secretary in the agricultural department. The young man is no longer in the government service, but is one of the most successful business men in the District of Columbia. Of course Morton was glad to see him and after the first greeting the talk drifted to politics. Pretty soon the former private secretary began to make complimentary remarks about the president. "I didn't know you had changed your politics," remarked the new secretary of the navy. "When did that happen?" "Oh, no, I haven't changed at all," was the reply. "I used to be a J. Sterling Morton democrat. Now I am a Paul Morton republican. It's all in the family."

Morton is going to take a house out on Massachusetts avenue just beyond the splendid mansions of Thomas F. Walsh and Larz Anderson, but a very modest establishment compared with those places and he is counted on to do a good deal of entertaining next winter.

The Third from California.

Victor Metcalf.

Victor Metcalf, the new chief of the department of commerce and labor, is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the establishment over which he presides. "It is bound to develop," he says, "into the most efficient and the most important department of the government. It touches almost every line of activity in the United States—the corporations, the laboring men, the miners, the manufacturers. Then it covers the question of immigration, which is bound to be one of the most vital and insistent questions before the American people for a great many years to come—to say nothing of the lighthouses, the coast and geodetic survey, the steamboat inspection service and the bureau of statistics. There is not one of these bureaus which is not destined to expand greatly, with the additional attention which they will all receive from being placed under the jurisdiction of a new department. I had rather be at the head of this department than of any other department in the government."

Metcalf is the third man to be chosen for a place in the cabinet from the Pacific slope since the admission of California. The first was George H. Williams, of Oregon, whom Grant made attorney general and tried to make him chief justice of the United States, but whom the senate refused to confirm as chief justice. Williams was commonly known as Landaulet Williams on account of the handsomely upholstered landaulet in which Mrs. Williams used to drive about Washington to the envy of less fortunate women. After his retirement no Pacific coast man held a place in the cabinet until McKinley appointed as attorney general Judge McKenna, who served on the ways and means committee with him in the house and who, curiously enough, represented the same district in congress afterwards represented by Mr. Metcalf. McKenna is now a justice of the supreme court.

The Public Printing.

The Waste of the Printing Office.

The subject of economy in printing is one that is bound to come before congress before long in such a way that it will have to be settled. President Roosevelt at the last session of congress brought the matter sharply before the legislative leaders and he also called the various executive departments up with a round turn requesting that steps be taken to diminish the constant stream of publications that is constantly flowing from the government printing presses.

The printing bills of the United States are something out of all reason. Documents are turned out by the ton on all sorts of subjects and on every conceivable excuse. To say that three-fourths of this stuff was ever read by anybody would not be perhaps an extravagant estimate. Of course every document is read by somebody, but there are not many that are read by any except a very few. Tons upon tons of printed matter are stowed away or thrown away year after year without having been of the slightest benefit to anybody.

It is proposed now in some of the departments to put a nominal price on all publications issued so that whenever a document is sent out it will be sure to reach somebody who cares at least enough about it to pay something. Such a policy would not make the document business self-supporting, for the price fixed would be simply nominal, but it would surely tend to lessen the volume of printed material.

Albert Anderson of Olberg who publishes his announcement as a candidate for clerk of court of Clearwater county has published the Oldbug Journal for the past two years, in the town of L. p. and has won many friends in that locality, who have urged him to become a candidate for clerk of court of his county, a position he is well qualified for.

Now that the republican campaign for the nomination for governor of Minnesota is over it looks like poor politics on the part of those who won to be walking around with a chip on their shoulder. It seems to us that it is not at all necessary for R.C.Dunn to make any personal attacts on the newspapers who did not support him for the nomination.

LOW EXPORT PRICES

THEY MAKE IT POSSIBLE TO EMPLOY LABOR AND PAY WAGES.

Enable Manufacturers to Dispose of Surplus Product—Cessation of Export Would Raise Prices in the Home Markets.

It is alleged, and with truth, that American manufactures are sold abroad at a lower price than at home in several instances. This is supposed to prove that they do not need protection, as they can compete with the foreigner on his own ground. The inference is plausible, but mistaken. Every establishment which is doing business on a great scale has the facility for producing an excess of goods which it could sell at a lower price than it must ask for its product as a whole.

Just as railroads can carry certain kinds of freight at a figure which they could not accept for all kinds, so the makers of many classes of goods can find a profit in an extra production for export at a price which would be ruinous if they sold all their product at the same figure. In producing this excess they leave out of account the standing charges of their establishment and count only the cost of labor and materials and the wear of machinery.

They would ruin their market if they sold this surplus at home, but not if they sent it abroad, and so they export it. A friend of mine was buying blankets for the Indians on behalf of the government, and he was surprised to find the manufacturers offering them at prices far below what they always had asked of him. He asked why the difference and was told that what the government bought was taken right out of the market, but they could not afford to give the same prices to any one who was in the market.

Unless these export prices are resorted to our manufacturers cannot export on the scale they now do. They cannot employ and pay labor as they now do. And if they cease to export on these terms nobody in this country will be a pin the better, as prices will not be lower for what is sold at home, but probably higher.

The free trader suggests that with the repeal of protection this abuse would cease. So it would, along with our manufacturing generally. We should have "thrown out the baby with the bath," as the Germans say. Very soon we should see foreign manufacturers producing for this country, where their goods would be sold cheaper than at home, in order to get rid of our competition, as they did under the tariffs of 1816, 1835, 1846, 1857 and 1893.—Robert Ellis Thompson in Freeman's Journal.

Absolute Proof.

"Do you consider Whiffles an honest man, Keene?"

"I know for certain that he contributes regularly to the conscience fund of the treasury department."

Don't judge a man by his failures in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.

EUROPEAN TRIPS.

Some Points For the Traveler Who Would Be Economical.

The apparent cheapness of cab fares in Europe will at first lead one into unnecessary extravagance, which can be avoided. In every large city and many smaller ones little handbooks of the tramway lines can be had, and the cars are so plainly marked that the intelligent traveler soon learns to use them. You do not really know a city or its people until you have studied both at close range in the street cars; you are too far away from them in a cab.

Museums, galleries and palaces are always open one day at least in each week free of charge. To arrange for a visit on this day will save quite a tidy little sum in entrance fees when the expenses are counted up at last.

To sum up, $2 a day is a liberal allowance for living expenses, for they will not rise to this sum in cities where a long sojourn is made, and so the greater cost of short stands will be equalized to this one average. Almost all European countries offer special cut railway rates for a number of tours during the summer months. Information as to this is obtainable in the bureau of information in every city railway station, where officials speaking English can always be found. These round trip tickets cover about everything to be seen in the country in question, and international routes can also be covered by their help at a cost less than that offered by the tourist agencies. Steamer travel is cheaper than rail, but the great time demanded makes the question of meals a serious one, as there is no helping yourself out with a sandwich bought at a station.

To be able to avail oneself of all these possibilities for saving money and really getting the most out of one's trip a good guidebook is absolutely necessary.—Pilgrim.

MEALS AND EMOTIONS.

An Odd Difference That Exists Between Men and Women.

I cannot understand the difference between men and women about eating. It is such a radical difference and there doesn't seem to be any reason for it. It gave rise to the old saw, "The way of a man's heart is to his stomach," and many maidens have profited thereby—if gaining a permanent position as cook is to be regarded as profit.

I have seen men at the time of a great crisis, when their faces were white with emotion, when a life, or a fortune, or a name—or a woman was hanging in the balance, answer a dinner call with alacrity, and eat, eat heartily. I have seen a chafing dish tempt a man from an important business engagement, and a cup of tea even make him sacrifice a train. The man who comes home a nervous wreck, cross, irritable, taciturn, after a meal to his liking is a creature to conjure with, so great is the change wrought. It is an established fact that criminals eat well when awaiting trial and even execution. Men in destitute circumstances will sacrifice everything for the sake of three hearty meals a day, where with women clothing, or, in rarer instances, reading matter, is a first consideration.

Men in distress go and eat—and feel better; if women attempt it they feel worse. The very thought of food repels them, it chokes them, and actually does them more harm than good. To eat in a time of grief seems to them sacrilege. They cry out against the necessity after days of fasting and yield only by degrees. Women cannot suffer and eat at the same time. Men can. And that is the difference I cannot understand.—Brown Book.

Smoking In Berlin Streets.

Before May 23, 1832, no smoking was allowed in the streets or parks of Berlin, and offenders were punished by a fine for the first infraction of the rule and by imprisonment afterward. The king of Prussia in those days detested smoking and the police and the military men were under strict orders to arrest any one who dared to smoke in public. It is recorded that when Napoleon occupied Berlin a hundred years ago the Berliners eagerly took advantage of the opportunity to smoke, and took a special delight in puffing smoke in the faces of the police, who had then no power to arrest them. In 1832, however, the restriction was withdrawn, and since then the people have celebrated the anniversary with great joy.

Extinguisher.

"I followed good advice about returnin' good for evil," said Mr. Rafferty. "Casey has done me some bad turns, but he wanted a favor, an' I heaped coals iv fire on him."

"Coals iv fire, is it?" said Mr. Dolan. "Well, there's no great danger. As he cem past the house awhile ago yer wife, be way iv neighborly repartee, tossed a bucket iv wather on 'im, so the chance of his burnin' alive is over."—St. Louis Republic.

A Knowing Dog.

Traveler—Here, landlord; what's the matter with your dog? I've driven him away a score of times, but he always comes back again and sits close up to my armchair watching every mouthful I take. Do turn him out and let me have my dinner in peace. Landlord—Please, sir, my Carlo is such a knowing brute. I expect you have got the plate he generally eats off.

Considerate.

"Why don't you take me with you sometimes of evenings, dear? I get so tired of staying at home alone."

"Because I can't afford to dress you as well as myself. I don't want to be seen around with a woman dressed as you are."

A BEAT THAT FAILED.

HOW THE PLANS OF AN ENTERPRISING EDITOR WERE UPSET.

The Climax to the Great Dobbins-Domino Match Race as It Developed In the Office of One of the Metropolitan Afternoon Dailies.

"I never read of a close finish in a big running race nowadays that I'm not reminded of a famous punctured scoop in which I figured when I was working in a New York newspaper office," said an old time telegrapher who is now employed in Washington.

"It was back in the days when the great Domino was the star colt of the Keene stable and, with one exception, was acknowledged as the greatest two-year-old of the season.

"The exception was Richard Croker's Dobbins. These two youngsters finally met in the Futurity, and, although the Keene colt won, with Dobbins third, the latter's owner was not satisfied with the result, and a match was speedily arranged at the Futurity distance for $10,000 a side.

"Now, the paper I worked on was an evening sheet, and it was the ambition of the managing editor's life to beat the opposition evening paper and get the news of a big event like this on the street first.

"The other fellows had beaten us on the Futurity story a few days before, and the managing editor made no secret of the fact that he was going to get even.

"Accordingly he laid all of his plans a day ahead, and, although we did not know at the time what they were, we felt sure by the way he strutted around on the morning of the race that he had the winning combination up his sleeve.

"Along about noontime of that day the editor, the most nervous man I ever met, called me into his office and told me that, as the match race was the fifth event on the card, he wanted me to have one of the other operators take the result of the fourth race, and he also wanted me to get a wire in good working order and prepare to get the result of the fifth race.

"The scheme was to have two presses set and all ready to start. One of them was to have the big front page headline read 'Dobbins Wins the Big Match,' and the other just the same, except that Domino's name appeared in the place of Dobbins'. The Dobbins extra was on press No. 1 and the Domino extra on press No. 2. Whichever horse won, the managing editor was to call out No. 1 or No. 2, and the press would be started in quicker time than it takes to tell of the arrangement.

"I couldn't help but inwardly smile as I watched the managing editor striding nervously about, waiting for the start, just like a man who had thousands of dollars wagered on the chance of one of the racers.

"Suddenly the key of my instrument began to click, and he quickly stopped and looked anxiously at me, but it proved to be only the operator at the other end testing. Learning this, he resumed his walk up and down the room.

"Presently the key began to click again. This time the horses were on their way to the post. The next I got from the other end was that the horses were at the post and would be off in a minute. This information, instead of steadying the managing editor, only increased his jumpiness, for he ordered the men who were standing around to cease their talking and also called downstairs half a dozen times to know if everything was ready below in the press room.

"In the midst of this the key again began to work, and I called out that they were off.

"The clicks of the instrument that followed now told me that they were moving along, nose and nose, at the quarter. At the half mile Domino was in the lead by a nose, and as I announced this I was watching the managing editor, and I could see his lips framing the words 'No. 2,' which was the Domino press.

"Dobbins just managed to shove his nose in front at the three-quarters and the boss moved nearer the speaking tube as I made this announcement. Coming into the stretch the two game colts were head and head, and the managing editor, with the mouthpiece of the speaking tube pressed tightly against his lips, was waiting for the result.

"Well, the result came along in good season. But never so long as I live shall I forget the expression on that editor's face when the key told me that the match race was a dead heat. I hesitated just a second before calling it out, for I could almost picture in my mind what effect it would have on him. Finally I called out in as firm a voice as I could, 'Dead heat!'

"Well, that editor's knees just gave way from under him. If he had not grabbed a chair I am positive he would have fallen to the floor.

"'Dead heat?' he gasped, with a livid face. 'Are you sure?'

"I told him that it had been repeated to me and that there could be no mistake. He was too dumfounded to move for two or three seconds, but when he saw all of the men who were about to jump to their places ready to throw together a new scare head, while others hustled around to find the stereotypers who almost to a man had gone out of the building, he came to in a jiffy and was the same old hustler.

"Everybody took hold and worked harder probably than he ever worked before or since, and although we didn't beat the opposition paper, as we were so certain of doing, we were on the street only a minute or so behind it. We afterward learned that they had made exactly the same arrangements to beat us and had been fooled in precisely the same way."—Washington Star.

When Tea Was New.

"I sent for a cup of tea, a Chinese drink, of which I had never drunk," wrote the immortal Pepys, who felt in duty bound to sample every new thing that came along. And about the same time another Englishman was extolling the new impurtation in the following terms: "It easeth the brain of heavy damps. Prevents the dropsie. Consumes Rawnesse. Vanquishes superfluous sleep. Purifieth humors and hot liver. Strengthens the use of due benevolence."

A NATURAL WONDER.

Ringing Rocks That Sound Like a Bell When Struck.

With all manner of legends clustering around their history and various reasons given by geologists for their presence, the Ringing rocks, two miles north of Pottstown, Pa., are the greatest natural wonders of Montgomery county. Although these rocks and bowlders are scattered over a large extent of territory, there is one place, covering over two acres, where they lie so closely together as to suggest that that particular spot was the center of a volcanic disturbance that rent the earth and piled the rocks as they are today. It is the general opinion that the spot was once the crater of a volcano.

A rich, bell-like tone, produced by striking some of the stones with a hammer, explains in part why the name of "Ringing rocks" was given them. Visitors carried off some of the smaller stones of unusual musical quality, but this practice has been stopped.

Located some distance away from the main deposit of rocks are grotesque formations like the Haystack rock, looking like a petrified haystack, but rent from top to bottom by a convulsion of nature which probably also made it a "leaning tower." In the Bullfrog rock a company of soldiers could stand, the Umbrella rock could shelter twenty or thirty, and the Stone House and Cave, rising thirty feet in height and covering half an acre of ground, suggests some of the wonders of the Yosemite.

A cave under the rocks was penetrated several years ago by Dr. W. B. Shaner and J. S. Bair, who upon throwing a stone into an opening could hear it reverberating for a great distance and then fall into a body of water. This is surrounded by many legends. One is that robbers made it their rendezvous and into it carried all their plunder, defying pursuers to follow. Because of the danger of accidents to venturesome boys the entrance to the cave has been closed.—New York Telegram.

Druggists Who Sell Dr. Miles' Nervine Agree, If It Fails, To Refund Cost.

Of course we reimburse the druggist. You know him, and trust him.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is medicine for your nerves.

It is a novel theory—not of anatomy, but of treatment; first discovered by Dr. Miles, and since made use of by many wide-awake physicians, who appreciate its value in treating the sick.

If you are sick, we offer you a way to be made well—Dr. Miles' Nervine.

This medicine is a scientific cure for nerve disorders, such as Neuralgia, Headache, Loss of Memory, Sleeplessness, Spasms, Backache, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy or Fits, Nervous Prostration, etc.

By toning up the nerves, Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine will also cure those diseases of the internal organs due to a disordered nervous system.

"My brother had nervous prostration, and was not expected to live. I prevailed upon him to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine; and now he has fully recovered. You remember I wrote you how it saved my life a few years ago, when I had nervous trouble. I preach its merits to everyone."—REV. M. D. MYERS, Correctionville, Iowa.

THE CIPHER WAS TOO MUCH

Telegraph Operator Thought the Message Was Too Much Twisted to Save.

While Secretary Hay was in the country one summer, an important piece of official business was pending, and he arranged with Washington that any news that might arrive about the matter should be telegraphed to him in cipher.

Day after day he waited, says the New York Tribune, but no telegram came. One morning, happening to go to the lonely little telegraph office, he said to the operator:

"I suppose you have received no dispatch for me?"

"Why, yes, sir," the operator replied, "there was a dispatch for you the other day, but it was all twisted and confused. I couldn't make head or tail of it, so I didn't think it was any use to send it up to you."

Arriving at a Verdict.

Kushequa, Pa., Aug. 1.—(Special)—In this section of Pennsylvania there is a growing belief that for such Kidney Diseases as Rheumatism and Lame Back there is only one sure cure, and that is Dodd's Kidney Pills. This belief grows from such cases as that of Mrs. M. L. Davison, of this place. She tells the story herself as follows:—

"I have suffered from Rheumatism for thirty years and find that Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. I was also bothered with Lame Back, and I can only say that my back hasn't bothered me since I took Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Considering that Mrs. Davison only took two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the result would be considered wonderful if it were not that others are reporting similar results daily. Kushequa is fast arriving at a verdict that "Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure for Rheumatism."

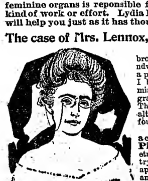
Women who work, whether in the house, store, office or factory, very rarely have the ability to stand the strain. The case of Miss Frankie Orser, of Boston, Mass., is interesting to all women, and adds further proof that woman's great friend in need is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered misery for several years. My back ached and I had bearing down pains, and frequent headaches. I would often wake from a restful sleep in such pain and misery that it would be hours before I could close my eyes again. I dreaded the long nights and weary days. I could do no work. I consulted different physicians hoping to get relief, but, finding that their medicines did not cure me, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was highly recommended to me. I am glad that I did so, for I soon found that it was the medicine for my case. Very soon I was rid of every ache and pain and restored to perfect health. I feel splendid, have a fine appetite, and have gained in weight a lot."—MISS FRANKIE ORSER, 14 Warrenton St., Boston, Mass.

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, sick and discouraged, and exhausted with each day's work. Some derangement of the feminine organs is reponsible for this exhaustion, following any kind of work or effort. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as it has thousands of other women.

The case of Mrs. Lennox, which follows, proves this.



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Last winter I broke down suddenly and had to seek the advice of a doctor. I felt sore all over, with a pounding in my head, and a dizziness which I had never experienced before. I had a miserable appetite, nothing tasted good, and gradually my health broke down completely. The doctor said I had female weakness, but, although I took his medicine faithfully, I found no relief.

"After two months I decided to try what a change would do for me, and as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was strongly recommended to me I decided to try it. Within three days I felt better, my appetite returned, and I could sleep. In another week I was able to sit up part of the day, and in ten days more I was well. My strength had returned, I gained fourteen pounds, and felt better and stronger than I had for years. I gratefully acknowledge its merits. Very sincerely yours, MRS. BERT E. LENNOX, 120 East 4th St., Dixon, Ill."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Low Rates.

The department commander of the G. A. R. has secured the low rate of $25.75 from the Twin Cities for the round trip to the national encampment to be held at Boston during the week of August 15. This official headquarter's train will leave Minneapolis Saturday, August 13, at 9 a. m., and St. Paul at 9:35 a. m. The train will be made up of Pullman standard and tourist cars, and go through to Boston without change, via the Chicago & Northwestern, Michigan Central, New York Central and Boston & Albany roads. At Niagara Falls a stop of three hours will be made Sunday afternoon. The train is scheduled to reach Boston at 7 a. m. Monday morning, August 15.

Smugglers.

Special agents of the treasury department have unearthed a systematic scheme of smuggling along the Northern Minnesota border near Rainy lake and vicinity.

While nothing official is given out, it is learned that Canadian manufactured articles, including hardware, clothing and other wearing apparel has been smuggled into Minnesota and sold to country people at prices much less than they can purchase the same class of articles on this side of the border.

It is claimed that two or three professional smugglers from New York and several Canadian brokers promoted the enterprise and they are soon to be taken up to justice.

An Old Relic.

A relic of the fifteenth century in the shape of a pony cannon has become one of the valuable posessions of the University of Minnesota through the generosity of Captain Stacy of Ft. Snelling and Major George H. Morgan, commandant of the University Cadet corps.

The fieldpiece was brought from the Phillipines by Captain Stacy. He presented it to Major Morgan, who in turn decided to make it a part of the university museum. It weighs 250 pounds and was in all probability used in the early days of Castilian conquest and settlement of the islands.

Found on a Log.

Men employed on the Shevlin-Carpenter boom, Minneapolis, were surprized, when they started to work, to discover a women desperately hanging to a log. She was immediately rescued and removed to the city hospital.

Further than volunteering the information that her name is Jessie Shorley, the woman refused to explain.

It was learned from different persons living on Plymouth avenue that a woman answering to her description was seen to walk out on Plymouth avenue bridge at about 7 o'clock, but the workmen employed on the east end of the bridge aver no woman crossed at such an early hour of the morning.

Shorthorns at the Fair.

B. O. Cowan, secretary of the American Shorthorn Breeder's association, has just completed a trip of several weeks during which he has visited many breeders in the Northwest and finds that conditions are exceptionally good this year for the best cattle exhibit at the state fair ever seen in Minnesota. His trip was made with special reference to the auction sale which takes place at the state fair, it being the custom to examine all animals before they are accepted for sale.

The fair opens Aug. 29 and closes Sept. 3.

State Wins Suit.

The State of Minnesota has won the final appeal in the contest for title to the thirty-seven-acre tract of mineral land on the Mesabe range, which the state auditor estimates has at least 2,000,000 tons of iron ore on which the state will receive a royalty of 25 cents per ton. The state auditor received a decision from Secretary Hitchcock of the United States department of the interior holding that the tract in question is swamp land and therefore the property of the state under the swamp land grant of 1860.

Burglars at Fire.

The general store of S. H. Blake, at Long Lake, was burned early in the morning.

It is believed that the store was fired by burglars who entered the place, blew the safe and then fired the store.

The Minneapolis fire department was telephoned for assistance but deemed it unwise to send apparatus because of the distance and delay in loading.

The whole village was greatly excited as it feared that the whole village would burn down.

Good Enough Scotchman.

Andrew Carnegie told this story lately: A Scotchman and an Englishman went to see "Douglas," and after Norval's great speech the Scotchman asked his companion: "What do ye think of your Willie Shakespeare noo?"

"Well," was the answer, "you have claimed Chaucer, Milton, Spencer, Wordsworth, Byron and most of the others; I suppose you'll be claiming Shakespeare as Scotch."

"Well," said the Scot, "ye'll allow there's a prima facie case for that; ye'll allow he had intellect enough!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Coffee Has a Curious Way of Finally Attacking Some Organ.

Ails that come from coffee are cumulative, that is, unless the coffee is taken away new troubles are continually appearing and the old ones get worse.

"To begin with," says a Kansan, "I was a slave to coffee just as thousands of others to-day; thought I could not live without drinking strong coffee every morning for breakfast and I had sick headaches that kept me in bed several days every month. Could hardly keep my food on my stomach, but would vomit as long as I could throw anything up and when I could get hot coffee to stay on my stomach I thought I was better.

"Well, two years ago this spring I was that sick with rheumatism I could not use my right arm to do anything, had heart trouble, was nervous. My nerves were all unstrung and my finger nails and tips were blue as if I had a chill all the time, and my face and hands yellow as a pumpkin. My doctor said it was heart disease and rheumatism and my neighbors said I had Bright's Disease and was going to die.

"Well, I did not know what on earth was the matter and every morning would drag myself out of bed and go to breakfast, not to eat anything, but to force down some more coffee. Then in a little while I would be so nervous, my heart would beat like everything.

"Finally one morning I told my husband I believed coffee was the cause of this trouble and that I thought I would try Postum, which I had seen advertised. He said 'All right,' so we got Postum, and although I did not like it at first I got right down to business and made it according to directions, then it was fine and the whole family got to using it, and I tell you it has worked wonders for me. Thanks to Postum in place of the poison, coffee, I now enjoy good health, have not been in bed with sick headache for two years, although I had it for 30 years before I began Postum and my nerves are now strong and I have no trouble from my heart or from the rheumatism.

"I consider Postum a necessary article of food on my table. My friends who come here and taste my Postum say it is delicious." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Big Rooms—Big Meals—Small Cost.

Notwithstanding malicious reports to the contrary, the Inside Inn, at the World's Fair, St. Louis, has thoroughly sustained the high reputation of Mr. E. M. Statler, its Manager, for giving first-class accommodations at reasonable rates.

Thanks to its enormous size and wonderful equipment, it has been enabled to properly care for the enormous crowds which have sought its hospitality, without overcrowding or discomfort.

Standing, as it does, upon an eminence, and surrounded by a beautiful natural forest, it has enjoyed the popular verdict of being the coolest and most delightful spot in all St. Louis.

The extraordinary convenience of being right inside the Grounds and thereby saving all tiresome street-car journeys has been appreciated by every guest, and the management have won high praise for their successful efforts in catering to the comfort, safety and enjoyment of each and every visitor. The rates, which are very reasonable, range from $1.50 to $5.50 per day European, and from $3.00 to $7.00 American Plan.

A postal addressed to the Inside Inn, World's Fair Grounds, St. Louis, will bring interesting details regarding reservation, etc.

CHIEF OF POLICE SAVED.

Newberry, S. C.—W. H. Harris, chief of police of Newberry, says: "I suffered for a number of years with kidney complaint. There was a dull aching across the small of my back that was worse at night and made me feel miserable all the time. The kidney secretions were dark and full of sediment, and lack of control compelled me to rise a number of times during the night. Between this annoyance and the backache it was impossible for me to get much sleep and my health was being undermined. I tried a number of remedies, but nothing helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. The use of this remedy according to directions promptly brought about a change for the better. After using two boxes the backache all left me, the kidney secretions cleared up and the action of the kidneys became normal."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Chief Harris will be mailed to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents per box.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

Jacob H. Studer, an author and authority on ornithology, was found dead in his office in Fifth avenue, New York. Death was evidently due to heart failure.

Jack Carr, who killed Chris Hartman and wounded four persons in his attempt to avoid capture, died at Nebraska City, Neb., as a result of the wounds he received in the fight. Fifteen bullet holes were found in different parts of his body.

Whitefish have returned to the Lake Michigan grounds off Grand Haven, after an absence of ten years. This will mean the revival of an important industry. Twenty-five years ago Grand Haven was the center of whitefish industry. Improvident fishing and increased navigation and sewage drove the fish away gradually.

Peter Henkel shot and killed Rudolph Wieland in a barroom at Lancaster, Wis., and then killed himself when overtaken by citizens. Henkel charged that Wieland had alienated the affections of his wife.

An army of detectives scoured the country for four men who robbed passengers on the Illinois Central train near Matteson, Ill. The railway offered $4,000 reward. No valuable clew has been found.

C. E. Perkins, chairman of the board of directors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, and J. D. Robinson, a New York capitalist, with their wives, are badly hurt in a collision between their auto and an electric car near Omaha.

John M. Jones, the oldest printing press manufacturer in the United States, died in Palmyra, N. Y. He is credited with having made and patented the first typewriter in this country, receiving his patents on his machine in 1855. He was 85 years old.

Assistant Chief of Police Schuttler, of Chicago, has four men under arrest who are suspected of being implicated in the recent Illinois Central train robbery. Three of the men have been identified as having been connected with other robberies.

The Rock Island Railroad company and the United States Express company have offered a reward of $2,000 for the capture of robbers who held up the Rock Island train near Tucumcari, Mex.

Harry Payne Whitney began a fight against the New York inheritance tax law which forced him to pay $222,222 on his father's estate.

Mrs. William Krauss was arrested at Hartford City, Ind., on the charge of poisoning her stepdaughter.

In a fit of jealousy George M. Long, until recently employed as a laborer in the navy yard at Washington, cut the throat of his sweetheart, Nora Adams, with a razor. He then cut his own wrist and throat. Both died in a few minutes.

Senator Hoar was stricken suddenly at his home in Worcester Mass., and pneumonia is feared. Members of his family were hurriedly summoned.

Five thousand strike rioters clashed with 20 city policemen at the Chicago stock yards and a long battle was fought. Scores of rioters were clubbed and 29 persons were arrested.

Reports in circulation that Senator George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, is seriously ill, are denied.

John Lyons was hanged in the county jail at Paterson, N. J., for the murder of John Christian, an aged watchman.

Judge D. P. Vernar, master in equity of Greenville county, S. C., committed suicide by shooting. He was one of the best known men in the state.

Dr. W. M. Frye reported to the Kansas City police that burglars had entered his home and stolen $6,500. Dr. Frye carried his money about with him, not trusting the banks.

George Coffey (colored), aged 14, stabbed Frank Neal (also colored), aged 13, to death at Danville, Ky. Coffey was arrested.

Driven insane by news of the butchers' strike, Alfred Day, meat inspector for the packing house at Cedar Rapids, Ia., committed suicide by hanging.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pelan were killed between Albright and South Omaha, Neb. They stepped from one track to avoid an incoming train and were struck by an outgoing passenger train on the opposite side.

Former Gov. James T. Lewis, the last of the war governors of Wisconsin, died at Columbus, Wis., the result of a second stroke of apoplexy a week ago. Ex-Gov. Lewis was 83 years of age.

Dr. Orlando Brown, formerly a brigadier general in the United States army, and for many years a leading physician, died at Washington, Conn., aged 77 years.

Trains on the Louisville & Nashville road collided near Horse Cave, Ky. Thirty-three passengers and four trainmen were injured, but none, it is thought, will die.

Gov. Yates, of Illinois, issued a proclamation offering a reward of $200 for the apprehension and conviction of each of the four bandits who robbed the passengers on an Illinois Central train near Chicago.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

The fourth convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies began its sessions in Detroit, Mich.

Thomas Taggart, chairman of the democratic national committee, arrived in Indianapolis and was given a public welcome in Tomlinson hall by the democrats of the city and county.

Thomas Taggart, chairman of the democratic national committee, authorized the announcement that William F. Sheehan, of New York, will be chairman of the executive committee.

Dr. Brown Ayres, of Tulane university, New Orleans, has accepted the presidency of the University of Tennessee.

UNIQUE FRIENDSHIPS

THEY ARE TO BE FOUND DURING CAMPAIGN YEARS.

SOME SEEN IN WASHINGTON

Roosevelt and Parker, Warm Personal Friends, Strong Political Enemies—When the Laugh Was on Congress—Other Gossip.

Friends Outside of Politics.

Washington.—If politics sometimes makes strange bed-fellows it also sometimes develops unique friendships between leaders of the opposing forces. In the present campaign men in both parties will be waging inveterate political warfare against bosom friends in the other party. There are some strong friendships among public men who differ in political belief. The standard bearers of the two great political parties in this year's contest, President Roosevelt and Judge Parker, furnish an example of warm personal friends representing opposite political sentiments. These two men are more than mere acquaintances; they are friends of many years' standing, and each finds much in the other to admire. As governor of New York Mr. Roosevelt was thrown into close personal contact with Supreme Court Justice Parker, and has never hesitated to express his admiration for the latter's courage and distinct ability as a judge. Justice Parker has reciprocated the personal friendship of the president and entertains an exalted opinion of the character, courage and ability of the young man now chief executive of the nation.

There is such a personal sentiment existing between the two families that a favorite dog owned by Judge Parker bears the name of "Teddy Roosevelt." The president is having a good deal of quiet fun about this dog just now, and has laughingly indicated to friends of the judge that if the latter finds it at all embarrassing to have "Teddy Roosevelt" in evidence at Esopus during the present summer, when that spot will be the Mecca of hundreds of good democrats, he, the president, will agree to care for the dog at Oyster Bay. The young Roosevelts would gladly undertake the task of looking after the animal until after election. Judge Parker laughs good-naturedly over the situation and declares that "Teddy Roosevelt" will not be in the way at Esopus this summer so long as he does not object to the visit of his democratic friends.

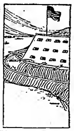
Campaign Committee Chairmen.

Enjoy a Quiet Game Together.

The chairmen of the two congressional campaign committees, while not exactly Damon and Pythias, are exceedingly warm friends. They are Mr. Joseph W. Babcock, of Wisconsin, the chairman of the republican congressional committee, and William S. Cowherd, of Missouri, chairman of the democratic committee. Both gentlemen are members of the house of representatives and both serve on the very important committee that handles legislation affecting the District of Columbia. In fact, Mr. Babcock is chairman of this committee and Mr. Cowherd is the ranking minority member of it. Should the democrats win a majority in the next house Mr. Cowherd would probably become chairman of the District of Columbia committee and Mr. Babcock would be the ranking minority member. There is very little politics in this committee and Mr. Babcock and Mr. Cowherd work together for the interests of the district, and each supports the other on the floor of the house on nearly every proposition that comes from the committee. They are together a great deal in official and social life, but just now are pitted against each other in an attempt to carry the next house of representatives for their respective parties.

The friendship that exists between "Uncle Joe" Cannon, the speaker of the house, and John Sharp Williams, the minority leader of the house, is well known. They have served together for years on the appropriations committee, of which Mr. Cannon was so long chairman, and there formed an intimacy that no turn of politics can disturb. They will both be factors in this year's campaign and each will go on the stump to tell of the iniquities of the party the other represents. There is no danger, however, of them indulging in personalities and attacking each other's record as a statesman. William calls the speaker "Uncle Joe," and the speaker always addresses Williams as "Sharp." They are much alike in tastes; democratic and careless in dress, both inveterate smokers, and both enjoy good dinners and good company.

The Coast Defenses.



The Harbors Are Defended.

There has been so much heard about the new navy, the building up of the navy and the necessity of having a navy equal to any other in the world that the public has lost sight of another arm of the service used for the defense of the country. This is the system of coast defense, which has been proceeding quietly and without attracting one-tenth the notice that the fine new navy has.

When the war with Spain came on the government realized that this very important work had not been prosecuted with the industry that the needs of the country demanded. Under the direction of President McKinley, defective features of the coast defense were corrected, and he promptly used a part of the emergency appropriation of $50,000,000 for the planting of harbor mines and protecting important ocean harbors of the country with modern submarine mines. Since that time the whole subject of coast defense has been more seriously regarded until today the report of the war department shows that since the system was inaugurated this military defense shows the expenditure for fortifications, armaments, electrical appliances, etc., of $90,000,000 in round numbers. According to the defense project first mapped out, and which is still being followed, it will yet cost to complete the work about about $51,000,000. The whole aggregate cost of providing defense for the coast, ocean harbors and seaport cities will, therefore, be approximately $141,000,000. The annual cost of maintaining this defense, including garrisoning, annual supplies, etc., is estimated at $18,000,000.

It will be seen that the war department has considerable to its credit as well as the navy department in providing adequate defense for the country.

The Last Laugh.

THIS IS A STATE DEPT. CARRIAGE

As Congress Would Have Had It.

The executive departments have a joke on congress. Last session Mr. Landis, of Indiana, stirred up quite a commotion by denouncing the practice of supplying cabinet officers and bureau officials with free carriages. He delivered one of his impassioned speeches on the floor of the house on the subject of abuse of the carriage privilege, and declared that bureaucrats had a line of public carriages for private use that would extend from the capitol to the white house almost.

There was not the best of feeling between the executive and legislative departments at that time, as the Bristow post office scandal report had just come in containing the names of upwards of 200 congressmen as being connected with irregularities. The statesmen were eager to find some way in which to "get even" with the departments, so they hit upon the plan of restricting the use of carriages for official purposes. To insure this a provision was inserted in one of the appropriation bills that no carriage should be used for personal use and each should have printed upon it the name of the department to which it belonged.

There was a good deal of chuckling over this latter provision, as it was believed few of the department officials would care to attend social functions and go about personal affairs in a carriage labeled with the name of a public department.

It now turns out that as the law is construed by its official interpreter in the treasury department, Comptroller Tracewell, it only applies to those carriages named in that particular appropriation bill. It so happens that the only carriages so named are those for the use of the superintendent of public printing and the superintendent of the bureau of engraving and printing. These are two of the hardest-worked officials in the government and two who have more legitimate use for public conveyances than any others. They are the victims of the scheme to humiliate other officials. Their two carriages must bear the label of the departments to which they belong, while all the under secretaries, chiefs of bureaus and other government employes who have been driving about in gorgeous undesignated vehicles can continue the practice.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Growth of Trade.

Twenty years ago the first trainload of iron ore was shipped in Minnesota over the Duluth & Iron Range railroad from the Minnesota iron mine at Tower. The train consisted of fifteen cars, and the engineer in charge was Thomas Owens, now superintendent of the road. The total shipment for that year, 1884, was 62,12- tons, and all from the Vermillion range. The Mesabi range made its first shipment in 1892 of 4,245 tons, less than half the total of tonnage now carried by the steamer Wolvin. During the two decades of the industry a total of about 90,000,000 tons has been shipped from the state. There are now on the two Minnesota ranges about sixty mines that are being operated and are shippers and about twice that number non-shipping properties. The total valuation of the mines, as returned by the board of equalization, including the real and personal property, is $42,079,180.

Terrible Crime.

Bound, gagged and assaulted by two tramps, Mrs. Albert Brazier, who resides on the outskirts of Elk River, lay for five hours vainly attempting to attract the attention of passersby. Finally, a man was attracted by her pitiful appeals and released her. She is in a critical condition from fright and abuse.

While the woman was busy with her household duties, the two men came to the door and forcing an entrance, seized her and threw her to the floor. They securely bound and gagged her, and also took rings from her fingers. Before leaving they secured food and then went leisurely away.

Mrs. Brazier was able to give a good description of the men and the authorities have started in pursuit.

A Good Cow.

W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, has completed the investigation of the productivity of various breeds of cows and the nutritive quality of various kinds of feed.

Speaking of the results of the investigation, Mr. McConnell said:

"Of 200 herds tested, the best results were obtained from a grade Shorthorn cow, 8 years old. The cow gave 8,144 pounds of milk in one year, producing 1,430.08 pounds of butter. The owner realized a net profit of $50.19. The poorest showing was made by a full-blooded Durham, which produced but 173.5 pounds of butter and a net profit of 18 cents."

Killed by Derrick.

She was in East Grand Forks visiting her grandparents and was playing in a yard where the derrick was. There was a high wind and the derrick was blown down.

A boy standing near shouted to the the child, but it was too late. She was struck on the head by the falling weight and her skull was crushed.

She died instantly.

Twine Sales.

The sales of binder twine at the state prison amount to 10,200,220 pounds or more than 3,000,000 pounds above the output of last year, an increase of about 43 per cent. The spindles are being worked overtime in order to help out the farmers of the state as much as possible. The value of the product this year is about $900,000, as compared with $702,000 last year, when prices were higher.

Diamonds and Dogs.

Diamonds and pug dogs are becoming more popular in Minnesota each succeeding year, if the abstracts of personal property assessments being received by State Auditor S. G. Iverson are to be relied on. Nearly all the counties that have reported so far show an increase in the valuation of diamonds and the number of dogs two years ago.

Watonwan and Traverse are the only two counties reporting so far that show a decrease in the valuation of diamonds.

State Forestry.

Plats and lists showing lands selected by the state for experimental forestry purposes have been filed at the land office by C. C. Andrews, state fire warden and secretary of the state forestry board. A total of 19,984 acres has been selected by the board in townships 64-12 and 63-14. The land chosen is practically one body, and all lies in the northern part of St. Louis county, a distance of six to ten miles northwest of Ely. Several lakes are included within the limits of the reserve.

Dr. A. Ames, of Minneapolis has filed for the republican nomination for congressman from his dirtrict. If nominated and elected he should be placed on a committee on "graft", and he would do honor to Minneapolis.

Let's see. If Parker and Davis should be elected David B. Hill would most likely be made secretary of state. If Parker shold die, the succession would go first to Davis, who is 81 years old, then to Hill. How the Bryan Democrats and populists would rejoice over Hill as President of the United States.

While a gumshoe campaign may be just the thing, some times, yet we can not see where a candidate for office can expect to get votes at the primarys, unless he lets the people know he is a candidate. A voter is not liable to place his X opposit the name of a man that he has never heard of, as against a man that has been asking him for his vote for weeks in his local newspaper.

The Socilest Party of Polk county have issued a call for a County Convention, to be held at the court house in the city of Crookston on the 15th day of August 1904, at 10 clock a. m, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the several county and legislative offices. The basis of representation in said convention shall be three delegates from each voting precinct and in said county, and five delegates in addition thereto from each local branch of the Socialist party in the county.

If you are of the opinion that you would like to be a cadidate for a certain office don't let your best friend, who is a candidate for that same position, side-track you by telling you, that if you will wait two years and support him he will return the favor two years hence. If you do let him get your help this year and tell your friends that he is just the man for the place he will come to the conclusion, that you are right and that the dear people can hardly get along without him, and then you may hear he has made a remark omethig like this. "I understand that Mr.—— is to become a candidte for my place, but I do not understand how he can expect to get elected as he has not had the experince that I have had". And there you are up against it, and when you meet your friend, who only two years ago shook your hand so warmly he will give you a cool nod and pass you by. If you want an office don't wait for your friend to get through with his and turn it over to you, but go after it. Tell the newspapers about it, they are willing to give you a lift, or a kick, and as all the people read the papers you will get famous if you go down to defeat.

A POLITICAL TRICK.

Louis Gonyea has resigned as Sheriff Sulivans deputy and will take charge of his own campaign for nomination and election for the next sheriff of Polk county.

This action was brought about by the filing of Sheriff Sullivan for nomination to succeed himself for a third term, a stroke of politicts which is so apparent on it's face as being a voilation of a political agreement, that it would not decieve a ten year old school boy. Following is the resignation of Louis Gonyea, as handed to Mr. Sullivan.

Mr. E. J. Sullivn. Sheriff of Polk county.

Dear Sir: —Haveing seen your announcement in the Crookston Daily Journal in regard to becoming a third term candidate for re-alection to the office of sheriff of Polk county, and that you do not inted to fulfill your promise to give me your support through this campaign, I feel it incumbent upon me to sever my connection with you in said office, and I do hereby tender you my resignation as deputy sheriff of Polk county, such resignation to take affect amediately.

LOUIS GONYEA.

There is no doubt, there can be no doubt, that there was a political promise made by the presant sheriff of Polk county two years ago, which has been broken, that will cause the friends of Louis Gonyea to rally to his to his support in such a rush as to assure his nomination and election, for our next sheriff.

PROTECTION IS UNION.

The Tariff Tends to Make the States One Country.

The American Free Trade league's banquet in celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Richard Cobden came off according to the programme at Boston. About the only real cheer which the speakers at the banquet were able to derive from the present situation was such comfort as they found in the fact that, as Edward Atkinson expressed it, "the prosperity and progress of this country have been due to the continental system of free trade among the states under the conditions of our organic law, bringing the benefit of free commerce to the enjoyment of a greater number of civilized people occupying a wider area than have ever been permitted to enjoy that heritage before." But is it not protection instead of free trade that the Tapleys of the league were rejoicing in here?

The tariff has protected the country from disintegration as well as from foreign competition by tending to make the states one country. The fathers were wise enough to provide for this very condition of things by forbidding tariff charges by state against state. Manifestly if the states were free to lay duties on imports or exports against one another we should have economically not one country, but many, and particular states by such a course might have practically annexed themselves to a foreign country. Such a state of things would have been out of the question. The states' economic union has proved the opportunity for and the foundation of national protection and has created the more perfect political union which now prevails.

Union, in other words, is protection, and protection is union. The magnificent heritage which Mr. Atkinson rejoiced in is a heritage of economic independence joined with that of the spirit of nationality. There is certainly not a grain of logical comfort in it for free traders. But it must be remembered that the Free Trade league was bound to extract comfort from something.—New York Evening Mail.

Cannot Be Fooled.

In making the tariff a dominant issue the Democrats will find that the people cannot be fooled. They have enjoyed prosperity and know that it was the wise system of protection, which has been the consistent policy of the Republican party, that made that prosperity a reality. They are therefore not likely now to vote to destroy it. Rather will they continue to support the party which by policy and practice has made them the most envied people in the civilized world.—Providence News.

Borrowed Money.

President Cleveland may have spent less than President Roosevelt, but it should not be forgotten that he was blowing in borrowed money.—Trenton Gazette.

Macbeth as a Comedian.

She—I suppose you attended the amateur theatricals last night? He—Yes, and there wasn't a dry eye in the house. She—The idea! I never heard of "Macbeth" affecting an audience that way before. He—No. You see, we simply laughed till we cried.—Philadelphia Ledger.

No man ever acknowledges a mistake so quickly as when he puts the lighted end of a cigar in his mouth.

NOT MERE SUSPICION

CONVICTION THAT REPUBLICANS ARE GOOD TARIFF MAKERS.

Country Invariably Tranquil With a Republican Majority in Congress. Not So With the Democrats in Power.

"If the tariff question is reopened by the Republicans," remarks the New York Evening Post, "nobody knows what will happen, though every one will have a pretty clear suspicion of the result."

There is a good deal of truth in this observation. There is always a "suspicion" that when the Republicans take up the tariff they will either let well enough alone or frame a schedule of duties that will promote industrial prosperity and financial stability. This "suspicion" is so strongly justified by precedents that the country invariably looks with tranquillity upon a Republican majority in congress, feeling confident that the tariff will be so treated as to yield necessary revenue, afford adequate protection to home industries and maintain healthful activity in the various pursuits which keep capital and labor profitably employed.

A different kind of suspicion enters the public mind when the Democrats get an opportunity to put their tariff theories into practice. When the situation last occurred there was general alarm at the prospect of a fulfillment of the Democratic promise to take protection out of the tariff. Business shrunk, factories closed, money betook itself to hiding places, idleness prevailed, wage-earners were thrown out of jobs, soup houses were established, calls upon charity were heard throughout the land, and the revenues of the government fell so low, that vast amounts of bonds were issued to pay running expenses.

The hard times did not end until the Republican national victory of 1896, an event which established confidence and which, followed by the Dingley tariff of 1897, restored a prosperity that has continued until the present time. In this bit of history there is every inducement to continue Republican rule and no fact which should persuade anybody that Democratic tariff doctoring is desirable. The general feeling, in fact, is something more than "suspicion." It amounts to a positive conviction that Republicans know more than Democrats about the tariff and can be trusted to handle it in a way to build up rather than to tear down the structure of the country's material welfare.

The record of a party is the thing to go by, and by this test the Republican party stands for a tariff policy that the people want and are not going to discard at the coming national election.—Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

RECIPROCITY NOT WANTED.

Demand For Tariff Legislation Comes From Free Traders.

There is no general demand anywhere, except in districts where Democratic ideas of tariff legislation prevail, for a breaking down of the safeguards now maintained. The prevailing sentiment among the great majority of the voters has been and presumably is so strongly on the side of protection that the Republican party has been fully warranted in maintaining its traditional attitude with regard to this question.

The reciprocity agitation has been very much exaggerated. Some special interests desire a modification of the tariff as affecting Canada because that would be to their advantage. The people at large do not demand it. And the working of free trade, limited, as recently seen, does not impress the intelligent citizen as encouraging the belief that more of it would be a good thing. The tariff on anthracite was abolished, and that on bituminous coal was suspended. Can any one recall that the people procured cheaper fuel as a result of admitting the Canadian product duty free?

On the whole, "the people" appear to be fairly well satisfied without either reciprocity with Canada or free trade.—Troy Times.

How Others See It.

"The reaction in Massachusetts" is what the free trade Philadelphia Record calls the movement for free trade in lumber, coal, iron, hides, wool and farm and fishery products. In this movement the Record sees a breaking away from Republican lines on the part of New England business men. We imagine that the Republican signers of the reciprocity petition have not hitherto seen it in that light. It should, however, interest them to note with what satisfaction the enemies of the Republican party regard the participation of New England Republicans in what is in reality a covert attack upon Republicanism.

The Chief Beneficiaries.

It is the wageworkers of this country who derive the greatest benefit from the protective tariff. It protects them from the competition of cheap foreign labor, which would be ruinous to them. It insures to them steady employment and good wages. As they are the principal beneficiaries of the protective system they would be the principal sufferers from any relaxation in it. And that to which Democrats apply the term "tariff revision" means nothing less than an attack upon the policy of protection.—Albany Journal.

TARIFF TINKERING.

Experience Proves Emphatically It Does Not Pay.

It is especially illogical to attribute the present condition of the cotton manufacturing industry to the tariff when every manufacturer and textile worker knows that under the present tariff system the textile industries of the United States have enjoyed a long extended period of unrivaled prosperity.

The cotton industry is suffering from conditions which are in nowise connected with the tariff. The mills of Lancashire, England, are suffering in the same way, proof enough that the tariff has nothing whatever to do with the matter.

The scarcity and consequently high price of raw cotton is said to be the cause of the general curtailment in cotton manufacturing.

Such conditions cannot be legislated away. They can only be removed by the increasing of the cotton acreage and the growing of larger crops.

This is the opinion of men who have made a study of the matter, and no amount of sophistry by little politicians can affect the opinions of those who are familiar with the situation.

If things are bad just at present, how much worse would they be did the manufacturers have to combat not only high prices in raw material, but foreign cheap labor competition as well. The well remembered experience of Lawrence and other textile centers under the Wilson-Gorman tariff from 1893 to 1897 is not so remote that its lessons have been forgotten by even the most thoughtless.

HELPING THE ENEMY.

False to Say That the Reciprocity of Blaine Is Repudiated.

It is the Pittsburg Dispatch, professedly a Republican and not a Democratic newspaper, which says this:

"Mr. Littlefield's declaration that the Republican party is strictly in line with the Blaine-McKinley-Dingley view of protection evades the fact that reciprocity, which both Blaine and McKinley advocated, is now repudiated, and his citation of tin prices as a proof that tariff and trusts have no relations is unfortunate in omitting the prices since the combination in that industry was formed."

To say that the reciprocity which Blaine and McKinley advocated is now repudiated is to falsify the facts. Blaine was a lifelong opponent of reciprocity in competitive products, and McKinley, in the Buffalo speech that has been so distorted and perverted, was careful to stipulate that when trade treaties should be entered into they must be of a character "not to curtail domestic production" and "not to injure any domestic interest." As to tin plate prices, Congressman Littlefield did exactly what he set out to do—demonstrated beyond question that as the direct result of the development of that industry under the McKinley tariff an enormous reduction had taken place in the price paid by American consumers. From the tone of some of its editorials it would seem that the Dispatch thinks the Democratic party needs more support in Pittsburg.

A PERIOD OF MISERY.

Conditions That Existed Under the Last Democratic Tariff.

The conditions existing under the last Democratic tariff law have been described by no one better than by the president of the American Federation of Labor, a Democrat, who said, on Jan. 1, 1898, "That terrible period for the wage earners of the country, which began in 1893 and which left behind it such a record of horror, hunger and misery practically ended with the dawn of the year 1897." That was the "dawn" of another Republican administration.

Shall we take any chance of returning to that condition? Are the people willing to elect a Democratic president or a Democratic house of representatives, relying solely on the continuation of a Republican senate (that may at any time and from many different causes become Democratic) to save the country from another period of "horror, hunger and misery" to American wage earners?—Jamestown (N. Y.) Post.

Dress Clothes For Foreign Travels.

"Here's a tip for you," said the man who has traveled to the one who is about starting for the other side. "Take your evening clothes, but if yon are traveling light leave your frock coat suit at home. Even the Englishman of fashion no longer considers it absolutely necessary to appear in the daytime in his frock coat and silk beaver. For myself, a good serge is the thing in which to knock about the continent. The man who takes his frock and leaves his swallowtail at home is out of his reckoning. Dinner is a ceremony to dress for even though one be not rich."—Philadelphia Record.

Literature Versus Nature.

The essay naturalist observes and admires; the scientific naturalist collects. One brings home a bouquet from the woods; the other, specimens for his herbarium. The former would enlist your sympathies and arouse your enthusiasm; the latter would add to your store of exact knowledge. The Lord High Constable.

The lord high constable of England was an official of high rank in olden times. The name is a contraction of comes stabuli, count of the stable, or, as we should now say, master of the horse. His functions were partly military, partly judicial and partly civil.

It became a hereditary office to the Staffords, by one of whom, the Duke of Buckingham, it was forfeited in 1521 for high treason, and has never been revived, save for special occasions, such as a coronation. This office still exists in Scotland and is reserved for the earls of Erroll. The present constable of the Tower, of Dover, Windsor, and other places is a remnant of the old office, and the term police constable indicates that the chief duty was to keep the peace.

How We Breathe.

Men and women do not breathe alike. In a woman the breathing is from the thorax, or chest, while in a man it is mainly from the diaphragm, which is lower down. This peculiar difference is so marked that it is possible to recognize by it a woman disguised as a man, although the disguise may be faultless in other respects. Most physiologists say that this difference is not due to sex, but owing to artificial conditions, such as the wearing of corsets.

Of course we reimburse the druggist. You know him, and trust him.
Dr. Miles' Nervine is medicine for your nerves.
It is a novel theory—not of anatomy, but of treatment; first discovered by Dr. Miles, and since made use of by many wide-awake physicians, who appreciate its value in treating the sick.
If you are sick, we offer you a way to be made well—Dr. Miles' Nervine.
This medicine is a scientific cure for nerve disorders, such as Neuralgia, Headache, Loss of Memory, Sleeplessness, Spasms, Backache, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy or Fits, Nervous Prostration, etc.
By toning up the nerves, Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine will also cure those diseases of the internal organs due to a disordered nervous system.
"My brother had nervous prostration, and was not expected to live. I prevailed upon him to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and now he has fully recovered. You remember I wrote you how it saved my life a few years ago, when I had nervous trouble. I preach its merits to everyone."—REV. M. D. MYERS, Correctionville, Iowa.

Still More Evidence.

Bay City, Ill., August 8 (Special).—Mr. K. F. Henley, of this city, adds his evidence to that published almost daily that a sure cure for Rheumatism is now before the American people, and that that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Henley had acute Rheumatism. He has used Dodd's Kidney Pills. He says of the result:

"After suffering for sixteen years with Rheumatism and using numerous medicines for Rheumatism and more medicines prescribed by doctors, I at last tried Dodd's Kidney Pills with the result that I got more benefit from them than all the others put together.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills were the only thing to give me relief, and I recommend them to all suffering from Acute Rheumatism."

Rheumatism is caused by Uric Acid in the blood. Healthy kidneys take all the Uric Acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys.

At the end of that time, I was a different woman, the neighbors remarked it, and my husband fell in love with me all over again. It seemed like a new existence. MATTOCK FOR THE GARDEN

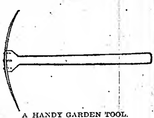
Try Making One Right Away and You Will Find That It Saves Lots of Work.

About the easiest and most effective tool to work with in the garden for digging weeds and plantain out of lawn, is nothing more than the 20-inch leaf of an old buggy spring, with a



A HANDY GARDEN TOOL.

3½ inch or four foot handle attached. If the spring has but one hole it can be attached with one large screw or nail, and two wire ties. If three holes, three screws are sufficient. Handle can be cut out of a piece of fence board the required length, cut square at the end and dressed down to suit the eyes and hands of the user. Try making one right away.—J. C. Umstott, in Ohio Farmer.

REMEDIES FOR CUT WORMS

To Trap These Destructive Garden and Orchard Pests Requires Work and Strategy.

Cutworms are the larvae of moths belonging to the family noctuidae. These moths are night flyers; their eyes shine in the lamp light and hence they are sometimes called "owlet moths." The eggs are laid by the female moth for the most part on leaves or the soft parts of plants. Land recently in sod is likely to be infested, and the crop following sod is pretty sure to suffer if attractive to these pests. Some cutworms climb fruit trees and eat the buds.

Late fall plowing by turning up the pupae of cutworms, where a varying temperature has a chance to work on them, so that crows, blackbirds and other birds have an opportunity to eat them, is an excellent thing.

Many growers of melons, squashes and cucumbers protect their young plants by cylinders of tin (tomato cans with ends melted out are good) or cardboard or even brown paper, a cylinder surrounding each plant and planted a few inches (two or three) in the soil. Poisoning bundles of clover with a solution of Paris green and strewing the same amongst the plants to be protected is one good method. Both of these the entomologist has tried with some success. Paris green, it must be remembered, is a slow acting poison comparatively, and one must not expect worms which have eaten it to die at once. Planting an excessive number of seed or plants is sometimes resorted to. The writer has found the guilty worm frequently concealed an inch or two in the soil in the morning, not far from the plant injured during the night. He has also trapped them successfully by placing cabbage leaves, or any large leaf or board, among plants needing protection, finding the worms under there in the morning.—Minnesota Experiment Station.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

Five feet apart each way is a good distance to set currant bushes.

On many soils both fruits and vegetables are benefited by an application of wood ashes.

One of the commonest mistakes of the fruit grower is to neglect to cultivate his orchard.

For almost any kind of small fruit the land should be deeply plowed, thoroughly cultivated and well fertilized.

It is cheaper to grow good shade trees from seed in a nursery, under the proper conditions, than to hunt and pull them in the woods.

The root systems of forest seedlings grow long and spreading, so it is almost impossible to pull them without injuring the roots very badly.

The United States is now spending about $400,000 annually in the investigation of forests, and in carrying out various schemes for forest preservation.

Why should we expect the orchard to continue to bear crops year after year without being fed and cultivated? We do not expect it of other farm crops.

Seedlings grown in the shady and sheltered woods have their organs for transpiration, assimilation, etc., developed for that condition, and when brought out to a light, exposed place, are unable to cope with the new conditions and die.—Farmers' Review.

Good Whitewash for Trees.

In the New England states whitewash is frequently applied to fruit trees, especially apple trees, and seems to have the effect of keeping off fungus and insect pests. The whitewash as used there is generally made by simply slaking the lime with cold water. But it would be better to slake the lime with hot water. It may be made to stick better by adding some skimmed milk. Some even heat some glue and when it has become a thin liquid dilute it with hot water and add it to the wash. This still further helps the sticking quality.

AN OLD MAN'S TRIBUTE.

An Ohio Fruit Raiser, 78 Years Old, Cured of a Terrible Case after Ten Years of Suffering.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble, of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys.

SIDNEY JUSTUS.

These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the day time, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

The handsomest private cars in the world are owned by Adolphus Busch and Charles M. Schwab. Busch received his as a present from friends. The furniture, which, like the general appearance of the car, is in Louis XV. period, is all hand-made. Each of the brass bedsteads in the two staterooms cost $1,000.

OLD FASHIONED

But Still in the Fashion.

It is an ever new and interesting story to hear how one can be entirely made over by change of food.

"For two years I was troubled with what my physician said was the old fashioned dyspepsia.

"There was nothing I could eat but 20 or 30 minutes later I would be spitting my food up in quantities until I would be very faint and weak. This went on from day to day until I was terribly wasted away and without any prospects of being helped.

"One day I was advised by an old lady to try Grape-Nuts and cream, leaving off all fatty food. I had no confidence that Grape-Nuts would do all she said for me, as I had tried so many things without any help. But it was so simple I thought I would give it a trial, she insisted so.

"Well, I ate some for breakfast and pretty soon the lady called to see her 'patient,' as she called me, and asked if I had tried her advice.

"'Glad you did, child, do you feel some better?'

"'No,' I said, 'I do not know as I do, the only difference I can see is I have no sour stomach, and come to think of it, I haven't spit up your four teaspoons of Grape-Nuts yet.'

"Nor did I have any trouble with Grape-Nuts then or any other time, for this food always stays down and my stomach digests it perfectly; I soon got strong and well again and bless that old lady every time I see her.

"Once an invalid of 98 pounds I now weigh 125 pounds and feel strong and well, and it is due entirely and only to having found the proper food in Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE COMMERCIAL ORCHARD

A Profitable Farm Industry, Provided It is Conducted Judiciously and With Common Sense.

Commercial orchards are being planted on a large scale in many sections of the apple regions. Large contiguous blocks reaching one to 3,000 acres, are being handled successfully, yet we believe that the same number of trees planted in 10 to 20-acre plots would give better results. It has occurred to us in our observations covering a number of years that it would be better in planting 40 or 80 acres, as the case may be, to plant in blocks, leaving avenues at least 100 yards wide, which could be cultivated in small fruits or other crops. Our reasons for this is that in our experience in packing apples we have found that after the trees have become large the limbs almost if not reaching each other, that the fruit is not so perfect in the large orchards as it is in the smaller ones, and have come to the conclusion that it is easier to combat the ravages of insects and fungi in the smaller plots than it is in very large plantations. As the extended and unfrequented forest is the habitation of wild animals and birds, so may the extensive orchards, after becoming thickly grown, become to a greater extent the habitation and harbor for insects and fungi, than the smaller and more frequented blocks. As a large percent of the growth in the development of trees, fruits and plants is supplied by light and air, we perhaps give too little consideration to this feature of fruit culture, and have suffered by doing so. We know of no vocation that requires the application of good judgment and common sense more, or one that pays any better on the capital invested, when applied, than commercial orcharding. The individual must take the best information he can get as to soil, varieties, care and culture, and intelligently apply it to his needs, governed by local environments with which he is surrounded. Do this and he will succeed in growing an orchard. The time for gathering our commercial crops is also very important. Fruit should always be gathered when at the proper stage of ripening, regardless of the time of season.—George T. Tippin, before Wisconsin Horticultural Society.

CHERRIES FROM SPROUTS.

Answering an inquiry in the Journal of Agriculture, Jacob Faith says: Sprouts that grow around Early Richmond cherry trees will produce Early Richmond cherries if the tree root is an Early Richmond cherry. Twenty-three years ago we grafted Early Richmond cherries on one-year-old seedling plum root; grew them in the nursery one year. Ninety-five per cent. of the plum seedlings came up as they were grafted in the crown of the plum roots, and about 25 per cent. of the cherry grafts grew. The plum roots also threw up plum sprouts, which we dug up, cut all plum sprouts from the roots and planted where we wanted them to grow. Set them about three inches deeper than usual. The second year they commenced, a few cherry-sprouts from the roots, also a few plum sprouts. The plum sprouts we dug up and destroyed; the cherry sprouts we planted in the orchard. Of course, they bore the same fruit as the parent tree, and I had no more bother with the plum sprouts. Thus a start can be given from the sprouts, like our so-called dooryard cherry. I see no difference in the above trees and fruit from those budded on mahaleb stock. This will apply to other varieties of cherries and plums, but grafting stone fruit is a very particular job. If one-fourth of the grafts grow it is good luck. Stone fruits, such as peach, cherry and plum, are budded; apples and similar tree seed are grafted. To protect cherries from birds, the best plan that I ever found is to plant a few mulberry trees within 100 feet of the early cherry trees; the birds prefer mulberries to cherries, strawberries and other fruit.

A HOME-MADE EVAPORATOR

The Device of a West Virginian Fruit Grower, Simple in Construction and Effective.

Apples, peaches and corn are evaporated in a dry goods box 6x3½x2 feet by E. H. Mish, of West Virginia. The bottom is lined with slate roofing and the trays made of galvanized wire screen, ¼-inch mesh, resting on slats nailed inside the box. The heat is furnished by a box stove with pipe running on the bottom of the box under the fruit. Corn and apples dry in 12 hours, but peaches take three days. In the spring this fruit is heated in an oven to keep the worms out. When cool it is placed in barrels with wire screen covers to ventilate and keep out mice.—O. H. Barnhill, in Farm and Home.

A SUCCESSFUL SALESMAN.

Sold Sea Water and When Tide Went Out Purchaser Thought Him a Wonder.

The late Thomas Brackett Reed used to relate the following incident which happened one summer while he was spending a few days in a small fishing village on the New England coast, says the New York Times.

A young countryman who had been advised to take sea baths registered at the village hotel one evening, and shortly afterward sauntered down to the beach. Espying a grizzled old fisherman mending his nets beneath a sign which informed one that B—— had boats and tackle to let and bait for sale, he accosted the veteran and asked him if the water was not for sale also. On receiving an affirmative reply the countryman returned to the hotel, obtained a couple of buckets, and having paid the price asked, filled them and returned to his room to carry out the doctor's instructions.

On the following morning he happened down at the beach when the tide was out, and after contemplating the broad receding beaches for some minutes, approached his acquaintance of the evening before and remarked in a tone of admiration: "Gosh! but you must have done some business last night."

OMISSION TO BE RECTIFIED.

Expert Testimony Which Condemned Served Also to Enlighten.

Prince Hohenlohe, during his recent visit to New York, commended the wines of America. He praised especially the California red wines, which seemed, he said, to be exceedingly pure, relates the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Then, apropos of wine's purity, the prince narrated a recent happening in Berlin.

"A Berlin vintner," he said, "was accused of selling a wine made of chemicals. He was brought to court, found guilty, and fined.

"After he had paid his fine, he approached the chemist whose testimony had convicted him.

"'How did you know?' he said, curiously, 'that my wine was manufactured?'

"'Because it contained no bitartrate of potash,' said the chemist. "'In natural wines bitartrate of potash is always found.'

"'Thanks,' said the vintner, in a tone of relief. 'It will be found in my wines hereafter.'"

Explained His Assertion.

By the use of the saline solution the Cheerful Idiot, who had been punched in the jaw for a previous offense, was revived.

"What did you mean?" asked the anxious watchers, "when you said that you saw her draw a revolver?"

"Perhaps the statement should be qualified," he admitted, in a dazed way. "She was sketching a merry-go-round, you know."—Cleveland Leader.

Care of the Hair.

It is now generally agreed that many of the shampoos in use are injurious to the hair. The best treatment is frequent brushing and absolute cleanliness. Wash the hair in a lather of Ivory Soap and rinse thoroughly. Let the last water be cool, as it closes the pores of the skin and prevents colds. ELEANOR R. PARKER.

Before It Happened.

"Extry! Extry!" called the newsboy. "All about de terr'bl' explosion!"

Just at that moment a terrible noise made the bystanders jump, and one of them asked:

"What's that?"

"Dat's de explosion," said the newsboy. "Here's de extry all about it."—Herald and Presbyter.

The St. Louis World's Fair as a Great Educator

It Is More Valuable Than Months of Study or a Trip Around the World. Accommodations for Visitors Moderate and Ample

St. Louis.—I was standing on the Plaza St. Louis, admiring the scene that stretched away into the distance before me, ending with the magnificent spectacle of the Cascades. I needed no company, for the great exposition all around me was sufficient, but as I stood there an acquaintance, the president of a western college, stopped beside me.

"Magnificent beyond the dream of man," said I.

"More than that," said he. "Do you know," he continued, "to me the greatest thing of this truly great exposition is the educational influence it will have upon the millions who visit it. Here in two weeks' time one can gain more practical knowledge of the kind that will be useful to him in the struggle with the world than he can get in two years' time in any university. The college education is entirely different from the kind of education one gets by seeing things, but for practical purposes the 'seeing' education is quite as necessary as the book learning. We consider a trip to Europe as a great educator, but a trip to Europe cannot be compared to a trip to this exposition.

"As for our country, what could be more instructive than the exhibits in our government building? After seeing it we understand far better than we could have before both the system and uses of government. Take the Philippine exhibit as another example. A half day's time spent within its walls is more instructive than a dozen text books. We are entirely too apt to read and forget, but when we see we remember, and here we see."

Examples that would bear out the statements of my college friend might be enumerated almost without end, and all would but tend to prove that the Louisiana Purchase exposition is the greatest educator of the age. We read the histories of the years to learn of the world's progress, but here we do not have to read, we see it. In the Transportation building we see the primitive locomotives that pulled our first railroad trains, and standing beside them we see the powerful, intricate machines that perform the same service to-day. That is an education in the progress of railroading. In the Electrical building we find the first primitive electrical appliances, and beside them the many intricate machines that are to-day being driven by this as yet unexplained power. That is up-to-date education in electricity. In our school geographies we are taught, among other things, of the products of the various countries. Here we see them. The book learning we forget, what we see we remember. Take, for example, Japan. We are interested in the progress of the island empire, we wonder at her greatness, we read volume after volume to learn of her progress. Here it is all spread out before our eyes. We see the same Japan Commodore Perry saw when he broke the bars of darkness that shut the empire from the world, and we see beside it the Japan that is to-day waging war with one of the greatest nations of the world, the same Japan that is an important element in the world's commerce. It is an education in the progress of Japan that no books can possibly give us.

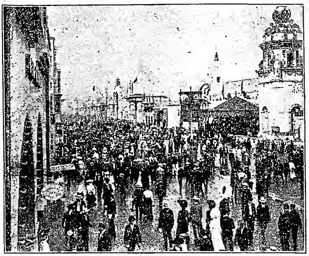
And so it goes through all the great exposition palaces, through the foreign government buildings, through the state buildings, and down the Pike. Everywhere is a new and valuable lesson easily learned and never forgotten, for we learn it by "seeing."

To refer again to the United States government building and its exhibits as an educational feature, I want to quote a part of a paragraph from the current number of the World's Work that well illustrates the educational point I make. This is it:

"Watch a party of visitors from a Mississippi valley state, people who have never seen the sea, as they wander through the passages of the battleship model or squint along a rapid-fire gun on deck, across an imaginary ocean. The shine in their eyes betrays a mixture of excited interest and patriotic pride. Far though the coast may be from their homes, it is yet their coast that such battleships guard, and the battleships are theirs. And it is a semi-proprietary satisfaction that affords a good part of the pleasure that any American evinces in gazing at the processes or results of the many government activities he sees exploited here. A visitor will observe a hundred interesting novelties; he will leave the building—only to go back later for another look—round-eyed with amazement at the many things the government does for the people; but his spirit will be self-gratulatory—it is we who are doing it all."

Yet another among the thousand of exhibits that may be classed as educational is to be found in every aisle, in every corner of the Agricultural building. Here spread out before you are the products of the earth's harvest fields. In this one building, big enough in itself to contain the whole of the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, are the farm products of every country. Here are sheaves of grain and heaps of corn, made opulent with milk and honey and butter, cotton-seed oil and cotton, tobacco, sugar cane, and fruit. There are towers and pagodas and pictures and panoramas in corn-husks, corn-cobs, corn-tassels and corn-kernels, tobacco-leaves and tobacco-grains, wheat-straw and wheat-heads and wheat-grains; and there are figures in cotton and butter and sugar and prunes and nuts. There are decorations in wavy moss and hemp, in rice-sheaves and prairie grasses. You know at last the wealth of each state, for packed into each of the different sections is an abundant sample of all that springs from one state's soil—whether it be hill-farm potatoes, swamp rice, sea-island cotton, bottom-land corn, prairie wheat, desert dates or irrigated alfalfa. And in the same way you know the agricultural wealth of each of the world's nations, for they are spread out before you for your inspection.

And what does it cost to see this wonderful exposition, what is the price to be paid for this liberal education? It may be much or little, just as a sight-seeing trip to any city may be much or little. There are fashionable, high-priced hotels in St. Louis, just as there are in New York, in Chicago, in London or any other large city, but be it said to the credit of these hotels, they are no higher priced during the exposition than they were before it. The masses of the people are looking, however, for something less expensive, and it is easily found. The people of St. Louis are playing the part of host in a way that will make friends of the visitors to the fair. Thousands of homes have been opened for the accommodation of guests, and the prices charged for the accommodations provided are most moderate. In fact, to judge from what one must pay for board and room, one would scarcely imagine that the greatest exposition the world has ever known is in progress in the city. Boarding house prices compare favorably with those of other cities, and $1 per day will secure a comfortable room and breakfast in hundreds of these hospitable homes. No one needs deprive himself of the great education that awaits him at St. Louis for fear of exorbitant prices, for they are not to be found.



AN AVERAGE CROWD ON THE "PIKE" AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Killing Cattle.

Dr. H. S. Ward, executive agent of state live stock sanitary board, said that the board will continue to condemn cows afflicted with tuberculosis, although State Auditor S. G. Iverson has refused to issue warrants reimbursing the owners in accordance with the Krostue bill passed by the last legislature. This means that the cows will be killed, but the owners will not receive anything from the state.

"We shall go on with our work just the same," said Dr. Ward. "We have been killing cows afflcted with tuberculosis at the rate of 75 to 100 a month, and I should say that the average cost to the state was about $17."

The action of the state auditor in holding up the warrants is on advice of Judge Daniel Fish of the statue revision commission who says that the Krostue bill authorizing the payment was repealed by the law creating the live stock sanitary board and has brought many protests from Minnesota dairymen who have cows afflicted with tuberculosis. These dairymen say that it was bad enough when the state killed their cows and paid three-fourths of their value.

Live Stock at Fair.

In the various announcements of Minnesota's great representation in the live stock department at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition it has been stated that the admirable display would be sent to St. Louis early in September. This is true, but it should be remembered that this stock will not go to St. Louis until after the Minnesota State Fair and that it will all be exhibited at the State Fair grounds during the week of August 29th to September 3rd. No one will need to go to St. Louis to see what Minnesota can do in the way of pure bred live stock, and, further, no one need go to St. Louis to see the prize winners at that great show, for a great majority of the animals which will take premiums at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition will have been exhibited at the Minnesota State Fair this year. The Minnesota fair is the only one this year which will have national exhibitions in connection with the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' Association and the American Short-horn Breeders' Association. The fair opens August 29 and closes Sept. 3.

Mark H. Donnell.

Mark H. Dunnel, former congressman and a distinguished citizen of the Northwest, died at his home in Owatonna of heart failure, aged eighty-one years.

Mr. Dunnell was born in Buxton, Me., July 2, 1822, of Scotch and English parentage. He was graduated from Waterville college in 1849 and spent the next five years in teaching.

In January 1865, Mr. Dunnell came to Winona, Minn., becoming a member of the Minnesota legislature in 1867. At the close of this session he was appointed state superintendent of public instruction, holding that position for three and a half years.

He resigned this office upon election to congress in the fall of 1870. He served twelve consecutive years in the national house of representatives. He was retired by a change of political control of his district. He was in private life until 1889, when he was re-elected to congress.

Wild Cat Spoils Sale.

A half-grown wild cat spoiled the sale of a piece of Minnetonka real estate for P. P. Swenson, a Minneapolis real estate agent, a day or two ago. While Mr. Swenson was showing a prospective buyer and his wife a piece of lake property the cat jumped out of underbrush and cut across the lot, frightning the buyer's wife almost into hysteries and giving the agent and prospective customer something of a scare.

The man was satisfied with the property and so was his wife until the cat made its appearance, after which they took the first train back to the city. Swenson has bought a gun and is looking for the wild cat, and the woman has changed her mind about a summer home at Minnetonka.

Another Explosion.

A second launch explosion occurred on Lake Minnetonka, and it was only by the rarest good fortune that no lives were lost.

The gasoline tank in Frank Muffet's handsome launch, the Piccatonica, exploded with terrific force, while Robert McCune, E. L. Jarvis and C. C. Noble were on their way across the lake, and for a few moments it seemed as if there was to be a repetition of the disaster in which Mrs. George L. Upton lost her life only a few weeks ago.

News Notes.

A movement is started to bring the Northwestern Saengerfest to St. Paul.

The American Association of Opticians will meet in Minneapolis next year.

The St. Paul lacrosse team defeats Calumets of Chicago by a score of 9 to 6.

McIntosh has not sprung a candidate for office, up to the pesent time, while Fosston has three aspirents for honor on the republican ticket, with the democrats to hear from.

B.S.Bennett is making a campaign for renomination as representative of this district, and while we might do better, there is a possibility that we may do worse than to realeet him.

Dr.Maland, of Bagley has filed for the nomination for representative on the republican ticket from the 61st district. So Sugar beet bounty Simons will have an opponent that will take an interest in the advancement of his own district's welfare, instead of workin for others.

P.C. Bjorneby, the preasent register of deeds of Clearwater county has filed for renomination and election on the republican ticket. Mr. Bjorneby has been a careful and a pains taking official since his appointment to the office, and will no doubt be nominated and elected with a large majority.

The 61st Legislative district cast and counted 7018 votes at the last election. The 62nd district cast and counted 5684 votes. The 62nd district has one Senator and two representatives, and the 61st one Senator and one representative, and Simons, for that one. Is it any wonder that we did not hear much from the 61st in the last legislature?.

The democrats are not going to allow the republicans to run away with the sherff's office in this county without a struggle. At latest accounts George Kronschnabel, the well known Fertile merchant, and Huge Qigley of East Grand Forks will be in the race at the primarys on the Dem. ticket. —Thirteen Towns.

There is no doubt about the qualifications of Louis Gonyea for Sheriff of Polk county, and if he is nominated and elected he will be the sheriff in fact, as well as name, and this county can go on record as haveing elected a man for our next sheriff who's qualifications and ability for the position are second to no sheriff that will be elected in this state.

The leading republicans of this county do not take kindly to Sheriff Sullivans statement, that he was the one to turn the people of this county from Populist's to Republicans, but we are rather glad that he has come out and shouldered all the blame, as some Populist friends who used to hold office in that party have been blameing us for haveing had a hand in making them loose their job, but Sullivan has come out and owned up that he was the man that done the whole business.

The Krostue glandered horse law is unconstitutional and the state don't have to pay, but Gunder will not be liable to tell his friends and relatives any thing about that when he begins to round them up to vote for his renomination.

With all the sore spots to heal up after the nomination of one of the five candidates for County attorney of Polk county gets the nomination, the candidate of the opposition may offer the defeated ones some salve, guarenteed to heal old sores.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR.

The dates for the State fair this year will be from August 29, to September 3. The Minnesota fair has become a "great show". From a comparatively insignificent place among the state fairs of the country, it has grown to be more than twice as large as any other. The fair will be held on the Minnesota State Fair grounds midway betwee Minneapolis and St.Baul.

Half fare rates have been made on all railroads beginning with Saturday August 27th.

The primary election campaign is now on and by the time our next issue comes out we will know all the aspirants for the legislature in the 61st and 62nd district's, and will bublish them.

FARE OF THE GREAT.

The Favorite Dishes of Some Famous Men and Women.

Queen Victoria is said to have given mutton the preference in the line of meats, and was nowise offended if offered "the cold shoulder."

Queen Elizabeth was very fond of roast goose. She was dining on this when the good news was brought her on Michaelmas day that the Spanish fleet had been driven back. And ever since that fowl has been to the English feast of St. Michael what the turkey is to our Thanksgiving day.

Henry VIII. was extremely fond of pears and imported a Dutch gardener to raise them, as in his day they were only used by the upper classes—"a dish to set before the king."

Louis XV. was "extravagantly" fond of a dish made of the eggs of various birds, which cost $100.

George Eliot, while at Brookbank, used frequently to walk over to the farm where she purchased her vegetables and chat with the farmer's wife on gardening and buttermaking, who was somewhat surprised at the great novelist's conversation on such homely topics and afterward remarked, "It were wonderful, just wonderful, the sight o' green peas that I send down to that gentleman and lady every week." This was the summer "Middlemarch" was written.

Lincoln, in the days when he did his own marketing, often stopped at a certain shop for his favorite—gingerbread. He used to say, "It swells up and makes me feel as if I had had something."

Stonewall Jackson delighted in buckwheat cakes in season and out of season.

Ralph Waldo Emerson was fond of pie, especially that made of plums, which he called the fruit of paradise.

Dr. Holmes, on the contrary, said of the peach, "When nature has delivered it to us in its perfection we forget all the lesser fruits, and if not found by the river of life an earth born spirit might be forgiven for missing it."

Charles Sumner's private secretary tells of the statesman's sweet tooth for chocolate creams.

Andrew Jackson surrendered to ice cream at first taste when Mrs. Alexander Hamilton introduced it into Washington and swore his usual oath, "By the Eternal!" he would have it at the White House, and he did—at the next reception.

Washington was noted for his fondness for hickory nuts, and the amount he could consume.—What to Eat.

Christmas In the West.

PRICES AND WAGES.

EMPLOYMENT FOR LABOR IS THE MAIN THING.

Secretary Shaw Says that Increased Cost of Living Is a Minor Consideration Compared With Abundant Work and High Pay.

In his recent speech before the Roosevelt workingmen's clubs at Wilmington, Del., Secretary Shaw said in part:

"The Republican party is not a party of sympathy, but of encouragement. Instead of posing as a benevolent institution it represents policies which reduce the occasion for almsgiving to the minimum. Its bounty is opportunity.

"The Democratic party, on the contrary, never fails to express sympathy for the overburdened, but its policies, when put in operation, never fail to produce conditions which incite sympathy. When the products of labor find ready sale and labor finds correspondingly ready employment, then our opponents are loudest in their protestations of sympathy for the overtaxed and overburdened people. They never congratulate; they always sympathize. They never rejoice; they always bemoan. They seldom cheer except at the prospect of something worse.

"My present purpose will be served by showing that universal and constant employment at reasonable wages, even in the face of high priced living expenses, is preferable to employment for only a portion of our people, though at the same wage and at much reduced living expenses. Catch the thought? Employment for all our people at a given wage with living expenses high is preferable to employment for only one-half our people with living expenses however cheap.

"This country has never seen and never will see suffering at a time when labor finds ready and constant employment, whatever the price of food and clothes. And the converse of this is also true. This country always has been and always will be filled with suffering whenever labor fails of employment, however cheap may be food and clothes.

"I think I can demonstrate either one or both of two propositions. I can show that the happiness of the wage earner is dependent upon high priced farm products, and I can also demonstrate that the prosperity of the farmer is dependent upon the ready and constant employment of the wage earner. In other words, it is easily demonstrated that the prosperity of artisan and farmer is interdependent.

"The Republican party insists that the American producer, to the limit of his ability, shall supply the needs of the American consumer. The Democratic party seems to think it of no consequence who produces that which we consume, provided only it is cheap. The Republican party insists that it is measurably unimportant what price we pay so long as we pay the price to ourselves.

"Higher wages mean more and better food for the wage earner, more and better clothes for his family, a better roof for the home and therefore a better market for the farmer. Higher prices for cattle and corn mean more lumber for farm buildings, more barbed wire for fences, more and better clothes for a happier family, more and better furniture for the home, better carpets, better carriages, more and better implements of agriculture and therefore a better market for the wage earner.

"In other words, both the wage earner and the farmer—yes, the business man and the capitalist as well—spend in one way or another about all their income. It is spent either for improvements on the farm, or for a little home in town, or in the education of children, or in the construction of a railroad, or in building a ship, and 90 per cent of it goes directly or indirectly for labor or for the products of labor.

"Whenever the Republican party is in power and its policies are in operation, when public buildings are being erected, when rivers and harbors are being dredged, when railroads are being graded and widened and double tracked, when canals are being dug and when the home market is protected in the interest of the American producer, artisan and farmer, then are all men fed and all families clothed. But may the good Lord deliver us from another period when living expenses are cheap!"

Protection Makes Opportunities.

It is impossible to study the tariff system of the United States inductively, giving due heed to the influences of our system upon the industry of the country, without noting the important part played by protection in making opportunities. Amid all our prosperity, the rise and fall in prices, the betterment of the conditions of capital and of labor, the rise of combinations in industry and the sudden decline and fall of many of these modern creations, the one striking fact which stands out in the forefront of it all is that the protective system has furnished the opportunities for capital and labor, has diversified our industries and made the United States the chief manufacturing and producing country of the world and the richest in individual and collective wealth of any country on the globe.—Bradford (Pa.) Star.

Fears No Fall.

It is certain that Mr. Bryan is worrying the Democratic party a great deal more than the Democratic party is worrying Mr. Bryan, for, as John Bunyan puts it, "he that is down needs fear no fall."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Remarkable Clover Stalk.

Miss Emma Doney of Powder valley, Pennsylvania, recently found a remarkable clover stalk, having fourteen stems, twenty-seven of them having four leaves each and seventeen being five-leaved. During the summer she gathared 191 four-leaved clovar stalks, nineteen with five leaves and one with the exceptional number of six leaves.

"Forever and a Day."

The other day Sir Charles Wyndham, the actor, was given a dinner in London at which he made a speech declaring that he would remember his friends' kindness "forever and a day"—a phrase which appealed to him, he said, because it sounded like "adding a matinee on to eternity."

HUNTING FOR TALISMANS.

An American's Odd Expedition to an East Indian Temple.

When the late Professor Sommerville of the University of Pennsylvania, the learned collector of gems, charms and mascots, had set his mind on some curio heard of in one of his meetings with orientals, nothing could bar the way. Were it in the center of the desert of Sahara or on the topmost pinnacle of the Himalaya mountains, he would go after it and keep up the search until the treasure was found, purchased and placed on exhibition at the university museum.

American gold was Professor Sommerville's magnet wherever he went. He thus described its effect on one of his expeditions:

"On one occasion we desired to visit the famous Dilwarra temples in India, and for that purpose engaged two jinrikishas and a number of natives to draw them, about twelve in all. The temples, as you know, are set in a magnificent grove of mango trees on a mountain top and surrounded by great hills. With a fair measure of tact and money I hoped to secure from the people of the vicinity some of their odd talismans and rings. I said to the chief rickshaw man: 'Now, Lala, what will you do for me if I double your pay? I want to make this journey in half time, and if you accomplish it you shall be doubly paid.'

"He went to his helpers at once and informed them that I was a prince. We started out under the contract. He ran ahead of the convoy, raising both hands in the air and crying to the astounded people: 'Here comes a prince. Down with you. Here comes a prince.'

"And during the entire twelve miles ride I was treated to the un-American experience of seeing the people cover their faces and drop abjectly to the ground in obeisance and salutation, only daring to look at me through their parted fingers. But my amusement at thus being treated as a prince was nothing to the gratification I experienced in securing from this people—who did not dare to refuse so august a personage as I—some of the most interesting inscribed talismans that I have in my collection."—Booklovers' Magazine.

Cannot Be Fooled.

In making the tariff a dominant issue the Democrats will find that the people cannot be fooled. They have enjoyed prosperity and know that it was the wise system of protection, which has been the consistent policy of the Republican party, that made that prosperity a reality. They are therefore not likely now to vote to destroy it. Rather will they continue to support the party which by policy and practice has made them the most envied people in the civilized world.—Providence News.

Your Heart

May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulder; Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough; Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

Finally, remember, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold under a guarantee that the first bottle will do you good. If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Leipsic, O.

ACHED IN EVERY BONE.

Chicago Society Woman Who Was So Sick She Could Not Sleep or Eat, Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Marion Knight, of 33 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Orator of the West Side Wednesday Club, says: "This winter when I started to use Doan's Kidney Pills I ached in every bone and had intense pains in the kidneys and pelvic organs. The urine was thick and cloudy and I could barely eat enough food to live. I felt a change for the better within a week. The second week I began eating heartily. I began to improve generally and before seven weeks had passed I was well. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicine that did not help me, but $6 worth of Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to perfect health."

Yokes when used on shirt waists are molded after the 1830 type.

Broad-shouldered effects will prevail in shirt waists next season.

Shirt waist sleeves tend toward the bishop order, with a somewhat wider cuff than in the past.

A LITTLE VARIETY.

The palais de Castile, the home of the late Queen Isabella in Paris has been purchased by the French government.

As an advertisement of its thread a well-known firm has, after several attempts, connected Europe and Asia across the Bosporus, says the London Financial Times, with 1,250 yards of cotton.

RACIAL PECULIARITIES.

Five feet is the minimum height of the Russian and French conscript.

Rheumatism is almost unknown in Japan. The Japanese escape the malady to a great degree by avoiding the excessive use of alcohol and tobacco.

In fasting feats the sect known as the Jains, in India, is far ahead of all rivals. Fasts of from 30 to 40 days are very common, and once a year the people abstain from food for 75 days.

JUST ONE DAY

Free from the Slugger Brought Out a Fact.

"During the time I was a coffee drinker," says an Iowa woman, "I was nervous, had spells with my heart, smothering spells, headache, stomach trouble, liver and kidney trouble. I did not know for years what made me have those spells. I would frequently sink away as though my last hour had come.

"For 27 years I suffered thus and used bottles of medicines enough to set up a drug store—capsules and pills and everything I heard of. Spent lots of money but I was sick nearly all the time. Sometimes I was so nervous I could not hold a plate in my hands; and other times I thought I would surely die sitting at the table.

"This went on until about two years ago when one day I did not use any coffee and I noticed I was not so nervous and told my husband about it. He had been telling me that it might be the coffee but I said: 'No, I have been drinking coffee all my life and it cannot be.' But after this I thought I would try and do without it and drink hot water. I did this for several days but got tired of the hot water and went to drinking coffee and as soon as I began coffee again I was nervous again. This proved that it was the coffee that caused my troubles.

"We had tried Postum but had not made it right and did not like it, but now I decided to give it another trial so I read the directions on the package carefully and made it after these directions and it was simply delicious, so we quit coffee for good and the results are wonderful. Before, I could not sleep, but now I go to bed and sleep sound, am not a bit nervous now but work hard and can walk miles. Nervous headaches are gone, my heart does not bother me any more like it did and I don't have any of the smothering spells and would you believe it? I am getting fat. We drink Postum now and nothing else, and even my husband's headaches have disappeared; we both sleep sound and healthy now and that's a blessing." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

IN WESTERN CANADA

THREE DIVISIONS AFFORDING CHANCE FOR SETTLEMENT.

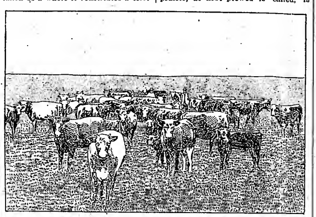
They Are Specially Adapted to Ranching, Wheat Growing and Mixed Farming—Many Americans Settling There.

The old Romans used to say that Gaul was divided into three parts. So is the Canadian northwest. Gaul's divisions were political; those of western Canada's prairies are created by the unerring hand of nature.

The First Division.

Chiefly because of the elevation of the country, the absence of large lakes and rivers, and the operations of the "Chinook" or Pacific ocean winds, which readily cross the Rocky mountains in southern Alberta through gaps and passes, the southwestern portion of the Canadian provinces is regarded as somewhat arid, and less fertile than other portions of the country. Although this has been a prevailing idea in the east, it has been left for American settlers who have invaded this district within the past two or three years to prove that splendid crops of grain can be grown on the land which had hitherto been the feeding ground for the herds of cattle and bands of horses that ranged here.

That ranching is carried on most successfully in other portions of the prairies west, just as agriculture is to a limited extent conducted successfully within this boundary, is fully established, but taken as a whole it constitutes a territory above all others most admirably adapted to this particular industry.



A HERD OF CANADIAN SHORTHORNS.

The buffalo, bunch and other grasses that grow in profusion in this district and retain their nutritive properties the year round, and the moderate climate of mid-winter rendered such by the Chinook winds preventing any considerable depth of snow at any time, especially fit the district for the peculiar methods of the rancher—raising his herds the year round in the open country.

While there are no large lakes or rivers in this whole country there are numerous fast-running streams fed the year round by melting snows in the mountains furnishing an abundance of the coolest and purest water, the best for beast as well as man. The country has at once an abundance of the best of food and drink the year round, a clear sky but little wet or stormy weather and a favorable climate the year through.

Englishmen and Americans in the western territories are bringing in their herds as fast as they can and leasing or purchasing land in lots from 1,000 to 20,000 acres from the Dominion government. An idea of the growth of the industry will be gathered from the fact that in 1899 there were but 41,471 head of cattle shipped and sold from the ranches, these figures ran to 55,129 in 1900, and to 160,000 in 1903, averaging $40 per head for the owners. But it takes a great many ranchers and a large number of cattle to cover an area of 200,000,000 acres, the area available for ranching in the Canadian northwest.

It is not at all necessary that large investments should be made at the outset. Many men commenced with small capital and small herds, and have worked themselves into large herds and great wealth. There is still in the country plenty of room for those who desire to go and do likewise.

Second Part.

The second part of the Canadian prairies embraces the great wheat growing belt of the country which is easily a half larger than any other in the world. It includes about 150,000,000 acres. As it is comparatively free of broken land, large lakes and rivers, about 125,000,000 acres of it can be brought under the plow. Placing a farmer on every half-section (320 acres), it can comfortably locate 800,000 farmers or 4,000,000 of an agricultural community. A glance now at what the farmers of the territories are doing will give a better idea of what can be done in this great wheat-growing zone. The territorial government reports show that in 1903 there were raised 16,629,149 bushels of spring wheat off of 837,234 acres, an average of 19.04 bushels per acre; off 440,662 acres of oats there were grown 14,179,705 bushels, an average of 32.17 bushels per acre; 69,667 acres produced 1,741,209 bushels of barley—24.65 to the acre, and 32,431 acres produced 292,855 bushels of flax seed, 9.03 to the acre. As but 1,383,434 acres or a little better than one per cent. of the entire wheat-growing area of the territories was under crop, a little figuring shows 13 per cent. of the entire country under wheat will raise the 200,000,000 that Great Britain annually requires from outside countries.

It must not be supposed for a moment that while this part of the country is outlined as the especially favorable district for wheat growing, it is not good for mixed operations as well. It is because it is level, has a sufficient rainfall every year, plenty of snow in the winter for moisture in the early spring and favorable climatic conditions the year round that it is specially marked for this branch of husbandry.

In this part of the country wheat is king, and here it is raised in the greatest possible perfection by a combination of soil and climate in its favor, and the tendency has been to neglect the more laborious branches of husbandry for which the country is equally well adapted.

As if to cope with the offerings of nature, the railway companies are ready with their railways to haul the grain as soon as it is relieved from the straw in the fields by the threshers. Throughout this entire belt there is an enormous length of railway mileage, branches are radiating in every direction from the trunks until they scarcely leave a grain field more than six or seven miles from a road, and they are all required, for in the fall and early winter the sight of the trains passing to and from the elevators at the railway depots makes the entire country look like one hive of industry.

Free Homestead Lands.

There is yet a large quantity of government land for homesteading in this country, and as in everything else "the early bird catches the worm." Those who come first are first served. When it is preferred to purchase railway or other company lands they can be got at from five dollars per acre up. This section cannot be better closed than by showing practically what is made by wheat growing in this district. The average from the first of operations is 20 bushels per acre. Breaking the prairie, as first plowed is called, is of course an exceptional expenditure, as when it is once done it is done for all time. This costs about $3.50 per acre. After the breaking, plowing and seeding, harvesting, threshing and marketing, all expenses combined amount to about $5.25 per acre; that is, if a man has everything done it will cost him $5.25 per acre. If he does the work himself he is earning wages while producing at that figure. Now as the average yield is 20 bushels, and the average price 60 cents—$12 per acre—the difference between the result and cost, $6.75, is the profit of grain growing year in and year out in the great wheat belt of the Canadian prairie country. If a man has a half section of land and puts half of it, 160 acres, under wheat, which is a very common occurrence, he makes $1,080 on wheat alone and should make if he is a capable farmer enough out of other crops, sale of cattle, dairy and other products to keep himself and family the year round besides.

The Third Division.

The third division of this great country lies to the north of the wheat belt, between it and what is known as the forest country. As wheat growing implies the raising of all cereals, that can profitably be raised in the country, the remaining branches of mixed farming are dairying and the raising of farm stock. It must not be supposed that dividing the prairies in this way is saying that any one portion of the country possesses better soil than another, for such is not the case—all districts are equally fertile, but the topography and climatic influences differ, as well as the conditions for production. Ranching and grain growing are carried on quite successfully in this northern zone; but it is found more profitable to combine all the features of the industry. On account of the land being more broken than in the southern district, though the soil is equally fertile, there are not the same opportunities for extensive operations; and while cattle raising is as profitable here as elsewhere, different methods have to be adopted for their protection, especially in the winter season.

An authority on the subject has stated that agriculture in any country never reaches the minimum of development until the farmers engage at least proportionately in dairying, though the surroundings must always determine the extent to which any feature of the industry may be prosecuted. It is certainly then that if the agricultural possibilities of this portion of the prairie country be estimated by its adaptability to dairy farming even the most skeptical must acknowledge they are unsurpassed in any country in the world. As intimated above, even dairying may be successfully carried on in any corner of the territories, but this zone has everything to recommend it as the ideal spot for this branch of the business.

The mining districts of British Columbia, which consume an immense lot of dairy products, are close at hand and always afford a good market for butter, cheese, pork, poultry and eggs.

SAVED FOR THE FISH TRADE

He Had Too Much Intellect to Be "Hove Away" on a Doctor.

The fish-man drove into the yard a few days after the new summer residents had taken possession of their home, and seeing an open door he stepped in and confronted the mistress of the house, relates Youth's Companion.

"Gettin' settled, I s'pose," he said, agreeably, allowing his gaze to wander from two half-unpacked trunks to a table loaded with miscellaneous articles. "Well, take your time, take your time; there's plenty of it up here! I understand your husband's a doctor, ma'am?"

"Yes, he is," said the summer resident, who in spite of warnings from city neighbors that she had better display no haughtiness of spirit under questioning, was unable to put much cordiality into her tone.

"Well, now, I come near bein' a doctor," said the fish-man, still with a wandering gaze. "My folks wanted I should be one, all exceptin' of an aunt that had money, and was looked to to help me out financially if I took up with a profession. She spent one summer here, and she made a reg'lar study of my character an' parts, and at the end of the season she up an' told my folks that 'twouldn't do, I must go into business.

"'That boy has got too much intellect to be hove away on a doctor,' she said; those were her very words. Now how would you like a couple o' good mack'rel all slit up an' ready for the br'iler?"

Think It Over.

Brander Matthews was at the 'phone the other day bidding good-by to a friend who was to sail the next day for Europe.

"I sail to-morrow on the Celtic," came over the wire, the steamship's name being pronounced "Keltic."

"You'd better pronounce that Seltic," replied the professor of belles lettres. "If you don't you'll be having hard seas all the way over."—N. Y. Times.

Voice from Arkansas.

Cleveland, Ark., August 15 (Special).—Nearly every newspaper tells of some wonderful cure of some form of Kidney Disease by the Great American Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills, and this part of Arkansas is not without its share of evidence that no case is too deeply rooted for Dodd's Kidney Pills to cure.

Mr. A. E. Carlile, well known and highly respected here, tells of his cure after nearly a quarter of a century's suffering. Mr. Carlile says:

"I want to let the public know what I think of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I think they are the best remedy for sick kidneys ever made.

"I had Kidney Trouble for 23 years and never found anything that did me so much good as Dodd's Kidney Pills. I recommend them to all sufferers."

There is no uncertain sound about Mr. Carlile's statement. He knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills rescued him from a life of suffering and he wants the public to know it. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills from Backache to Bright's Disease.

Hard to Understand.

"I have always been a reader of your poetry," began Mrs. Gushe.

"I am glad," replied Algernon Charles Mystic, "that some one understands me."

"Oh, but that is what I have been hoping to meet you for. I wanted you to explain." —Pittsburg Press.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—MRS. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements.

Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Lelah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all knew what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony.

"I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

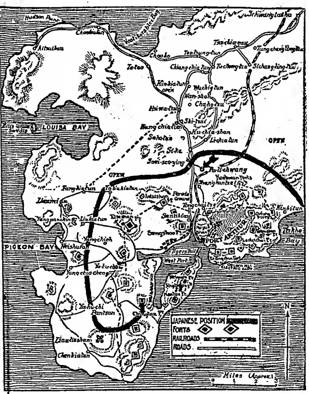
LOCATION OF PORT ARTHUR FORTS AND RELATIVE POSITION OF THE JAPANESE.



The advanced position taken by the Japanese center column against Port Arthur is indicated in the map. This is a little south of Palingchang, or Pailchwang, which is about two miles from the fortifications. The left wing of Nogi's forces, to the eastward, commands the forts from Takushan, while the west wing, now in the Pigeon Bay district, is closing in on the works guarding that region. The principal of these forts is Etseshan, one of the strongest in the whole circle of fortifications. The force that landed in Pigeon Bay is supposed to be in possession of Lang mountain, the Lianti hills and White Wolf hill, southwest of Port Arthur, and within range of the town.

PORT ARTHUR IS SURELY DOOMED

Japanese Continue Fierce Assault on Stronghold—Slowly Gaining Ground—Losses Are Enormous—Czar's Navy Is Crushed.

Chefoo, Aug. 19.—A battle of huge proportions raged around Port Arthur August 14 and 15, and was resumed August 17. The Japanese, it is reported, sacrificed 20,000 men, but gained important advantages in the matter of position. The above news was brought here on junks, one of which, having on board three Russians concealed in the baggage of Chinese to escape from the Japanese, left Port Arthur Wednesday night and was blown rapidly to Chefoo by a gale. The main force of the attack was directed against the left wing, and resulted in the capture of Pigeon bay positions and some of the forts at Liaotieshan. At Paiunchang the Japanese hastily mounted guns, which did excellent service in aiding the storming of the right wing, where the Japanese are said to have captured two forts of minor value, mounting eight four-inch guns, two siege guns and six quick-firing guns.

Surrender Demanded.

On the night of the 15th the battle lulled somewhat when the Japanese sent the terms of surrender to Lieut. Gen. Stoessel. The terms provided that the garrison should march out with the honors of war and join Gen. Kuropatkin; that all civilians be brought to a place designated by the Japanese admiral; that the Russian warships in the harbor numbering seven, namely, the battleships Retvizan, Sevastopol, Pobieda, Peresviet, Poltava, the armored cruiser Bayan, and the protected cruiser Pallada, and 12 or more torpedo boat destroyers and four gunboats to be surrendered to the Japanese.

Stoessel Refuses.

Gen. Stoessel's treatment of Maj. Yomoka, the Japanese messenger, was courteous, but his reply was prompt and characteristic. The Japanese major then asked for a three days' truce in which to bury the dead. This was refused. The battle was renewed at ten o'clock on the morning of the 17th, and as the junk left it was being waged furiously on all sides.

A frightful incident of the recent fighting, the refugees state, occurred in the storming of forts three and four on the right wing when land mines were exploded. It is alleged that two Japanese infantry regiments, two squadrons of cavalry and one artillery company were destroyed.

The Japanese Terms.

Tokio, Aug. 19.—Maj. Yomoka, representing the Japanese forces besieging Port Arthur, met the Russian chief of the garrison staff about 600 yards north of Shoshiying at 10:30 a. m. August 16 under a flag of truce and delivered to him the emperor's offer to remove noncombatants to a place of safety. The tender included women and children under 16 years of age, priests, diplomats and officers of neutral powers. The conditions of the answer required that on August 17 at ten o'clock the noncombatants should advance under a flag of truce. At two o'clock August 17 a detachment of Japanese infantry would accept their delivery at the conference point and convoy them to Dalny together with a limited amount of baggage, the examination of which was to be optional. Noncombatants were forbidden to bring books, writings, documents and articles relating to the war. The Russians were required to answer either yes or no, and they were not allowed to alter the Japanese conditions.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 20.—Acute anxiety prevails regarding the situation at Port Arthur on account of the desperate character of the fighting as reported taking place though the war office does not seem to believe the danger of the fall of the fortress is so imminent as is generally asserted. According to reports received by the war office, there is still an ample supply of ammunition and provisions there. While it is realized that the Japanese probably outnumber the defenders six or sevenfold, the great strength of the fortifications, it is believed, will do much to make up for the disparity in numbers.

Must Fight to the Death.

Upon one point there is absolute unanimity here—namely, that if the fortress falls the fleet will not fall into the hands of the Japanese. On this point the admiralty's instructions are of the most imperative character. Vice Admiral Prince Ouktomsky has been ordered, should the worst come, to sally forth for a death struggle and there is no question here that these instructions will be carried out, both in letter and in spirit, but if for any reason a final sortie proves to be impossible the admiral is to destroy his ships and make sure that their wrecks shall be absolutely irreparable.

Must Disarm or Leave.

Washington, Aug. 20.—Consul General Goodnow has cabled the state department from Shanghai that the Chinese taotai there has reported against the claim of the Russian consul general and decided that the torpedo boat destroyer now at that port must go out or disarm by the 20th inst., and that the cruiser must do likewise by the 21st inst.

RAGE AND HAVOC OF THE WIND.

MINNEAPOLIS AND ST. PAUL ARE SWEPT BY TORNADO WITH SAD EFFECT.

Four Lives are Lost at Waconia and Three People are Known to Have been Killed near Glencoe. One Killed at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Aug. 21.—For thirty full minutes last night Minneapolis was in the grasp of the elements. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were lost in the vortex of wind and rain. Property throughout the city, more especially the proudest buildings in the business section, was demolished.

It was 8:45 p. m. when the rain and wind reached Minneapolis. It was almost unheralded. A tinge of saffron on the northern horizon presaged a thunder shower, but no one was prepared for the furious onslaught that came.

Rumors of people killed floated over the city after the storm had spent its violence, but as near as can be learned, no fatal accidents took place in Minneapolis proper, although at least one person was killed in the suburbs. A large number of minor accidents were reported, but the character of those seemed to be confined to people who suffered slight flesh wounds.

The storm struck the city with a roar and dash that was awful. Rain swept down in torrents, filling the streets with swiftly flowing rivers. Lightning flashed, following electric wires. Thunder, in rattling, crashing volleys, sounded like the death knell.

Suddenly the electric lights were extinguished, adding to the weird and confusing scene. Dull crashes of thunder were followed by the sharper sound of breaking glass and then the long-drawn out echoes of torn timbers.

Then, as suddenly as it had appeared, the storm vanished. The proverbial calm settled down, and the city started to recover from one of the worst tornadoes that has been seen here in half a century.

The greater part of financial loss to the business section ~~occurred on Nicol~~let avenue, between Fifth and Seventh streets. Here the damage easily reached $50,000.

Within a few minutes Minneapolis was completely isolated from the balance of the world. Telephones and telegraph service was destroyed, street and steam railroads were completely blocked and communication with even St. Paul suspended.

The new addition to the city hospital was completely destroyed, the probable loss being in the neighborhood of $50,000. The operating room was also demolished, entailing a loss of $10,000.

Lowry Hill and vicinity suffered severely. Houses were unroofed, the damage being estimated at not less than $40,000 for four blocks.

A span was torn away from the Tenth avenue bridge and dropped into the river below. Here, again, it will take at least $50,000 to cover the loss.

The Garden theater, with its tents and seats, is mixed in one mass of confusion. The performance was in full sway when the mighty burst of wind struck the canvas and collapsed it.

Last night's terrific storm struck St. Paul at 8:40, and resulted in extensive damage and three fatalities.

The storm was confined principally to the river district, striking the bluff end of the famous high bridge and destroying two spans, then sweeping across and completely demolishing the Tivoli theater, where two men were killed, George Kweton, 378 Toronto avenue, and L. F. Hokanson, a Northern Pacific fireman, of Burr street. Several actors and actresses in the Tivoli theater were injured by falling debris, and there were a number of minor injuries in the excitement of emptying the auditorium.

The wind swept down Third street, and struck Wabasha slightly. It left in its path a tangled mass of wreckage, broken glass, demolished chimneys, roofs, walls, wires and poles. Many of the iron trolley poles were bent and twisted like straws.

Communication between the two cities, by train, electric cars, telephone and telegraph was almost completely cut off.

Glencoe, Minn., Aug. 22.—A tornado struck the township of Rich Valley and Bergen, Saturday night about 8 o'clock, killing four people: Mary O'Donnell, aged thirteen, daughter of Patrick O'Donnell; the seven-year-old daughter of Anthony O'Donnell; Frederick Gross and his mother.

The city of Waconia is in tears. With four of her citizens dead and at least a score wounded, the residence section and business houses complete wrecks, her streets littered with debris, and, above all, the crops of the surrounding country total losses, the little German-American village, thirty-two miles to the southwest of Minneapolis is wrapped today in gloomy contemplation of the awful ravages of Minnesota's last terrific tornado.

Minneapolis Damage.

Garden theater, demolished.

Tenth avenue bridge, two spans swept away.

Minneapolis Packing Company, front wrecked.

Williams & Bros.' grocery store, front damaged.

E.J. Sullivan has withdrawn from the race for the nomination or Sheriff of Polk county, which will narrow the race down to three aspirants.

Tom Bjoin is making his campaign on the nationality issue, by claiming he is a Nowegin. Tom was born in Dane county Wisconsin, and it is reported, that when he is collecting an old threshing machine note he can not, Norsk Tales, at all.

Is Dr, L.L. Mayland, of Bagley going to make a campaign for the nomination for representative of the sixty first district on the republican ticket?, is the question being asked by a large number of people liveing in that district, who are anxious to vote for anyone, except Simons.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of Wm. McGlennon, for County attorney of Clearwater county. He is the present County attorney haveing been appointed to the position, which he has filled satisfactorly and is entitled to be elected to succeed himself and no doubt will be by a large majority.

To be mortally offended with a man or a newspaper that is opposed to you as a candidate for nomination and to widen a difference between you and the voter or newspaper is folly,—if you belong to the same party. You expect support after the nomination from these people and these papers should you win and you expect to give your opponent your support should he win—and you expect your friends to do the same—so make a fight in such a manner as to make it possible to ask his support. Otherwise expect to get just what you deserve after the nominations are made. —Thief River Press.

WE note in the newly created "public ownership" party, who held their county convention, at Crookston August 15th, several politicians who used to be prominent workers in the Peopels party in Polk county. There was A.R. Holston, who was nominated for County Attorney, and from the east end of the county we find the name of Dreng Grundysen of Sietten, for Registe of Deeds. Hans C. Samson of Fosston for Cororner I.S. Chegstad of Lengby for Surveyor, and then they have for County committee: I.U. Jennings. Henry Krogman, A.R. Holston, of Crookston: Mat Holt, Garden; H.C. Lerum, Eldred; F.A. Wilson, Angus; John Galloway, Frank Hartly, of Fosston; Julius Bagstad, McIntosh; E.J. Gulikson, Liberty. The party will undoubtly put up a fight to capture some of the county offices this fall.

ALBERT ANDERSON.

Eleswhere in this issue will be found the announcement of Albert Anderson, one of the five candidates for the nomination for Clerk of Court on the republicn ticket, of Clearwater county. Mr. Anderson is editor and publisher of the Olberg Journal, which he establishe at Olberg in the Town of Leon May 22, 1902, in what was then Beltrami county.

He took an active part in the division of Clearwater county from Beltrami county two years ago, favoring the establishment of Clearwater county. He has been Township Clerk of Leon township the past two years and is the present postmaster at Olbeg. Mr. Anderson is an American by birth, having been born in Goodhue county this state.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR.

The dates for the State fair this year will be from August 29, to September 3,. The Minnesota fair has become a "great show". From a comparatively insignifent place among the state fairs of the country, it has grown to be more than twice as large as any other. The fair will be held on the Minnesota State Fair grobnds midway betwee Minneapolis and St. Baul.

Half fare rates have been made on all railroads beginning with Saturday August 27th.

TRICOLOR AND COCKADE.

Some seventy or eighty years before France was involved in the flames of the revolution—that is, at the epoch of the war of the succession when she was in close alliance with Spain and Bavaria—it was thought desirable to distinguish the allied soldiers by a cockade which combined the colors of the three nations—the white of France, the red of Spain and the blue of Bavaria.

To none of such incidents, however, would it be wise to attribute the origin of the historic tricolor and cockade adopted by revolutionary France. At the outset there seemed a likelihood that green, which Camille Desmoulins had popularized at the Palais Royal, would have become the national color, but men remembered in time that it was that of the livery of the Comte d'Artois, the most unpopular of the Bourbon princes, and it was thereupon discarded.

A proposition was then made to assume the colors of the city of Paris—blue and red, as Dumas reminds us in his "Six Ans Apres." To these was added the white of so many glorious memories, because it had been selected by the national guard—always faithful to the throne and its traditions.

"Not until some months after the capture of the Bastille was the tricolor definitely adopted, when Bailly and Lafayette presented it to Louis XVI. in the great hall of the Hotel de Ville, and the convention issued a decree in which it was described as consisting of three colors—"disposees en trois bandes egoles, de maniere que le bleu soit attache a la garde du pavillon, le blanc au milieu, et le rouge flottant dans les airs"—that is, in equal vertical sections, with the blue inward, the red outward and the white between.

This is the historic flag which Napoleon's legions, in conjunction with their eagles, bore victoriously from the Seine to the Elbe, the Tagus, the Borodino and the Danube, which they planted victoriously on the walls of almost every European capital.—All the Year Round.

SHIP PROTECTION.

Its Opponents Overlook the Main Question.

"Common sense from Mr. Hill" is what the New York Times calls the statement that the only way to get a large marine owned by Americans is to permit Americans to buy or build ships, just as they may find the more profitable. Yes; that is common sense as a free trader views it. It is, in that view, the height of common sense to buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest market. But there is another way of looking at it. One of the witnesses before the congressional marine commission testified that free trade in ships would instantly close every shipyard in the United States. Would that be common sense? Another witness, ex-Congressman Farquhar of Buffalo, told the commission that the political party which should establish free trade in ships would alienate the votes of 2,000,000 members of American labor organizations. Would that be common sense?

It all depends upon the point of view. What Mr. Hill wants is the privilege of buying ships abroad instead of having them built at home at 25 to 50 per cent higher cost. He is in the transportation business, and he is looking for bargains in vehicles or vessels. He cares nothing about the shipbuilding industry in his own country.

Right here is where he separates himself from the subject under consideration. The marine commission is not only directed to investigate and report as to the best method of restoring the flag to its rightful place on the sea, but is must also report as to the plan best calculated to revive the American industry of shipbuilding. The two questions go together. Of the two the shipbuilding half is by far the more important.

It is up to congress to find out not alone how to enable Americans to own ships, but how to enable Americans to build, own and operate ships. Mr. Hill has not yet grasped the whole proposition. Being a free trader, he can only see a part of it—that part which will enable him to get cheap ships. In so completely overlooking the main essential of having an American marine built, owned, operated and manned by Americans we do not think the Great Northern man has shown a very high quality of common sense.

Men who take things without thanks and let them go without repining are generally the most successful of mortals.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Good Haul of Sharks.

An immense shark was caught lately by the marines of his majesty's guardship Urgent at Port Royal, Jamaica. It was so big that the most stalwart seaman aboard could have passed through its mouth without touching the teeth. No fewer than forty-three young ones, all alive and kicking, were found in the mother's stomach.

Singing on Carpet.

Standing upon carpet has a tendency to muffle the voice, since a layer of inelastic and nonconducting material is then interposed between the seat of voice production and the floor, which, when it is not covered, acts as a sound board, taking up the vibrations and giving increased effect and distinctness to them. This can be illustrated by placing a timepiece first upon a rug or carpet and then upon the bare floor. In the latter position the ticking is much louder, because the vibrations of the clock are then much more forcibly communicated to the floor and so to the air of the room and finally to the ear by actual contact between the clock and the floor. A carpet damps or kills these vibrations because it is a bad conductor of sound. The difference, which is so audible in this case, is in some degree to be detected when the voice is heard under similar conditions.

George Singer S Pelka and W. G. Hunt will go over to the new Lands on a tour of investigation next week. Mr. Singer bought land in Township 152 Range 40 in July and is now taking some interest in getting new settler located on the vacant lands.

Eric O. Hagen, of Crookston is the latest to file for the nomination on the republican ticket for County Attorney of Polk county. Next, Stand aside you attorneys that have filed and give the balence of the attoneys a chance at the filing desk before it is everlastingly to late.

Peter Fladland and Olous O. Nerison, who got their homestead filings on the rong land at the time they took their claims four years ago have just got the papers corected by the general land office, so that their residence and improvement are on the same land. They filed on the two ajoining claims at the same time, only Peter signed the applcation for the lands that Olus entended to take and Olous signed the application for the land that Peter entended to take. They put their recievers reciept in their pocket and each went home and went to improveing, the others land and did not discover their mistake for three years, when they applied to the land office for corection and have just got it corected. N. Campbell was their attorney.

SOMEWHAT POLITICAL.

TOM BJOIN'S CAMPAIGN.

Tom Bjoin drifted in here Saturday evening and stopped for supper, at the hotel, and it was expected that he would stop overnight to repair political fences, but were informed that he went out south of town, where a farmer lived that he had heard got a load of poles from his farm nere this place, last winter, and he expected to get a settlement of the case by getting a nights lodgeing for himself and team. We have heard that he was a candidate for the nomination for sheriff on the republican ticket of this county, and was making an old fasioned country school "marm" campaign, stopping with some farmers that were indebted to him on some old deal and turning his lodging on the old account. He carries his horse feed and a cold lunch with him, so as to not be stuck if he should land at a farm house, where he could not get a hand out.

A Dutch Fishing Village.

Almost every fishing village in Holland has its special dress and its own quaint customs. One can see from old Dutch pictures that these have not varied for the last 200 years. One most interesting place is the island of Marken, a tongue of land on the margin of the Zuyder Zee, which can well be inspected in a couple of hours. It is so little above the sea level that the clusters of houses or tiny villages are built on mounds connected by bridges, and nearly every little house has its own little moat and its own little boat—everything except the people is on a diminutive scale in Holland—moored near the door so as to be handy in case of flood. The houses, with the exception of the church and the clergyman's house, are built of wood on high piles. They are none of them very old, as the place has often been flooded and burned. In winter Marken is often under water, and the inhabitants use boats to pass from one village to another. The cottages, which are painted blue, green or black, with pointed gables, and roofed with red tiles, are all exactly alike and possess only a ground floor built on high piles.

A Novel Time Glass.

"During a trip which I took through the West Indies several years ago," said a traveler, "I saw a sight in one of the villages which brought the old proverb, 'Necessity is the mother of invention,' forcibly to my mind. In the front of one of the houses on a veranda stood a sentry whose business it was to keep the time for the village by means of a primitive sandglass. Two bottles were firmly tied together, mouth to mouth, and fixed in a wooden frame, made to stand in reversible positions.

"A quantity of black sand ran from one bottle into the other in just half an hour, and when the upper bottle was empty the frame was reversed. Twelve short sticks marked with notches from 1 to 12 were hung upon a string, and a hook was placed between the stick bearing the number of notches corresponding to the hour last struck and the one to be struck next. The sentry announced the time by striking the hours on a large gong."

None are less eager to learn than they who know nothing.—Suard.

Your Heart

May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulder; Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough; Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

Finally, remember, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold under a guarantee that the first bottle will do you good. If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Leipsic, O.

BACKACHE AND DIZZINESS.

Most of the Ailments Peculiar to the Female Sex are Due to Catarrh of Pelvic Organs.

MRS. M. BRICKNER.

99 Eleventh Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

"A short time ago I found my condition very serious, I had headaches, pains in the back, and frequent dizzy spells which grew worse every month. I tried two remedies before Peruna, and was discouraged when I took the first dose, but my courage soon returned. In less than two months my health was restored."—Mrs. M. Brickner.

FEMALE TROUBLE NOT RECOGNIZED AS CATARRH.

The reason of so many failures to cure cases similar to the above is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh. Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will cure catarrh of the head will also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh.

If you have catarrh write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

FROM THE OTHER SIDE.

M. Deibler, a French executioner, is collecting material for the history of the death punishment in Europe.

It is believed that French prune growers use glycerine to give their dried fruit its peculiar glistening appearance.

In Berlin, with a population of about 2,500,000, the number of new buildings erected has averaged 2,123 a year during the last six years.

For the first time in 60 years small freight steamers are now plying on the upper Rhine, from Strassburg to Basel. The cargoes consist chiefly of coal.

More than half of Russia's profits from exports come from the sale of grain. The value of exported butter is over $16,000,000 per year; of eggs, over $26,000,000.

A warden of an old English church found in the lumber-room an ancient "jug," which proved to be an Elizabethan "stoup" of a rare kind. It was sold in London at auction for $5,511, which sufficed to make some long-needed repairs to the church building.

It is announced in a scientific journal that Prince Albert of Monaco has taken the lead in the movement for another north pole expedition on a plan suggested by Ensign Charles Benard, late of the French navy. The cost of the expedition is set down at $300,000, two ships to be employed.

AS EASY.

Needs Only a Little Thinking.

The food of childhood often decides whether one is to grow up well nourished and healthy or weak and sickly from improper food.

It's just as easy to be one as the other, provided we get a proper start.

A wise physician like the Denver Doctor who knew about food, can accomplish wonders, provided the patient is willing to help and will eat only proper food.

Speaking of this case the Mother said her little four-year-old boy was suffering from a peculiar derangement of the stomach, liver and kidneys and his feet became so swollen he couldn't take a step. "We called a Doctor who said at once we must be very careful as to his diet, as improper food was the only cause of his sickness. Sugar especially, he forbid.

"So the Dr. made up a diet and the principal food he prescribed was Grape-Nuts and the boy, who was very fond of sweet things, took the Grape-Nuts readily without adding any sugar. (Dr. explained that the sweet in Grape-Nuts is not at all like cane or beet sugar but is the natural sweet of the grains.)

"We saw big improvement inside a few days and now Grape-Nuts are almost his only food and he is once more a healthy, happy, rosy-cheeked youngster with every prospect to grow up into a strong healthy man." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The sweet in Grape-Nuts is the Nature-sweet known as Post Sugar, not digested in the liver like ordinary sugar, but predigested. Feed the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when Nature demands sweet and prompts them to call for sugar.

There's a reason.

Firemen Injured.

Nine firemen were injured and property valued at $60,000 was destroyed in a fire which broke out in a five-story building in Minneapolis. None of the firemen were fatally injured, while the fire loss is nearly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown. It was discovered by the night watchman at the Lyman-Eliel Drug company, who saw smoke issuing from the front windows in the fifth story. No sooner did the first piece of apparatus arrive at the fire than a general alarm was sounded and the battle began in earnest. No fewer than eleven hose lines were laid and every effort was made to keep the flames confined to the burning building.

Summer Schools.

Minnesota teachers' summer schools are becoming more popular each succeeding year, according to statistics compiled by J. W. Olsen, state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Olsen reports that, although the number of schools was reduced from 32 in 1003 to 29 in 190, the enrollment increased from 4,359 to 4,906, and the average daily attendance increased from 3,011 to 3,623. In spite of this increase the cost of maintaining the school fell off from $26,340 to $25,840. The per capita cost fell off from $0.05 to $5.26.

A Novel Scheme.

A sneak who has been operating in the hotels of St. Paul has a novel method of getting into the rooms. He dispenses with the use of jimmies. He asks the clerk for the key to a room. The clerk, believing him to be a guest, gives him the key. A well dressed young man asked for a key to room 03 at the Clarendon and got it. When John Haynes went to his room a suit of clothes and $4 were missing. Several similar thefts in hotels have been reported to the police.

Amusement Park.

The Interurban amusement park, which was originally scheduled to be in operation this summer, will be a certainty for next season, according to a declaration made by the promotor, George W. Porter. He now announces that land has been secured on the Como Interurban line, between Hamline and Minneapolis, but outside the corporate limits of both Minneapolis and St. Paul, and that nothing can interfere with it being in operation at the opening of the outing season next summer.

Butter Score.

First prize in the August scoring of the state butter contest was won by O. Westhig, of Mananah, whose score was 97½; second, by M. Sondegaard, who has won several former prizes, and this time scored 97; third, by Otto Hanson, of Gibbons, with a score of 96¼. The samples, as a whole, showed better in this scoring than at any previous time, there having been 32 out of 200 that scored 95 or better.

Capitol Will Be Ready.

The board of capitol commissioners hopes to have the new state capitol ready for the legislature when it meets in January, and will not call on the legislature for any further appropriations. It has about $200,000 left of the last appropriation, and with this amount will be able to complete the work still to be done on the building and the grounds.

Thomas Thut, a painter of Duluth, caught a bald eagle in a wire fence near his shop on Superior street. The fence is between the shop and the right of way of the Duluth & Iron Range road. Mr. Thut's attention was attracted the bird by a violent flapping of wings and screeching. The bird is a young one and now a captive in a cage that Mr. Thut has bought for it.

David Timpany, found unconscious on Twenty-first avenue south, Minneapolis, with six knife wounds in his back, was a victim of an enemy who intended to murder him.

ILLUSTRATIVE FOWL FABLE.

Showing That Parents Cannot Always Follow Their Children Into Society.

There was once an humble hen, who hatched out, by mistake, a flock of owls, says Judge.

Of course, so soon as the owls were big enough to make their debuts they began staying out until all hours of the night, and mingling in the giddy whirl of society.

To this, however, Mamma Hen objected, saying that she had not been brought up in such a way, and she did not believe that it was proper for her children to go gallivanting around.

At this the owl-chickens conferred among themselves, saying:

"Poor mamma! With her antecedents it naturally is hard for her to know who's whoo."

Moral—Sometimes it is difficult for the parents to enter society.

Shouting Their Praises.

Friarpoint, Miss., Aug. 22 (Special).—Cured of Bladder and Kidney Trouble after 26 years of suffering, Rev. H. H. Hatch, of this place, is telling the public the good news and shouting the praises of the remedy that cured him—Dodd's Kidney Pills. Rev. Mr. Hatch says:

"I have been suffering from Bladder and Kidney Trouble for 26 years and I have tried everything that people said would do me good. But nothing did me any good except Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I haven't felt a pain since I took Dodd's Kidney Pills. They gave me health and I feel like a new man altogether. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best I ever had."

TORTURING PAIN.

Half This Man's Sufferings Would Have Killed Many a Person, But Doan's Cured Him.

A. C. SPRAGUE.

A. C. Sprague, stock dealer, of Normal, Ill., writes: "For two whole years I was doing nothing but buying medicines to cure my kidneys. I do not think that any man ever suffered as I did and lived. The pain in my back was so bad that I could not sleep at night. I could not ride a horse, and sometimes was unable even to ride in a car. My condition was critical when I sent for Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and they cured me. Now I can go anywhere and do as much as anybody. I sleep well and feel no discomfort at all."

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

Paxtine is in powder form to dissolve in water — non-poisonous and far superior to liquid antiseptics containing alcohol which irritates inflamed surfaces, and have no cleansing properties. The contents of every box makes more Antiseptic Solution — lasts longer — goes further — has more uses in the family and does more good than any antiseptic preparation you can buy.

The formula of a noted Boston physician, and used with great success as a Vaginal Wash, for Leucorrhœa, Pelvic Catarrh, Nasal Catarrh, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, Cuts, and all soreness of mucus membrane.

In local treatment of female ills Paxtine is invaluable. Used as a Vaginal Wash we challenge the world to produce its equal for thoroughness. It is a revelation in cleansing and healing power; it kills all germs which cause inflammation and discharges.

All leading druggists keep Paxtine; price, 50c. a box; if yours does not, send to us for it. Don't take a substitute — there is nothing like Paxtine.

Mrs. Rosa Adams, niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C. S. A., wants every woman to know of the wonders accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you with pen and ink what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, suffering from the ills peculiar to the sex, extreme lassitude and that all gone feeling. I would rise from my bed in the morning feeling more tired than when I went to bed, but before I had used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to feel the buoyancy of my younger days returning, became regular, could do more work and not feel tired than I had ever been able to do before, so I continued to use it until I was restored to perfect health. It is indeed a boon to sick women and I heartily recommend it. Yours very truly, MRS. ROSA ADAMS, 819 12th St., Louisville, Ky."

Any women who are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, general debility, and nervous prostration, should know there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No other medicine for women has received such wide-spread and unqualified indorsement. No other medicine has such a record of female cures.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very pleased to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for womb and ovarian difficulties from which I have been a sufferer for years. It was the only medicine which was at all beneficial, and within a week after I started to use it, there was a great change in my feelings and looks. I used it for a little over three months, and at the end of that time I suffered no pain at the menstrual period, nor was I troubled with those distressing pains which compelled me to go to bed, and I have not had a headache since. This is nearly a year ago. I always keep a bottle on hand, and take a few doses every week, for I find that it tones up the system and keeps me feeling strong, and I never have that tired out feeling any more.

"I certainly think that every woman ought to try this grand medicine, for it would prove its worth. Yours very truly, MISS ELSIE DANFORTH, 203 De Soto St., Memphis, Tenn."

BURGLARS PREFER FRAME.

Picture Presented to Rodin, the Paris Sculptor, Is Disposed Of in Unique Manner.

An American has brought from Paris a story of Rodin, the sculptor, which the Boston Transcript relates.

"Rodin," he says, "was presented with a raw daub of a painting a month or two ago by a conceited young student. He accepted the painting gracefully, but he was much annoyed a week later to hear that the student was going about declaring:

"'Rodin says the painting I gave him is better than the Degas over his chimney.'

"Rodin decided to take down this conceited young liar. So meeting him one day at the Cafe de la Paix, he said, in the hearing of a good many mutual acquaintances:

"'My house was robbed on Sunday night. Did you hear about it?'

"'No,' said the youth. 'Was much taken?'

"'A half dozen suits of clothes, some silver, and—you know that painting of yours? Well, they cut it out of the frame and—'

"'Hurrah!' the youth interrupted, excited and pleased. 'Why, my fortune's made. The newspapers—'

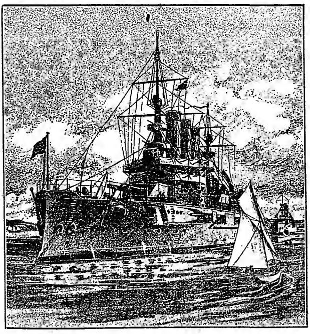
"'They cut the picture out,' Rodin continued, 'and went off with the frame.'"

LIGHTNING PHOTOS EASY.

Good Pictures May Be Obtained, But Care and Patience Are Very Essential.

Any boy or girl who has a camera and a good stock of patience may secure a photograph of lightning. The patience is needed in waiting for the lighting. When a thunder shower comes at night keep a sharp lookout for an opportunity to secure your picture. You cannot get a picture of lightning during every thunder storm. Clouds or a heavy downpour of rain often conceal the flash from view and we have "sheet lightning." It is useless to photograph this, but you may by its light get an interesting picture of the landscape. When the sharp "chain lightning" comes select a window from which you can see it well, or, if it is not raining, go out of doors and set the camera on the tripod focused as for a distant view and pointed toward that quarter of the heavens in which the lightning is most frequent. The diaphragm should be set to the largest opening that is ever used, the slide drawn and the lens uncovered as for a time exposure. Then follows a wait of one, two, five or even 20 minutes, until a bright flash comes within the field of view of the camera, when the lightning takes its own picture. Then cover the lens, push in the slide and your are ready to try again on a fresh plate.

THE BATTLESHIP LOUISIANA.



To be launched at Newport News on August 27. It is a sister ship of the Connecticut soon to be launched at the Brooklyn navy yard.

Dining in Darkness.

In France and Switzerland the latest vogue is to dine in the dark. Dinner begins as usual, but suddenly, to the surprise of the guests, the light goes out and all is left in darkness. Nothing has gone wrong, and before the guests have recovered from their astonishment the dining-room doors open, and shadowy forms steal in bearing a blazing mass of light. It is the next course illuminated. Silently the figures come to your side, and in a few moments on everyone's plate is, say, your fish, and a delicately shaded light by which to eat it; but otherwise the room remains in complete darkness.

Experts Watching America.

The Australian and German governments both have experts in Colorado this summer studying the irrigation systems of the state. Colorado is acknowledged to have the best irrigation systems in the world, and the ideas of her experts are eagerly sought by the countries of the old world, which have to deal with arid-land problems, in their colonies and at home.

Peaceful Mexico.

Having had a taste for the last 25 years of the benefits of commercial prosperity, there is no disposition among the people of Mexico to return to revolution and contention.

While it is all right to have a good dog, in their place, but their place is not on the public highway attacting peoplo, and it is poor consolation to people to have the dogs owner shout out, that the dog won't bite while he is taking a taste of the rear end of your pants.

Tom Bjoin has been a standing candidate for sheriff for the last twenty years, in one party or another and has always been trying to climb onto the tail end of the bigest band wagon so as to slide into offiee without much exertion and at a small expence. He hung around the populist conventions for a number of years looking for the crumbs that fell from the rich mans table, but notwitstanding the extreme length of his legs he was not able to mount the band wagon and fell back and lit in the democratic camp. Not finding them short of timber for official positions he filed for the nomination for sheriff on the republican ticket, and now he is reported very intimate with the new party, some call them Socialist, but it is to be hoped that they will adopt him into their tribe in the regular order and not hoist him onto the back of the republican elephant to be carried through the campaign.

The old time republicans are not taking kindly to the present fashion among the populist of Polk county to renounce their allegince to the populist party one day and the next announce their candidacy for republican nomination for office. * * It is said that the men who are changing their politicts to retnian or secure office are not as popular throughout the county as they might be. Both the republicans and populist resent their actions. —Crookston Times.

The Times strikes the right spot in the right place in the above, but it will take a good rap on the knuckles of some of them fellows at the primary election before they will understand.

The Bagley Independent has turned over the local reading colums of their paper to a man by the name of Tos. Keef, who wants to be County Attorney of Clearwater county. If Mr. Keef can succeed in making the voters believe that he is as good a man as he thinks he is himself he had ought to land the nomination. Capitol I occours so often in his artical that the printer must have exhausted his case. We quote the following from Mr. Keef. "I am sorry to admit I am not perfeet and I do not know all the law, I guess I'm only average, but if I get that office I sball not forget what law I do know. I am not a strictly temperate man and I am sorry for it". We regret that we have not the space and cap I's to quote more from Mr Keef, but one part of his plea to the voters is so amusing that it is worthy of notice, and that is that the voters of Clearwater county should not support Wm. McGlennon for the position, of County Attorney, because A. Kaiser wassupporting him. Can it be possible that with the short residence of Mr. Kaiser at Bagley that he has became the Jim Hill of Clearwater county.

WHAT DID SIMONS DO?

We would be pleased to have some of the newspapers, who are supporting L.C. Simons for renomination for representative of the sixty first district tell something that be done in the last legislature for his district. We took some pains to look up his record of two years ago and find that he put in about all his time trying to get a sugar beet bounty bill passed in the interest of manufactures in Minneapolis. Now when he wants to be re-elected he begins to talk drainage. The time for Mr. Simons and our man Krostue to bave talked drainage was when they were on that committee on drainage in the last legislature, when their constitutents came to them and asked them to assist them to get an appropriation for drainage and they not only refused to assist them but used their influence to defeat the wishes of the people who elected them. That Simons is not so popular wih the people as some of his newspapers would have us believe is proven by a short quotation from a private letter recieved from a prominent business man and politican of Thief River Falls. He says "I met and talked with Mr. Mayland, of Bagley Clearwater county and found bim to be a man of more than ordinary ability and I believe he would make a good representative. God knows we could do no worse than what we have now". Mr. Mayland is the opponent of L.C. Simons for the republican nomination September 20,.

Told of Death in Dream.

Three times did Mr. Page, a farmer of South Elmham, England, dream that Mr. Crickmore, formerly a threshing machine proprietor, had been drowned in a pond on his land. He searched the pond, but it was not till later that Crickmore was found in it. Throughout the search a little dog that accompanied Mr. Page whined piteously.

Disgusted the Sailor.

Here is a campaign story: "A sailor once left his ship and came upon the land. He wandered around and finally reached a cemetery. He came across a tombstone on which was printed, 'I am not dead, but sleeping.' The sailor read the words several times, and then said: 'Well, if I were dead I'd own up to it!'"

A pretty face and a beautiful complextion always appears after using Mark's Sarsaparilla.

Mikel Homme the McIntosh machinery dealer was doing business in this locality yesterday.

Gustov Watnebyn, of Winsor was doing business here yesterday and made this office a pleasant call.

George Singer has a fine garden and expects to make a good profit selling vegetables to the lumber camps this winter.

Prairie chickens are reported to be rather scarse in this locality. We guess they have gone to Big Dick harvesting.

There is a time for all things, so it is said. Mark's Sarsaparilla is a good blood purifier any time.

Charlie Lambert moved his threshing rig down to Hill River this week and will commence threshing for C,M.Russel next week.

He Was Afraid.

The Bride—Tell me now, dearest, when you proposed weren't you a little nervous for fear I should say "No?" The Bridegroom (who has married for money)—I should think I was. Why, I owed nearly $5,000, and my creditors were getting awfully pushing.

He Knew.

"Squeezem is a mean man."

"What makes you think so?"

"I saw him put a lead quarter in a blind man's hat this morning."

"How did you know it was lead?"

"I passed it on him yesterday."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Flattery.

He—Is there anything in the world that bores you more than flattery? She—Only one thing that I know of. He—what is that? She—Not to be flattered.

SOMEWHAT POLITICAL.

Candidates for office are said to be so thick in Clearwater county that they are becoming a detriment to the farmers who are trying to harvest their crops. If a farmer stops to listen to six candidates for sheriff, give him a good reason why he should vote for them,for office he can not do much work that day. Now we would suggest,that when they go out to talk politicts with a farmer at this season of the year that they take an extra man with them to take the farmers place in the hay field while they convince him that they are the man for sheriff.

* * * * * *

Louis Gonyea the genial candidate for county sheriff spent yesterday at East Grand Forks strengthening up his fences and preparing for the final battle at the primaries. Mr. Gonyea is well pleased with the encouragement shown him through the county and expects to land the plum. Nomination upon the republican party ticket this fall practically means election and Mr. Gonyea is quite confident that his many friends in the county will not desert him.—Crookston Journal.

No one that has been a friend of Lewis Gonyea could have any reason to desert him,and he is gaining new ones evry day, and they believe that Louis is entitled to that nomination and they are hustling to see that he gets it.

* * * * * *

Eric O.Hagen the latest to file for the nomination for County Attorney on the republican ticket for Polk county.Mr.Hagen altho a young man has built an extensive law practice in the City of Crookston,and is well qualified for the position, Should he be nominated, and elected the interest of the county would be looked after by an attorney, of honor an integrity.

MODERN MAGAZINES.

The Work That Must Be Done by a Successful Editor.

The poor editor who should be so fatuous as to depend for the contents of his magazine on the driftwood that came in to him would soon be replaced or his magazine would needs go out of business. Not only has the day gone by when editors sat in easy chairs and majestically sifted wheat from chaff in the piles of stuff sent prayerfully to them, but gone, too, is the day when an editor could sit in his office and plan a good magazine out of his inner consciousness. A good magazine today represents the skillful collaboration of several bright, keen men, or men and women, and its make-up is a nice medium between what the editors have reason to think their subscribers want and what they have reason to think their contributors can do best.

"It is an important part of good editing nowadays to keep in as close touch as possible with the greatest possible number and variety of persons who write. It is part of an editor's business to keep well informed on all the new books and all his contemporaries among the periodicals—to know (better, perhaps, than the man himself knows) what kind or kinds of work any given man can best do and to have the knowledge filed away in his memory for ready reference. It is part of his business, too, to see and talk with, whenever he can, not only the persons who are trying to write for him, but all persons whose situation in life is at all interesting in a way which ought some day to make them valuable to him.—Clara E. Laughlin in Reader.

SPORTING RIGHTS.

Were it not for the enormous sums paid for fishing and shooting rights many people of ancient names and goodly title would, in the most literal sense, have no means of livelihood whatever, and only the other day one of the best known property agents of the west end of London drew up for the writer a list of a dozen people mixing in society of an exclusive kind, every penny of whose income is derived from the letting of sporting rights.

Nearly all the money thus expended has been made in commerce, and the agent referred to above showed documentary evidence proving that there are lots of men who do not mind paying as much as £100 for every deer, £3 for every trout and £20 every salmon they kill, plus the sport of killing them. One of the most remarkable features of this letting is the fact that only about one in every hundred of the owners of ancient sporting rights ever enjoys his privileges as a sportsman. He either prefers or is compelled to part with such privileges, and those who take advantage of them are nearly all people in business.

This renting of fishing and sporting has even extended down to comparatively humble people in the provinces. Many a small Yorkshire farmer is being kept, and well kept, not by his farming, but by the letting of some comparatively insignificant sporting right.—London Tit-Bits.

Holmes' Inspiration.

There is hardly room for doubt that Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was encouraged to write his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" by reading "Table Talk"—being "The Discourses of John Selden, Esq., or His Sence of Various Matters of Weight and High Consequence Relating Especially to Religion and State." The work belongs to 1634-54 and treats of such topics as articles, baptism, Bible, bishops, books, ceremony, Christmas, clergy, confession, conscience, creed, duel, epitaph, faith and works, gentlemen, holy days, idolatry, Jews, juggling, king, law, lectures, liturgy, marriage, money, oaths, oracles, poetry, popery, presbytery, proverbs, religion, sacraments, trade, truth, university, wit and women. For the thousandth time, "Nothing new under the sun!"—New York Press.

Good Watch Stands Hard Knocks.

"The knocks a good watch may be subjected to and yet come out uninjured are most remarkable," said the jeweler as he attached his glass to one eye and peered into the workings of a timepiece. "This watch is supposed to have fallen a distance of more than a hundred feet, and I can detect not the slightest disorder. A few days ago a countryman brought a watch to me which he wished examined. He had lost it in a field, and it had lain out there, exposed to the elements, for six weeks, part of the time being submerged in water. It was in perfect condition, not even a speck of rust in the case."—Columbus Dispatch.

Animals' Love of Sweets.

This love of sweets is very common in our animal neighbors, from the bee to the horse. If you want to please a horse try giving him two or three lumps of sugar. Not only the bees, but the wasps, flies, butterflies and indeed nearly all insects, are conspicuously attracted to sweets, and it is this sweet tooth which leads the insect to visit flowers and thus help them to produce seeds.—St. Nicholas.

Your Heart

May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

One of the surest signs of a weak heart is shortness of breath after exercise. Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulder; Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough; Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

Finally, remember, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold under a guarantee that the first bottle will do you good. If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Leipsic, O.

FREE Write to us for Free Trial Package of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, the New Scientific Remedy for Pain. Also Symptom Blank. Our Specialist will diagnose your case, tell you what is wrong, and how to right it, Free. DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., LABORATORIES, ELKHART, IND.

Fibroid Tumors Cured.

A distressing case of Fibroid Tumor, which baffled the skill of Boston doctors. Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, Mass., in the following letter tells how she was cured, after everything else failed, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for Help:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice—although she advised Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, to take her medicine—which she knew would help her—her letter contained a mass of additional instructions as to treatment, all of which helped to bring about the happy result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Sometime ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt.

Mrs. Hayes at her above address will gladly answer any letters which sick women may write for fuller information about her illness. Her gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so genuine and heartfelt that she thinks no trouble is too great for her to take in return for her health and happiness.

Truly is it said that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women, and no other medicine; don't forget this when some druggist wants to sell you something else.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Saved by the Storm.

Blown into Lake Minnetonka, then lifted out of the water by the wind, hurled through the air and set down with a heavy thump on land thirty-five feet back from the shore line, was the remarkable experience of H. Bigurgen, the engineer of A. C. Loring's launch, in the tornado.

When Bigurgen saw the approach of the storm he rushed down to the dock to make everything safe.

Clinging on for dear life Bigurgen felt the launch lurch violently and then turtle. In the water and almost beneath the boat the engineer had a hard time of it. He kicked himself free and tried to swim ashore, but the waves sent him under time and again, until he was so fatigued that he sank. He went down twice and was thinking it was all over for him when out of the water he was lifted.

A minute later he sat way back on the shore numb and sore. He looked about him bewildered and began rubbing some sore spots, meanwhile wondering whether it were realy true that he was ashore, and, if so, how he got there.

Meets a Panther.

Face to face with death before an enraged panther, which he had wounded, John Drew, a resident of Itasca township near Crookston, miraculously escaped being torn to pieces.

With his wife, Drew set out to pick berries a short distance from their home. Black bears are numerous in section, and Drew took his rifle with him in the hope of killing one. The two picked berries for some time, when Drew noticed a moving object in the bushes near where they were standing. He at once grabbed his rifle and approached within thirty feet of the the animal and fired. Simutaneously with the explosion he heard a loud roar from the direction of the bushes the panther sprang toward him.

The beast passed just over his head, landing in the bushes behind him. He expected another attack, but heard the animal going in the opposite direction through the bushes.

Aid for Schools.

The number of graded schools in Minnesota entitled to the state aid has increased about 25 per cent, and the number of high schools about 12 per cent during the last year.

The state high school board at its meeting at the state capitol approved the applications of 145 graded schools and of 102 high schools for state aid. The board last year granted state aid to 121 graded schools and 151 high schools.

The law relating to state aid for schools provides for a maximum annual aid of $550 for graded schools and of $1500 to high schools, and the last legislature increased the appropriation in hope that each school might receive the maximum aid.

Dragged by a Cow.

With his leg tied to the tail of a cow which he had been milking, D. Gallagher, a farmer living on Winona Ridge, a few miles south of Winona, was dragged through a barbed wire fence and suffered injuries from which he may not recover. The flies had been bothersome and the switching of the cow's tail had tried Mr. Gallagher's patience. In order to put a stop to the trouble he tied the tail to his leg. When he resumed milking, the cow became frightened and dashed through the wire fence. Mr. Gallagher was dragged over the wires and was frightfully cut about the head and face. He was picked up in an unconscious condition.

A Queer Case.

The deputy sheriffs at the St. Louis county jail have in prospect the novel experience of ejecting a prisoner whose term has expired, simply because he will not go of his own accord. His name is John Mattson, and he has just completed a 60-day sentence for smashing windows at Ely. When told he was free, Mattson nodded but did not go, and when again reminded that he was no longer a prisoner he still pretended to not understand. It is said that Mattson has $1,000 in the bank, and the sheriff says he will charge him for his board if he does not get out pretty soon.

Murdered for $500.

The dead body of a camp foreman named Carl Pavelka, who had been working for a lumber company operating near Duluth, was found a short distance west of Woodland, a suburb of Duluth. The man had been murdered, and the crime was committed a week or ten days ago.

It is learned the murdered man had $500 when he left Duluth for the camp. His money belt had been ripped open and emptied.

News in Brief.

Minnesota farmers are taking a hand in the protection of game and fish.

James McIlraith has completed work on twelve new bridges in Polk county.

The state labor bureau will make an exhaustive inquiry into labor conditions.

The home rule charter was defeated at a special election at Winona by 359 votes.

The body of an undentified man about forty years of age was found in the pesthouse, forty rods from the St. Gabriel's hospital, Little Falls. Indications show that he died of natural causes two or three months ago.

NOTES FROM NATURALISTS.

Ants have a horror of ultra-violet rays.

Doctor Kirkland reckons that in 90 days a toad will destroy 9,720 injurious insects.

The rose grows wild all over Europe, in Africa as low as Abyssinia, in Asia to and through India and in North America to the edge of Mexico.

The little tailor-bird not only sews but spins, weaving raw cotton into thread for its purposes. With this thread it sews and actual stitches a sack of leaves in which to rear its young.

Indiarubber trees which are tapped every other day continue to yield say for more than 20 years; and it is a curious fact that the oldest and most frequently tapped trees produce the richest sap.

A remarkable instance of mimicry in fishes is described by Dr. A. Willey in Spolia Zeylanica. The Cingalese fishes known as sea bats have leaf-shaped and leaf-colored bodies, and when in danger they sink gently and inertly to the bottom, just like a leaf.

Monkeys are very numerous along the northwest coast of South America, but are not found west of the Andes from northern Peru to the south end of the continent. Their home in South America is chiefly in the forests of Venezuela throughout the great Amazon basin and along the fluvial systems of the upper half of the Paraguay and the Parana rivers. A little south of the junction of these two rivers they disappear and the greater part of Uraguay and Argentina regard them as a curosity to be exhibited in traveling shows.

MUSICIANS, ACTORS, WRITERS.

Kubelik, Bohemian violinist, is said to have made over $500,000 in the last three years.

Sarasate is 60 years old now, and has played on the same violin since he was 12 years of age.

Mme. Rostand, wife of the famous French author and playwright, is about to issue a volume of her own poems.

Mlle. Marthe Dupay, whose remarkable volume of sonnets has won the Sully Prudhomme prize, lives in an attic.

Joseph Jefferson says he was hissed off the stage once. He was four years old, and tried to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

A manuscript by the composer Palestrina was stolen some time ago in the Roman Lateran. It is valued at $25,000, and is believed to be in Germany.

Actors belonging to the Court theater, Vienna, are not allowed to perform for charitable purposes except in payment of a certain fixed fee, which is handed over to the pension fund of their theater.

F. Hopkinson Smith recently remarked: "If I can tell the whole story of my novel in five minutes at a dinner table and secure the undivided attention of my listeners, I know that it is good. If I fail to do this, my work will be in vain."

Lieut. W. E. Safford, recently of the navy, but now of the department of agriculture, has about 200 books from the library of the late Robert Louis Stevenson. Among them is the Bible which belonged to Stevenson's father. He bought the books in Samoa.

Few Americans can boast of so long and distinguished an ancestry as Mrs. H. A. Mitchell Keays, author of "He That Eateth Bread with Me." She recently received a letter from a distant relative interested in genealogy which contained Mrs. Keays' family tree written out, showing its roots reaching back to Henry III. of England.

SHORT AND SENSIBLE.

A song in the heart is worth two in the choir.

The true soldier is always ready to help put a stop to the fighting.

It is said that the Turks were the first to bury their dead in cemeteries adorned with ornamental headstones.

LEARNING THINGS

We Are All in the Apprentice Class.

When a simple change of diet brings back health and happiness the story is briefly told. A lady of Springfield, Ill., says: "After being afflicted for years with nervousness and heart trouble, I received a shock four years ago that left me in such a condition that my life was despaired of. I could get no relief from doctors nor from the numberless heart and nerve medicines I tried because I didn't know that the coffee was daily putting me back more than the Drs. could put me ahead.

"Finally at the request of a friend I left off coffee and began the use of Postum and against my convictions I gradually improved in health until for the past 6 or 8 months I have been entirely free from nervousness and those terrible sinking, weakening spells of heart trouble.

"My troubles all came from the use of coffee which I drunk from childhood and yet they disappeared when I quit coffee and took up the use of Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many people marvel at the effects of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum but there is nothing marvelous about it—only common sense.

Coffee is a destroyer—Postum is a rebuilder. That's the reason.

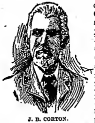
Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.



J. B. CORTON.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Deppe, N. C., says: "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor even ride in easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to anyone suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so."

Fifth, W. H. Williams of Minneapolis.

Sixth, Cleve W. Van Dyke of Alexandria.

Seventh, Mr. Williams of Marshall.

Eighth, Martin Hughes of Hibbing.

Ninth, no nomination.

Minneapolis, Aug. 30.—Harmony characterized the opening proceedings of the democratic state convention in the International auditorium. The Hearst and anti-Hearst forces locked arms and looked pleasant. Captain W. H. Harries of Caledonia, was elected temporary chairman without opposition, and in a stirring speech he called the attention of the delegates to the opportunity presented in this state. The opening remarks of Chairman Buck also emphasized the need of a strong state ticket, which would command the votes of republicans as well as democrats.

Spectators were few, but nearly the full complement of delegates was in attendance when Chairman Buck called to order at 12:30 this afternoon.

M. T. Buck eulogized the democracy of Thomas Jefferson. "I hope Jeffersonian democracy will ever hold true," he said, "and the time will never come when republicans will have to be put on the ticket to bring democracy to greater success.

"Let us elect good democrats; good men for office and people, and if the people decide they don't want them, it's their fault and not ours. Let us place in nomination a ticket that will appeal to good democracy and all people of the state. Let us not throw out any delegations entitled to seats here. So today let us make a choice of men able to carry out the business of their offices honestly, and in the interests of all the people, and no one faction."

John E. Stryker was first recognized by the chair and in a brief eulogistic address, nominated Captain W. H. Harries, of Caledonia for permanent chairman. There were no other nominations and Captain Harries was nominated by acclamation. Mr. Stryker, J. R. Corrigan of Minneapolis and T. T. Hudson of Duluth acted as a committee to escort Captain Harries to the chair. Captain Harries was received with much applause as he stepped on the stage.

Recess was taken until 2:30 p. m.

At 3:35 this afternoon the democratic state convention succeeded in nominating a candidate for governor. W. S. Hammond of St. James, in a short, eloquent address, presented the name of John A. Johnson of St. Peter as a candidate for the party, the speaker characterizing him as a man whose party loyalty had never been questioned, who had been faithful in office, whose character and reputation are white and clean.

The nomination was received with great enthusiasm. Delegates rose in their seats, cheering and raising their hats in their enthusiasm. Seconding speeches were made by Frank Brady of Hennepin county, T. J. McDermot, St. Paul, and Martin Hughes of Hibbing.

John A. Johnson is the first candidate for the office of governor of Minnesota who was born in the state.

A committee, consisting of L. A. Rosing, Cannon Falls, Ald. L. Rand of Minneapolis, and C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul, was appointed to wait upon Mr. Johnson and bring him before the convention, after the nomination had been made by acclamation.

After the cheering for Mr. Johnson had subsided, Judge J. R. Corrigan of Minneapolis placed the name of F. G. Winston of Minneapolis, the nominee for lieutenant governor, before the convention. He said that Mr. Winston was not only known in Minnesota, but throughout the northwest. He was respected by business and laboring men alike.

Mr. Winston was nominated unanimously and with as great a show of enthusiasm as the candidate for governor.

Before Mr. Winston's nomination had been acted upon, John A. Johnson was ushered into the hall by the special reception committee. His entrance was the signal for an outburst of long and prolonged fury.

John E. King of Red Lake Falls was placed in nomination for secretary of state by T. D. O'Brien of St. Paul, and on motion of a delegate from Mower county the nomination of Mr. King was made unanimous. Lars M. Pond of Minneapolis nominated Thomas J. McDermott of St. Paul for attorney general, and a seconding speech was made by T. D. O'Brien of St. Paul. Mr. McDermott was nominated by acclamation. John W. McCaffery of La Crescent, J. D. Sullivan of St. Cloud and J. M. Hawthorne of St. Paul escorted the nominee to the platform.

Frank A. Doy, of Fairmont, nominated Frank Zins, of St. Cloud, for state treasurer, but on the statement of J. D. Sullivan, of St. Cloud, that Mr. Zins' health did not permit him to accept the nomination, his name was withdrawn, and Byron J. Mosier, of Stillwater, was put in nomination, named by acclamation, and escorted to the platform by J. A. McDermott, of Yellow Medicine county, Frank A. Day, of Fairmont, and Major J. W. Bowler, of Minneapolis.

The next order of business was the nomination of four justices of the supreme court, and on motion of Pierce Butler of St. Paul the following committee was named to decide on the nominees: First congressional district, F. D. Meighen of Albert Lea; Second, T. J. Knox of Lakefield; Third, Senator Julius Coller of Shakopee; Fourth, Pierce Butler of St. Paul; Fifth, Orville Rinehart of Minneapolis; Sixth, J. D. Sullivan of St. Cloud; Seventh, L. A. Purse of Morris; Eighth, Fred L. Ryan of Duluth; Ninth, John L. Townley of Fergus Falls.

Mr. Johnson made a terse and able talk.

The following were chosen as presidential electors:

First District—John Frann, Le Roy, Mower county.

Second District—D. D. Murphy, Blue Earth, Faribault county.

Third District—Geo. W. Bachelder, Faribault.

Fourth District—Henry F. Wessel, St. Paul.

Fifth District—T. W. Parsons, Minneapolis.

Sixth District—Jas. D. McKenna, Wadena.

Seventh District—Ray G. Farrington, Ortonville.

Eighth District—A. C. Weis, Duluth.

Ninth District—John E. Olstrom, Warren.

Electors at Large—Swan J. Turnblad, Minneapolis, and Timothy O'Connor, Renville.

During the recess the congressional delegations held caucuses. William F. Kelso, of Hallock, was decided on as the ninth district's choice for railroad commissioner. John E. Ostrom of Warren was selected as presidential elector. William E. Rowe of Crookston was offered the congressional nomination, but declined, and the place was left open.

The first district nominated H. D. Nelson of Hayward for congress.

In the fourth, or St. Paul, district Henry F. Wood was named as presidential elector. The congressional nomination was left until later in the afternoon.

R. E. O'Dell of Minneapolis, stirred up a little excitement by placing James J. Hill in nomination for elector at large as opposed to Mr. O'Connor. He dwelt for a time on the good that Mr. Hill had done for Minnesota and the northwest and said that he would occupy the same position on the democratic ticket that Thomas Lowry does on the republican.

After Mr. O'Dell had finished, C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul, withdrew the name saying that Mr. Hill had repeatedly stated that he would be a candidate for no political office.

The work of the committee on resolutions need not take long, as a preliminary draft of the platform has already been made. It carries with it an indorsement of the national platform and ticket adopted at St. Louis, and pays particular attention to the subjects of tariff revision, reciprocity and increased government control of railroad rates. A special appeal is made on these issues, on account of the sentiment existing in Minnesota.

Coming to state issues, the platform urges the adoption of the 4 per cent gross earnings bill, and calls for increased powers for the railroad and warehouse commission, so that it may fix railroad rates within the state and that its orders shall be considered as prima facie evidence that the rate is reasonable. This will have the effect of putting the rates into effect at once, pending litigation. This law is urged by the Municipal and Commercial league.

The platform calls for a taxation amendment to the constitution, which will permit the adoption of the income tax and otherwise equalizing the tax burdens of the state.

A strong plank is inserted indorsing the enforcement of laws against the consolidation of parallel and competing lines of railroad, and committing the party to the principle of competition.

The platform contains an eight-hour paragraph, urged by organized labor.

The republican party is censured for the nomination of R. C. Dunn for governor and Ray W. Jones for lieutenant governor, in the face of the records against the nominees.

Another plank declares for the principle of a non-partizan judiciary, and condemns the republican party for trafficking in places on the supreme bench.

TEAS THAT ARE WORTH FORTUNES

Twelve Hundred Kinds Are in China's Show at the World's Fair—The Most Populous Nation of the World For the First Time Makes an Exhibit Worthy of Her Greatness.

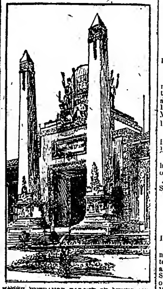
Many expositions of stupendous character make up the World's Fair of 1904. Each part is a vast and distinct show. Each building shelters many acres of wonderful things—wonderful because they are the choicest of their kind. Every nation on the globe is represented. Every state and territory is here with its best and making the most of its greatest opportunity.

The fact that China has not been a large exhibitor at world's fairs gives to her great exhibit here a prominence quite exceptional. It is a wonderland of ingenious productions. We know China best by reason of her extensive exports of teas, which have found a vast market in the United States for generations. Her commercial interests therefore prompted her to make a display of teas that we should not forget.

In sealed glass jars China displays in the Liberal Arts Palace some 1,200 kinds of tea. Young Hyson and Old Hyson have a string of tea relations longer than the genealogical chain of a Plymouth Rock. They are neatly selected "chops," in the language of the tea farmer, and these classes do not embrace medicinal teas, which are quite another lot in the rather modest number of 400.

The teas exhibited vary in price from a few cents a pound to some rare and exclusive kinds that are worth their weight in gold, the tea in the latter cases being placed on one side of the scales and pure gold on the other—that is to say, the tea of this expensive kind is worth about $20 gold an ounce. Only a very small quantity of this exclusive leaf is exhibited, and it is grown in carefully guarded tea plantations or gardens right under the shadows of the great wall of China. Its cultivation is prohibited for any use save for the imperial family of China and a few of the favored high officials.

Mention has been made of the word "chop" in connection with tea, and it may be interesting to the everyday reader to know what the word actually signifies. The tea leaf is grown in various districts of the Chinese empire on large areas of ground which are often mistaken for single plantations. This is hardly ever the case, as the large tracts are very often owned by hundreds of different men, whose individual plots of ground bearing the tea plants are carefully mapped out, so that each individual owner may cultivate and pick his own crop of tea. Each owner likewise markets his own tea and puts his own special mark, or "chop," on the packages. Hence the term "chop" signifies an individual growth or picking of tea by one owner. In an area of tea land of, say, a thousands acres, all apparently under one ownership, there may be some forty, fifty or more owners of the plantation and consequently a like number of "chops" of tea.



NORTH ENTRANCE PALACE OF MINES AND METALLURGY, WORLD'S FAIR.

It must not be imagined that all these different owners of the tea get the same price for their commodity—far from it, as each of these individual tea growers has his own secrets for improving the quality and flavor of tea. Take, for instance, the Amoy and Fuchau districts, whence most of the tea for the United States comes. The owners of "chops" of tea varying from 10 to 200 chests of 56 pounds each bring samples of their goods to the various foreign merchants for sale. These latter turn the Chinese tea growers over to the good offices of the foreign or American professional tea taster, who passes on the goods as to price. The tea taster has the samples infused, not boiled, in his presence and passes upon the quality, flavor, twang and manner of curling, fixing a price accordingly, from which there is never any variation and which the tea grower must accept or go elsewhere to dispose of his wares. In a single tract of tea land like the one cited above the price has ranged from 14 cents, the lowest, to 48½ cents, the highest, per pound among sixty-one different tea producers. A matter of great moment that also figures in the price of tea is that very often tea from the same district will have the various "chops" blended together in order to produce special flavors.

Mrs.Aust was a passenger on Wednesdays stage on her return from the state fair and a visit with friends at Minneapolis.

Hans C. Berg commenced his falls threshing on the Chester prairie on the rented lands of S. Pelka Wednesday afternoon.

Congressman Steenerson put in a few days hunting prairie chickens in Eden Township last week, and it is reported that he killed a chicken.

Lars Sand started shock threshing on the farm of Knut Lovedahl Wednesday. The wheat is of fair quality and yields better than last year.

George Singer will commence building his new farm residence at Owl grove, on the newly opened reservation lands in October, and expects to have it ready to live in this winter.

We noted in our travels through the towns of Equality and Johnson, where the grain is later than here, that the oat crop has not suffered as much from rust as the wheat and will be a heavy crop.

S. A. Tennyson, of Pine Lake Township was doing business here Tuesday. Mr.Tennyson is a candidate for County Commissioner from the 5th District of Clearwater county and made arrangements to ask the voters of that District for their support in the colums of their local paper.

Albert Bakkens new threshing machine seperator, which he patented and manufactured at McIntosh, and shipped to St. Thomas North Dakota, is said to meet with his fondest expectations as a grain thresher. The machine is a monster in size being larger than the ordinary grain seperator, and does faster work. Mr.Bakken expects to realize a big profit from his patent.

George Singer, S. Pelka, and ye editor made a trip up on the new reservation lands in Township 152 Range 40, on Saturday and Sunday last. Mr. Singer and his son Eddy have bought one half section of land on section's 17 and 20 of this town and are well pleased with their location. Eddy has a farm such as the eastern man has made up his mind to homestead before coming to Minnesota, with 60 acre's prairie, 60 arcre's timber and 40 acre's of fine meadow land. We shall not attempt to give a lengthly description of the land, but will make a more extensive examination of it later and may try to buy a small chunk of it at the sale in October.

SOMEWHAT POLITICAL.

GIVE HIM A LIFT.

J. A. Gregerson, of Fertile is the opponent of Vanet for the republican nomination for county treasurer. Of him the Fertile Journal says. "He was urged to enter the race by prominent and influential republicans in Crookston and throughout the county. Mr.Gregerson has been a life-long republican and one who has alwas worked hard for the advancment of his party. He is capable and is in every way qualified to fill the duties of the office he aspires to".

Now that Mr.Gregerson comes from Fertile and is the only one they are asking for, and the party is in no wise indebted to Mr. Vanet, we move that we in this corner of the county give the said J. A, Gregerson a lift of a few hundred votes at the primary election September 20th.

* * * * *

As the time for the primary election draws nere the people of Hill River, Eden, Chester, Johnson and Gully should remember, that B. S. Bennett got them some help from the state to huild roads in the last legislature, and will undouhtly get more in the next session for dainage. Turn out to the primary election Sept.20th and put your X opposit the name of B. S. Bennett for representative.

Old Tree Superstitions.

The old Teutonic and Saxon races in central and northern Europe, before the introduction and spread of Christianity, had a great veneration for trees. They would never willingly damage them. Under large trees, especially old oaks, the great councils were held and judgment given, and the graves of this people were found in groves, they always being buried under the roots of a tree. This all was a result of the superstition that their gods lived in those trees. In the linden tree Berchta dwelt, a benign spirit who took charge of the babies and rocked their cradles when the nurses fell asleep; in the oak, Donar, the thunder god; in the willows all sorts of spirits, in the elder trees the dwarfs. Whenever the festivals of these gods were celebrated their trees were decorated with lights, wreaths and questen (tassels), and offerings were hung in the branches, which, however, were plundered again when the festival was over, the gods being supposed only to appropriate the best.

The Camel as a Soldier.

The camel is a good soldier, says a London writer. It may be stupidity, and it may be bravery, but a camel is as steady under fire as a tower. The Persians mounted small cannon on the backs of their camels and called them zambwahs, or "little wasps." This fashion was adopted in India, and after the battle of Sobraon 2,000 of these artillery camels were captured. In the Indian mutiny the British had a camel corps of 150 beasts, and on the back of each camel sat a Scotch highlander in his kilt. In 1845 Sir Charles Napier had a camel corps in Sindh, and in one day he marched seventy-five miles, defeated a brigand chief and marched home again. In 1878 the British used camels against the Afghans, and the government paid for 50,000 camels that died in those campaigns. Many of these were driven to death by their owners in order that they might claim the government bounty.

Monster Beds.

Though the beds of the royal personages of England were elaborately carved and hung with rich curtains even so late as the Tudor period, it is recorded that King Henry VIII.'s bed contained only straw beneath all its finery. A curious order exists as to precautions to be taken against the possibility of intended mischief to the royal person in the making of the bed, for the usher was to search the straw through with a dagger, "that there be none untruth therein, and to tumble over on the down bed for the better search thereof." The bed of Henry VIII. was nearly eleven feet square, and of even more generous dimensions is the great bed to which Shakespeare refers in a well known passage in "Twelfth Night," which was twelve feet square. This "great bed of Ware" has been a marvel for centuries.

He Sent Another.

A few years ago a well known lawyer remitted in settlement of an account to the publisher of a paper a two dollar bill, which was returned with the brief statement:

"This note is counterfeit; please send another."

Two months passed before hearing from the lawyer again, when he apologized for the delay, saying:

"I have been unable until now to find another counterfeit two dollar bill, but hope the one now inclosed will suit, professing at the same time my inability to discover what the objection was to the other, which I thought as good a counterfeit as I ever saw."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rise Above Your Troubles.

No matter what cares, anxieties or sorrows may vex or sadden you, do not prove yourself a weakling by going down before them, but show yourself noble in rising above them and molding them to life's purpose. Rather bear an insult than give one; rather dry a tear than cause one to be shed. How many celebrities we would have if men would be as anxious to make their own fame as they are to unmake the fame of others.

Nothing Left.

"I have had lots of friends who were guilty of mutilating books they had borrowed from me, but my latest experience was the most novel of all."

"What was it?"

"I lent Mrs. Blanks my dictionary a few days ago, and yesterday she returned it without a word!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Its Beauties.

"Do you now appreciate the beauties of civilization?"

"Yes," answered the barbarian. "Civilization is a great institution. But, as in the case of other large enterprises, it's usually best to be one of the promoters and get in on the ground floor."—Washington Star.

The Game of Trinquet.

Popular among the Basque peasantry is an ancient game known as trinquet. No one knows the origin of trinquet. Like all Basque customs, it can be traced back and back till its history is lost in the remote past. Nearly every court in the country bears the aspect of extreme age. The court at Bayonne is believed to be 400 years old, and the one at St. Jean de Luz looks older than the one at Bayonne. When Louis XIV., who was married in St. Jean de Luz church, went down to the little frontier town to meet his Spanish bride, he found the Basques of St. Jean de Luz energetically playing their ancient game, and he took the idea back with him to Paris, and from it, largely modified, comes the game of tennis. Tennis and trinquet are very similar, save that instead of a racket another arrangement, known as a glove, is used for propelling the ball.—Country Life.

Your Heart

May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

One of the surest signs of a weak heart is shortness of breath after exercise.

Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulder; Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough; Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Leipsic, O.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Peculiar Death.

In a friendly contest of strength at the Greek picnic at Excelsior Anargiras Moureres was struck by a rock thrown by P. G. Boosalis and sustained injuries from which he died shortly afterwards.

A number of the young men of the party were gathered together on the picnic grounds and were hurling a huge rock as a test of their strength. A large crowd of persons had gathered to witness the performance and were standing close to the contestants, leaving a narrow opening through which to hurl the rock.

P. G. Boosalis, a young man of nineteen years had just hurled the rock when Monreres, who was standing in the front line of spectators stepped forward. The rock struck him in the head knocking him to the earth and fracturing his skull. The injured young man was taken to Dr. Miles and every thing possible was done to restore him to consciousness. He was struck by the rock at 4 o'clock and died at 6 o'clock.

Important Part.

The state farm school of Minnesota is to play an important part in the Plant and Stock Exhibition to be given in September and October at the Lousiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louie and under the auspices of the American Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations. Prof. Hays, Dean Liggett and Miss Shepard of the farm school will have charge of important departments in the unique exhibit in which fifty colleges and experiment stations will participate.

The exhibitions will be given in the spacious Live Stock Congress Hall and will be under the direction of Dean J. H. Shepard of the North Dakota College of Agriculture. It will be a practical exposition of plant and animal feeding and breeding. It will be a intensely realistic in its presentation of the best methods of plant and animal culture.

Another Explosion.

As two launches were straining every bolt and crank as they puffed along nose and nose within two feet of the finish in the motor races held at Excelsior—a sudden grind, a quick stop and one boat shot across the line, while from the other came a sharp crack and a blinding spurt of flames as the vessel lay motionless on the water.

The third launch explosion of the season occurred at Lake Minnetonka when C. A. Vandever's boat, the Kenuyota, narrowly escaped being burned to the water's edge and tho the probable infliction of serious loss of life

Important Scheme.

A scheme of great importance to Becker county and involving much capital has been begun in district court. The immense water power of the Otter Tail river is to be utilized by a company of capitalits to run the electric plant at Detroit and to supply power to other business concerns.

The syndicate consists of J. K. West and E. G. Holmes of Detroit, and several other wealthy men who have secured title to a large tract of land near Detroit and seven miles north of Frazee on both sides of the Otter Tail river. A dam of large proportions with a huge reservoir will be constructed.

The Ball Glanced.

A peculiar and probably fatal accident occurred on a farm dear Louisville. Wm. Karsten, a thresher, was shot in the pupil of his right eye with a 22-caliber bullet, which lodged so near his brain that an operation cannot be performed without causing his death.

George Gronewald, a bright boy of 12, was shooting at some ducks on a pond by which the threshing outfit was passing. The belief is that the bullet glanced from the water and struck Mr. Karsten, who was about a block away.

Mr. Karsten is now in a hospital at Rochester lying between life and death.

Killed by Cars.

Hugo Johnson, son of State Senator C. H. Johnson of St. Peter, was killed at Wentworth in a railroad accident. Johnson with his sister, was going to the state fair. The train at that point stopped to take on several additional cars. Johnson was standing on the the platform of the rear coach when the extra coach was backed down the track with great speed towards the waiting train.

There was a terrific crash when the collision came, and the two cars were partially telescoped. Johnson was caught in the wreck and died within five minutes.

News in Brief.

Captain Frank A. Peterson of the Minneapolis fire department committed suicide.

Purse snatchers have been working in Minneapolis for the past few days successfully.

Judge John A. Lovely will accept the democratic nomination for judge of the supreme court.

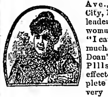
Of the 500 students who have already registered at the "U" at least 400 are young women.

Pickpockets began operations at the union depot, St. Paul, despite the presence of the corps of extra blue coats and detectives who are in wait for just such thieves. G. H. Coykendall, a uniformed gateman, was one of the victims. He was robbed of a gold watch valued at $50.

James MacMillan of Minneapolis yesterday received a message from F. W. Taylor, superintendent of the departments of agriculture and horticulture at the St. Louis fair, requesting him to accept the position of juror of that award at the Louisiana Purchase exposition.

FROM MISERY TO HEALTH.

A Prominent Club Woman, of Kansas City, Writes to Thank Doan's Kidney Pills for a Quick Cure.



Miss Nellie Davis, of 1216 Michigan Ave., Kansas City, Mo., society leader and club woman, writes: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, for they effected a complete cure in a very short time when I was suffering from kidney troubles brought on by a cold. I had severe pains in the back and sick headaches, and felt miserable all over. A few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills made me a well woman, without an ache or pain, and I feel compelled to recommend this reliable remedy."

REPORTED OF RAILWAYS.

Railroads in Argentina are making favorable progress, it is reported, under the direction of English capitalists.

For several years a record has been kept of the wear of locomotive wheels on the Danish state railways. The single drivers are found to run better than four-coupled, the latter better than six-coupled, and in all cases wear is increased by flimsiness of road.

The Prussian state railroads during their fiscal year ending with March last earned $24,013,962 more than during the previous year, a seven per cent. increase. This is nearly $30,000,000 more than was estimated when the year began, there having been meanwhile a marked improvement in business in the country.

The German government railroad exhibit at the St. Louis fair shows the block system and switch signals now in use in Germany. More than 1,500 feet of track, in the construction of which both iron and wooden ties were used, have been laid. There are a station house, two switch towers and one intermediate block signal post.

Since 1880 the population of the south has increased about 60 per cent., while its manufactured products have increased by 251 per cent. Railroad mileage has increased 191 per cent., and the production of pig iron 731 per cent. In the coal industry alone the output has jumped since 1880 from $6,000 annually to $62,000,000. The development has been steady in all lines.

The last railroad built in India has American rails. Americans export their iron and motors, their machinery, and galvanic wires to South Africa, Egypt, too has more than one Philadelphia bridge. Three hundred railroad cars from Jersey City have found their way into the land of the Pharaohs, and in the foundries of Pittsburg electrical tramways were forged to connect Cairo with the pyramids.

The Oroyo railroad, which now runs from Callao to the gold fields of Cerro de Pasco, is considered one of the wonders in the Peruvian world. Commencing in Callao, it ascends the narrow valley of the Rimac, rising nearly 5,000 feet in the first 56 miles. Thence it goes through the intricate gorges of the Sierras till it tunnels the Andes at an altitude of 15,645 feet, the highest point in the world where a piston rod is moved by steam. This elevation is reached in 78 miles.

BUILDING FOOD

To Bring the Babies Around.

When a little human machine (or a large one) goes wrong, nothing is so important as the selection of food which will always bring it around again.

"My little baby boy fifteen months old had pneumonia, then came brain fever, and no sooner had he got over these than he began to cut teeth and, being so weak, he was frequently thrown into convulsions," says a Colorado mother.

"I decided a change might help, so took him to Kansas City for a visit. When we got there he was so very weak when he would cry he would sink away and seemed like he would die.

"When I reached my sister's home she said immediately that we must feed him Grape-Nuts and, although I had never used the food, we got some and for a few days gave him just the juice of Grape-Nuts and milk. He got stronger so quickly we were soon feeding him the Grape-Nuts itself and in a wonderfully short time he fattened right up and became strong and well.

"That showed me something worth knowing and, when later on my girl came, I raised her on Grape-Nuts and she is a strong, healthy baby and has been. You will see from the little photograph I send you what a strong, chubby youngster the boy is now, but he didn't look anything like that before we found this nourishing food. Grape-Nuts nourished him back to strength when he was so weak he couldn't keep any other food on his stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

All children can be built to a more sturdy and healthy condition upon Grape-Nuts and cream. The food contains the elements nature demands, from which to make the soft gray filling in the nerve centers and brain. A well fed brain and strong, sturdy nerves absolutely insure a healthy body.

The state auditor issued a warrant for $14,000, which was appropriated by the legislature for the various fair associations of the state. This amount will be apportioned among fifty-two associations.

A fire was discovered in the new school house at Hills, and is supposed to have been set by tramps, who thought that by attracting the citizens to the building some business house down-town could be robbed.

A spark from the engine used by the Kern threshing crew ignited a stack of grain on D. J. Hooley's farm near Lily Lake, and the blaze destroyed 1,000 bushels of oats and the separator. The machinery was valued at $900.

"I guess my heart is beating for about the last time," said Peter Rasch, faintly, to M. F. O'Connor, fellow workman in the Great Northern shops at Gladstone, as he sank to the floor. And his premonition was fulfilled, for he died almost immediately after he had uttered the words.

Mrs. Weisslitz, president of the German Womans' Club of Buffalo, N. Y., after doctoring for two years, was finally cured of her kidney trouble by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless prompt and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave careful study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made sure that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was certain to control that dreaded disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women.

Read What Mrs. Weisslitz Says.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years my life was simply a burden, I suffered so with female troubles, and pains across my back and loins. The doctor told me that I had kidney troubles and prescribed for me. For three months I took his medicines, but grew steadily worse. My husband then advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and brought home a bottle. It is the greatest blessing ever brought to our home. Within three months I was a changed woman. My pain had disappeared, my complexion became clear, my eyes bright, and my entire system in good shape."—MRS. PAULA WEISSLITZ, 176 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Proof that Kidney Trouble can be Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel very thankful to you for the good your medicine has done me. I had doctored for years and was steadily growing worse. I had trouble with my kidneys, and two doctors told me I had Bright's disease; also had falling of the womb, and could not walk a block at a time. My back and head ached all the time, and I was so nervous I could not sleep; had hysteria and fainting spells, was tired all the time, had such a pain in my left side that I could hardly stand at times without putting my foot on something.

"I doctored with several good doctors, but they did not help me any. I took, in all, twelve bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, five boxes of Liver Pills, and used three packages of Sanative Wash, and feel like a new woman, can eat and sleep well, do all my own work, and can walk two miles without feeling over tired. The doctors tell me that my kidneys are all right now. I am so happy to be well, and I feel that I owe it all to your medicine."—MRS. OPAL STRONG, Dalton, Mass.

ENORMOUS SIZE. BIGGER THAN EVER. 1,200 large 8x12 pages, over 100,000 quotations, over 10,000 illustrations. Our new and marvelously low price making policy fully explained; 65 vast merchandise departments fully represented, much larger than ever before; prices much lower than ever before. New and lower prices on everything carried and sold in the largest store in the world. Makes all other catalogues look very small. Makes all other prices look very high.

WHAT BELONGS TO YOU is given to one section of the Big Book. If you have ever bought anything from us, or if you ever do buy anything from us, then something in this big business belongs to you and it is all explained in a 16-page section of the big book. This part of the big book is YOURS, not OURS; The most liberal offer ever heard of.

16 PAGES—YOUR PAGES devoted to explaining how you can make money by sending to us for goods. How you can make money by getting others to send to us. A big chance for dealers. Money making made easy for everyone. The grandest offer of the age. An opportunity that is yours—something that belongs to you.

QUICKER SHIPMENT than any other house. As we carry in stock constantly all kinds of merchandise in amounts far greater than all other mail order houses combined and we have factories and warehouses for immediate shipment South, North, East and West, we can ship you goods much quicker than any other house. If you send your order to us, no matter where you live, you will get your goods in just a few days, usually less than one-half the time it takes to get goods from other houses, and on a great many goods you order from us you will have less than one-half the freight charges you would have to pay if you ordered from anyone else, for if your order contains goods we can ship from one of our factories or warehouses near you, we will ship from the warehouse nearest you, bringing the goods to you in a day or two at a very low freight rate.

OURS IS THE LARGEST MAIL ORDER HOUSE IN THE WORLD. We sell and ship more goods than all other mail order houses in the United States combined. Other mail order houses are mere side shows compared with ours. If everyone only knew how much greater values we give on all kinds of merchandise than any other house, no other mail order house would ever again get even a single order.

THE ONLY MAIL ORDER HOUSE that owns or controls a vast number of factories located north, south, east and west, situated so that we can ship many goods from our factory or warehouse nearest you, making quick delivery and very low freight charges. Southern factories and warehouses for southern people. Northern factories and warehouses for northern people, etc.

OUR FREE BIG No. 114 CATALOGUE explains why, as compared with any other house, we can make prices so much lower, ship so much quicker, freight charges so much lower, quality so much higher, why we can give every customer a big money making opportunity.

SEND FOR OUR FREE No. 114 CATALOGUE. Cut this ad. out and send to us, or on a postal card say, "Send me your No. 114 Catalogue" and the big book will go to you by return mail postpaid, free; all our new offers, our new money making propositions to opportunity never before known, all will go to you free by return mail, postpaid. THE WEEK'S NEWS

Happenings of the Past Seven Days in Brief.

ROUND ABOUT THE WORLD

Casualties and Fires, Personal and Political Notes, Business Failures and Resumptions, Weather Record.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

Wash Bradley, the confessed negro murderer of Mrs. N. B. Barrow, was strung up to a tree by a mob at Brunson, Fla., and his body riddled with bullets after his ears had been severed from his head.

Striking packing-house workers in New York voted to give up the struggle, and their action is expected by the Chicago packers to convince others that the cause of the unions is lost.

Opening day in the Chicago public schools showed big gains in the attendance at nearly all buildings, the total enrollment being 220,000.

Ten thousand knights templar paraded in San Francisco cheered by throngs of spectators who crowded the streets.

The government weekly crop report says corn has made fair progress, but much of the crop is late in maturing. Rains interfere with spring harvest and cause rust in the northern part of the wheat region.

Eight persons were killed and over 50 injured in the wrecking near Pendleton, Mo., of a Wabash train carrying 500 visitors to the world's fair in St. Louis.

Butcher workmen of Chicago cast a majority of ballots apparently in favor of continuing the strike. The men in other cities are believed to favor peace.

William E. Neal, under indictment for the murder last winter of Assistant Commonwealth Attorney James K. Spreader, shot and killed his wife, Neillo Robinson Neal, at Louisville, Ky., and then ended his own life.

Day Dunning, president of the defunct Citizens' bank at Mount Ayr, Ia., was indicted for fraudulent banking. The failure of his bank last spring was sensational, involved about $200,000 loss and seriously crippled Mount Ayr business interests.

J. D. Underwood, general manager of the Rogers Wheel company, dropped dead in Lebanon, Ky. Mr. Underwood, who was 55 years old, was apparently in good health.

It has been decided that until the close of the world's fair, school children will be admitted for ten cents each.

J. Samuel McCue, mayor of Charlottesville, Va., has been arrested for the alleged murder of his wife.

Two hundred packing house strikers returned to work at Omaha, Neb., as a result of the vote taken on the question of discontinuing the strike.

Maj. Henry Seton, of New York, a veteran of the United States army in the civil and Spanish-American wars, a noted Indian fighter with Gen. Crook, is dead at Baltimore, Md.

Burglars blew open the safe of County Treasurer J. A. Logan, at Ladkinsville, Yadkin county, N. C., and secured between $8,000 and $10,000. The safe in the post office was also blown open and over $410 was stolen.

Joseph Regnet, of Irving Park, a Chicago suburb, killed his wife and committed suicide while their three terrified children looked on.

A freight train on the Chagrin Falls branch of the Wheeling and Lake Erie road collided with a two-horse wagon on a grade crossing near Chagrin Falls, resulting in the death of two persons and the serious injury of several others.

The conference board is powerless to call off the packing house strike because the negative vote in Chicago outnumbered the affirmative in other cities.

At least three persons were killed and probably 25 injured in the wreck of a Rock Island fast train at Tiskilawa, Ill.

A mob at Huntsville, Ala., defied the militia and sheriff, set fire to the jail and lynched a negro prisoner.

The comptroller of the currency has issued a call for the condition of national banks at the close of business September 6.

Mrs. Sara Stevens, a member of the "Way Down East" company, died suddenly in St. Paul, Minn., of uraemia. Mrs. Stevens was about 70 years of age, and her stage career dated from October 27, 1856, when she was the widow of John C. Heenan, the noted English pugilist.

Leo de Mar, member of Boston commandery No. 322, Knights Templar, was beaten, drugged and robbed in San Francisco of $650 in cash and a $225 watch and chain by unknown men who escaped.

Louisville commandery, Knights Templar, was first, and St. Bernard commandery, of Chicago, was second in the drill contest at the San Francisco conclave.

The Catholic Cathedral of the Epiphany was dedicated at Sioux City, Ia., with imposing ceremonies.

M. G. Candee, a highly respected citizen of Clarke county, Ala., was shot and killed from ambush.

A distinct earthquake shock was felt in San Diego, Cal., lasting several seconds. It was followed by a slighter and briefer disturbance.

Col. George M Moulton, of Illinois, was elected grand master of the Knights Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was chosen as the meeting place of the next conclave in July, 1907.

The treasury department has begun paying prize money to victors in the battle of Manila bay. Dewey's share is $18,515.

Senator Fairbanks will make a speaking tour of the Pacific coast, leaving Chicago September 23 for St. Paul.

The stockyards strike at Chicago has collapsed. President Donnelly himself demanded the end of the struggle. One new concession was made, but after 59 days of fight the men return under less advantageous terms than when the walkout was ordered. It is estimated that the total cost of the strike in loss of wages, etc., is about $14,000,000.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Vermont gave a republican plurality for Charles J. Bell for governor estimated at 32,000. This figure has been exceeded only once in the September elections.

Acting Secretary Oliver, of the war department, has issued a circular of warning against political assessments and partisan activity by office holders.

George H. Shibley, of Washington, who was nominated by the continental party at Chicago as candidate for vice president, has sent a letter to the notification committee of the party declining the nomination.

The Michigan republican judicial convention, at Saginaw, nominated the following three candidates for justices of the supreme court: Judge A. V. McAlvey, of Manistee; R. C. Ostrander, of Lansing, and Attorney General Charles A. Blair, of Jackson.

For a second time the democrats of New Hampshire nominated Henry Hollis, of Concord, to be their candidate for governor.

Judge Parker, at Rosemount, in addressing the democratic editors sounded a warning of danger and urged them to cooperate in the elimination of factional fights.

FOREIGN.

Marquis Oyama reports that the Japanese have occupied Liaoyang after fighting in which the Japanese losses were very heavy.

Gen. Stakelberg's First Siberian army corps, which was reported by Gen. Kuropatkin as having been cut off to the westward of Liaoyang, has been safely extricated.

Capt. Viren, commander of the Russian cruiser Bayan, will replace Rear Admiral Prince Ouktomsky as commander of the Port Arthur squadron.

The Cuban senate has ratified the treaty of extradition recently concluded between this country and Cuba.

Much damage was done by a gale to fishery property along the Newfoundland coast and five schooners were driven ashore, resulting in the loss of 11 lives.

ACCEPTS NOMINATION

ROOSEVELT'S LETTER TO THE NOTIFICATION COMMITTEE.

APPROVES PARTY PLATFORM

Says It Is Hard to Find Issues Upon Which Democrats Propose to Wage Campaign—His Views on Public Questions.

The following is a comprehensive synopsis of President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance of the republican nomination:

"Hon. J. G. Cannon, Chairman of the Notification Committee.—My Dear Sir: I accept the nomination for the presidency tendered me by the republican national convention, and cordially approve the platform adopted by it. In writing this letter there are certain points upon which I desire to lay especial stress.

"It is difficult to find out from the utterances of our opponents what are the real issues upon which they propose to wage this campaign. It is not unfair to say that, having abandoned most of the principles upon which they have insisted during the last eight years, they now seem at a loss, both as to what it is that they really believe, and as to how firmly they shall assert their belief in anything. In fact, it is doubtful if they venture resolutely to press a single issue; as soon as they raise one they shrink from it and seek to explain it away. Such an attitude is the probably inevitable result of the effort to improvise convictions; for when thus improvised, it is natural that they should be held in a tentative manner.

"The party now in control of the government is troubled by no such difficulties. We do not have to guess at our own convictions, and then correct the guess if it seems unpopular. The principles which we profess are those in which we believe with heart and soul and strength. Men may differ from us; but they cannot accuse us of shiftiness or insincerity. The policies we have pursued are those which we earnestly hold as essential to the national welfare and repute. Our actions speak even louder than our words for the faith that is in us. We base our appeal upon what we have done and are doing, upon our record of administration and legislation during the last seven years, in which we have had complete control of the government. We intend in the future to carry on the government in the same way that we have carried it on in the past.

A Disrupted Party.

"A party whose members are radically at variance on most vital issues, and if united at all are only united on issues where their attitude threatens widespread disaster to the whole country, cannot be trusted to govern in any matter. A party which, with facile ease, changes all its convictions before election cannot be trusted to adhere with tenacity to any principle after election. A party fit to govern must have convictions. In 1896 the republican party came into power, and in 1900 it retained power, on certain definite pledges, each of which was scrupulously fulfilled. But in addition to meeting and solving the problems which were issues in these campaigns, it also became necessary to meet other problems which arose after election; and it is no small part of our claim to public confidence that these were solved with the same success that had attended the solution of those concerning which the battles at the polls were fought. In other words, our governmental efficiency proved equal not only to the tasks that were anticipated, but to doing each unanticipated task as it arose.

"When the contest of 1896 was decided, the question of the war with Spain was not an issue. When the contest of 1900 was decided, the shape which the Isthmian canal question ultimately took could not have been foreseen. But the same qualities which enabled those responsible for making and administering the laws at Washington to deal successfully with the tariff and the currency, enabled them also to deal with the Spanish war; and the same qualities which enabled them to act wisely in the Philippines, and in Cuba, also enabled them to do their duty as regards the problems connected with the trusts, and to secure the building of the Isthmian canal. We are content to rest our case before the American people upon the fact that to adherence to a lofty ideal we have added proved governmental efficiency. Therefore, our promises may surely be trusted as regards any issue that is now before the people; and we may equally be trusted to deal with any problem which may hereafter arise.

"So well has the work been done that our opponents do not venture to recite the facts about our policies or acts, and then oppose them. They attack them only when they have first misrepresented them; for a truthful recital would leave no room for adverse comment."

The action of the administration in connection with the Panama revolution and the signing of the canal treaty is outlined and the president says:

"Criticism of the action in this matter is simply criticism of the only possible action which could have secured the building of the canal; as well as the peace and quiet which we were, by treaty, bound to preserve along the line of transit across the isthmus. The service rendered this country in securing the perpetual right to construct, maintain, operate and defend the canal was so great that our opponents do not venture to raise the issue in straightforward fashion; for if so raised there would be no issue."

Democratic Misrepresentation.

He charges misrepresentation on the part of the democrats in the statements of the conduct of the foreign policy of the administration and the operations of the navy, and asks:

"Do our opponents object to the way in which the Monroe doctrine has been strengthened and upheld? Never before has this doctrine been acquiesced in abroad as it is now; and yet, while upholding the rights of the weaker American republics against foreign aggression, the administration has lost no opportunity to point out to these republics that those who seek equity should come with clean hands, and that whoever claims liberty as a right must accept the responsibilities that go with the exercise of the right. Do our opponents object to what was done in reference to the petition of American citizens against the Kishenev massacre? or to the protest against the treatment of the Jews in Roumania? or to the efforts that have been made in behalf of the Armenians in Turkey? No other administration in our history, no other government in the world, has more consistently stood for the broadest spirit of brotherhood in our common humanity, or has held a more resolute attitude of protest against every wrong that outraged the civilization of the age, at home or abroad. Do our opponents object to the fact that the international tribunal at The Hague was rescued from impotence and turned into a potent instrument for peace among the nations? This government has used that tribunal, and advocated its use by others, in pursuance of its policy to promote the cause of international peace and good will by all honorable methods. In carrying out this policy, it has settled dispute after dispute by arbitration or by friendly agreement. It has behaved towards all nations, strong or weak, with courtesy, dignity and justice; and it is now on excellent terms with all.

"Do our opponents object to the settlement of the Alaska boundary line? Do they object to the fact that after freeing Cuba we gave her reciprocal trade advantage with the United States, while at the same time keeping naval stations in the island and providing against its sinking into chaos, or being conquered by any foreign power? Do they object to the fact that our flag now flies over Porto Rico? Do they object to the acquisition of Hawaii? Once they 'hauled down' our flag there; we have hoisted it again; do they intend once more to haul it down? Do they object to the part we played in China? Do they not know that the voice of the United States would now count for nothing in the far east if we had abandoned the Philippines and refused to do what was done in China? Do they object to the fact that this government secured a peaceful settlement of the troubles in Venezuela two years ago? Do they object to the presence of the ship-of-war off Colon when the revolution broke out in Panama, and when only the presence of this ship saved the lives of American citizens, and prevented insult to the flag? Do they object to the fact that American warships appeared promptly at the port of Beirut when an effort had been made to assassinate an American official, and in the port of Tangier when an American citizen had been abducted? and that in each case the wrong complained of was righted and expiated? and that within the last few days the visit of an American squadron to Smyrna was followed by the long-delayed concession of their just rights to those Americans concerned in educational work in Turkey? Do they object to the trade treaty with China, so full of advantage for the American people in the future? Do they object to the fact that the ships carrying the national flag now have a higher standard than ever before in marksmanship and in seamanship, as individual units and as component parts of squadrons and fleets? If they object to any or all of these things, we join issue with them.

"Executive Encroachments."

"When our opponents speak of 'encroachments' by the executive upon the authority of congress or the judiciary, apparently the act they ordinarily have in view is Pension Order No. 78, issued under the authority of existing law. This order directed that hereafter any veteran of the civil war who had reached the age of 62 should be presumptively entitled to the pension of six dollars a month, given under the dependent pension law to those whose capacity to earn their livelihood by manual labor has been decreased 50 per cent., and that by the time the age of 70 was reached the presumption should be that the physical disability was complete; the age being treated as an evidential fact in each case. This order was made in the performance of a duty imposed upon the president by an act of congress, which requires the executive to make regulations to govern the subordinates of the pension office in determining who are entitled to pensions. President Cleveland had already exercised this power by a regulation which declared that 75 should be set as the age at which total disability should be conclusively presumed. Similarly President McKinley established 65 as the age at which half disability should be conclusively presumed. The regulation now in question, in the exercise of the same power, supplemented these regulations made under Presidents Cleveland and McKinley.

"If our opponents come into power they can revoke this order and announce that they will treat the veterans of 62 to 70 as presumably in full bodily vigor and not entitled to pensions. Will they now authoritatively state that they intend to do this? If so, we accept the issue. If not, then we have the right to ask why they raise an issue which, when raised, they do not venture to meet."

Criticisms of the administration's settlement of the coal strike and the suit against the Northern Securities company are cited, and the president says:

"Such mutually destructive criticisms furnish an adequate measure of the chance for coherent action or constructive legislation if our opponents should be given power."

Democratic Policies.

Of the policies for which the democratic party professes to stand the president says:

"So much for what our opponents openly or covertly advance in the way of an attack on the acts of the administration. When we come to consider the policies for which they profess to stand we are met with the difficulty always arising when statements of policy are so made that they can be interpreted in different ways. On some of the vital questions that have confronted the American people in the last decade our opponents take the position that silence is the best possible way to convey their views. They contend that their lukewarm attitude of partial acquiescence in what others have accomplished entitles them to be made the custodians of the financial honor and commercial interests which they have but recently sought to ruin."

He reviews the history of the republican party's efforts to establish a stable national currency, and says:

"Until our opponents as a party explicitly adopt the views which we hold and upon which we have acted and are acting, in the matter of a sound currency; the only real way to keep the question from becoming unsettled is to keep the republican party in power."

He points to the record of the administration in its dealings with both capital and labor, and carefully outlines each step that has been taken for the enforcement of the anti-trust laws, and explains the need of such laws on the national statute books in opposition to the democratic claim "that the common law, as developed, affords a complete legal remedy against monopolies," and of this he says:

"But there is no common law of the United States. Its rules can be enforced only by the state courts and officers. No federal court or officer could take any action whatever under them. It was this fact, coupled with the inability of the states to control trusts and monopolies, which led to the passage of the federal statutes known as the Sherman anti-trust act and the interstate commerce act; and it is only through the exercise of the powers conferred by these acts, and by the statutes of the last congress supplementing them, that the national government acquires any jurisdiction over the subject. To say that action against trusts and monopolies should be limited to the application of common law is equivalent to saying that the national government should take no action whatever to regulate them."

The Tariff Issues.

He charges the democrats with insincerity and evasiveness in their statements regarding a tariff policy, and says:

"Undoubtedly it would be possible at the present time to prevent any of the trusts from remaining prosperous by the simple expedient of making such a sweeping change in the tariff as to paralyze the industries of the country. The trusts would cease to prosper; but their smaller competitors would be ruined, and the wage-workers would starve, while it would not pay the farmer to haul his produce to market."

Continuing on the subject of the tariff, he says:

"From time to time schedules must undoubtedly be rearranged and readjusted to meet the shifting needs of the country; but this can with safety be done only by those who are committed to the cause of the protective system. To uproot and destroy that system would be to insure the prostration of business, the closing of factories, the impoverishment of the farmer, the ruin of the capitalist, and the starvation of the wage-worker.

Republican Reciprocity.

On the subject of reciprocity the president says:

"Our opponents assert that they believe in reciprocity. Their action on the most important reciprocity treaty recently negotiated—that with Cuba—does not bear out this assertion. Moreover, there can be no reciprocity unless there is a substantial tariff; free trade and reciprocity are not compatible. We are on record as favoring arrangements for reciprocal trade relations with other countries, these arrangements to be on an equitable basis of benefit to both the contracting parties. The republican party stands pledged to every wise and consistent method of increasing the foreign commerce of the country. That it has kept its pledge is proven by the fact that while the domestic trade of this country exceeds in volume the entire export and import trade of all the nations of the world, the United States has in addition secured more than an eighth of the export trade of the world, standing first among the nations in this respect."

Of the proposition to reduce the size of the army the president says:

"If our opponents should come into power they could not reduce our army below its present size without greatly impairing its efficiency and abandoning part of the national duty. In short, in this matter, if our opponents should come into power they would either have to treat this particular promise of the year 1904 as they now treat the promises they made in 1896 and 1900, that is, as possessing no binding force; or else they would have to embark on a policy which would be ludicrous at the moment and fraught with grave danger to the national honor in the future."

He reviews the administration of the government finances and refutes the charge that the government is administered extravagantly with facts and figures, and says:

"Do our opponents grudge the $50,000,000 paid for the Panama canal? Do they intend to cut down on the pensions to the veterans of the civil war? Do they intend to put a stop to the irrigation policy? or to the permanent census bureau? or to immigration inspection? Do they intend to abolish rural free delivery? Do they intend to cut down the navy? or the Alaskan telegraph system? Do they intend to dismantle our coast fortifications? If there is to be a real and substantial cutting down in national expenditures it must be in such matters as these. The department of agriculture has done service of incalculable value to the farmers of this country in many different lines. Do our opponents wish to cut down the money for this service? They can do it only by destroying the usefulness of the service itself."

Philippine Independence.

He refers to the promise in the democratic platform to give independence to the Philippine Islands, and after speaking of the folly of such a promise says:

"It may well be that our opponents have no real intention of putting their promise into effect. If this is the case, if, in other words, they are insincere in the promise they make, it is only necessary to say again that it is unwise to trust men who are false in one thing to deal with anything. The mere consciousness of broken faith would hamper them in continuing our policy in the islands; and only by continuing unchanged this policy can the honor of the country be maintained, or the interests of the islands subserved. If, on the other hand, our opponents came into power and attempted to carry out their promises to the Filipinos by giving them independence and withdrawing American control from the islands, the result would be a frightful calamity to the Filipinos themselves, and in its larger aspect would amount to an international crime. Anarchy would follow: and the most violent anarchic forces would be directed partly against the civil government, partly against all forms of religious and educational civilization. Bloody conflicts would inevitably ensue in the archipelago, and just as inevitably the islands would become the prey of the first power which in its own selfish interest took up the task we had cravenly abandoned.

"During the last five years more has been done for the material and moral well-being of the Filipinos than ever before since the islands first came within the ken of civilized man. We have opened before them a vista of orderly development in their own interest, and not a policy of exploitation. Every effort is being made to fit the islanders for self-government, and they have already in large measure received it, while for the first time in their history their personal rights and civil liberties have been guaranteed. They are being educated; they have been given schools; they have been given libraries; roads are being built for their use; their health is being cared for; they have been given courts in which they receive justice as absolute as it is in our power to guarantee. Their individual rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are now by act of congress jealously safeguarded under the American flag; and if the protection of the flag were withdrawn their rights would be lost, and the islands would be plunged back under some form of vicious tyranny. We have given them more self-government than they have ever before had; we are taking steps to increase it still further by providing them with an elected legislative assembly; and surely we had better await the result of this experiment—for it is a wholly new experiment in Asia—before we make promises which as a nation we might be forced to break, or which they might interpret one way and we in another. It may be asserted without fear of successful contradiction that nowhere else in recent years has there been as fine an example of constructive statesmanship and wise and upright administration as has been given by the civil authorities, aided by the army, in the Philippine islands. We have administered them in the interest of their own people; and the Filipinos themselves have profited most by our presence in the islands; but they have also been of very great advantage to us as a nation."

Conclusion.

In conclusion the president says:

"Our appeal is made to all good citizens who hold the honor and the interest of the nation close to their hearts. The great issues which are at stake, and upon which I have touched, are more than mere partisan issues, for they involve much that comes home to the individual pride and individual well-being of our people. Under conditions as they actually are, good Americans should refuse, for the sake of the welfare of the nation, to change the national policy. We, who are responsible for the administration and legislation under which this country, during the last seven years, has grown so greatly in well-being at home and in honorable repute among the nations of the earth abroad, do not stand inertly upon this record, do not use this record as an excuse for failure of effort to meet new conditions. On the contrary, we treat the record of what we have done in the past as incitement to do even better in the future. We believe that the progress that we have made may be taken as a measure of the progress we shall continue to make if the people again entrust the government of the nation to our hands. We do not stand still. We press steadily forward toward the goal of moral and material well-being for our own people, of just and fearless dealing toward all other peoples, in the interest not merely of this country, but of mankind. There is not a policy, foreign or domestic, which we are now carrying out, which it would not be disastrous to reverse or abandon. If our opponents should come in and should not reverse our policies, then they would be branded with the brand of broken faith, of false promise, of insincerity in word and deed; and no man can work to the advantage of the nation with such a brand clinging to him. If, on the other hand, they should come in and reverse any or all of our policies, by just so much would the nation as a whole be damaged. Alike as lawmakers and as administrators of the law we have endeavored to do our duty in the interest of the people as a whole. We make our appeal to no class and to no section, but to all good citizens, in whatever part of the land they dwell, and whatever may be their occupation or worldly condition. We have striven both for civic righteousness and for national greatness; and we have faith to believe that our hands will be upheld by all who feel love of country and trust in the uplifting of mankind. We stand for enforcement of the law and for obedience to the law; our government is a government of orderly liberty equally alien to tyranny and to anarchy; and its foundation-stone is the observance of the law, alike by the people and by the public servants. We hold ever before us as the all-important end of policy and administration the reign of peace at home and throughout the world; of peace, which comes only by doing justice. Faithfully yours,

After Tom Bjoin's defeat next Tuesday he will be looking for a new party.

Farmers should remember that the polls at the primary election are kept open until 9 o'clock and they can go and vote in the evening.

In the eastern part of Polk county we have not heard any clamoring for a change in the Register of Deeds office and it now looks like two years more of the popular Ole Christianson.

Remember that all the candidates for office can not be nominated, next Tuesday, but we hope to see some of the defeated ones that are running on the republican ticket as good republicans one week from now as they are now.

It now has the appearence of P.C. Bjorneby for Register of Deeds, Wm. McGlennon for County attorney, Espeseth for treasurer, Swan Torkelson, for shariff, Burt Umland, for surveyor and and about even chances on the Clerk of court, of Clearwater county. We are not in that county but just make this guess from our acquaintance, not with the candidates, but with the voters of that county.

Louis Gonyea, of Crookston, a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff of Polk county, was here Monday looking after his political fences. Mr. Gonyea for the last four years has been the deputy sheriff of this county under sheriff Sullivan and previous to that time was chief of police of Crookston for a long term of years. He is a careful and painstaking official and in caring out his official acts has a knack of doing so without injuring any one's feelings. He is an old soldier and has done much for his country which should entitle him to the suffrage of the people of his home county. He solicits and would greatly apreaciate your X opposite his name at the primaries to be held Sept. 20th.--Fertile Journal. No voter could make a mistake by placing his X opposite the name of Louis Gonyea for sheriff and there will be a whole lot of them placed there from this end of the county next Tuesday.

Duty, Then Pleasure.

Mr. Nasmyth, the inventor of the steam hammer, once said: "If I were to try to compress into one sentence the whole of the experience of an active and successful life and offer it to young men as a rule and certain recipe for success in any station, it would be comprised in this: 'Duty first; pleasure second.' From what I have seen of young men and their after progress I am satisfied that what is generally termed 'bad fortune,' 'ill luck' and 'misfortune' is in nine cases out of ten simply the result of inverting this simple maxim. My own experience convinces me that absence of success arises in the great majority of cases from want of self denial and want of common sense. The worst maxim of all maxims is, 'Pleasure first; work and duty second.'"

LEWIS L. MAYLAND.

Candidate for Representative 61st District.

Don't forget to place X for him next Tuesday, and go to election and vote. The farmer that takes enough interest in his farm to try to live on it had ought to go to vote for a man who will get help for drainage and roads.

FOR P. J. ESPESETH.

Editor Sunbeam:

This being the last week before the primary promit me to say a few words for Peder J. Espeseth, for County Treasurer of Clearwater county.

Mr. Espeseth is well qualified for the duties of the office for which he solicits your support, at the primary. All who know him respect and honor his intelligence, and interest in public affairs, also his noble charactor and trustworthyness. Surely the people of Clearwater county can make no mistake by electing him to office, as among the whole set of men now before us there is none better qualified.

Hopeing and trusting that the good citizins will not forget to mark their ballot for P. J. Espeseth I will leave the matter for your favorable consideration.

FARMERS' MONTH AT WORLD'S FAIR

Department of the Great Exposition Ready For the Inspection of the Army of Men Who Made Its Creation Possible.

Now that crops have been or are being laid by, the farmer prepares for his trip to the World's Fair, a treat that has been promised him and for which he has patiently waited. No exposition has offered so many inducements for the farmer's presence as this one at St. Louis, nor has any previous exposition given the prominence and space to the subject of agriculture.

August and September are ostensibly the farmer's months at the Exposition, for it is at this season that the agriculture exhibits are the freshest and best. Products of the new crops are pouring into the booths from every state in the Union, and additions are constantly being made to the gorgeous display.

Headquarters for visiting farmers may be found in every state section of the great Agriculture Palace, but for their special convenience there has just been completed a Grange House, situated in the south end of the building. It is equipped with a reception room, ladies' retiring rooms and check rooms, where parcels may be left free of charge. Here will be kept a list of moderate priced rooms to aid visiting farmers and their families in procuring accommodations.

The largest building on the grounds is the Palace of Agriculture, covering twenty acres, while the Palace of Horticulture near by covers about a third as much space. These two immense structures are filled with exhibits of the farm, garden and orchard of the most extensive and elaborate character, every state in the Union and most of the principal countries of the world being represented.

Agriculture is given more prominence than any other department at the Exposition, the paramount importance of this great industry having been fully appreciated from the very beginning of the World's Fair movement.

About seventy acres of ground are covered by the agriculture and horticulture department at the Fair, large outdoor spaces being devoted to this industry. Outside there are growing crops, trees and flowers, an instructive six acre farm maintained by the United States Government Plant Industry, and gardens in all parts of the grounds.

There are more exhibits in the Agriculture building than in any other section of the Exposition. This building is considered by many people the most interesting part of the World's Fair. The exhibits in the palaces of Agriculture and Horticulture constitute a display vast enough and instructive enough to occupy the attention of visitors for many days. Nothing to compare with them was ever attempted before. They are the climax of several decades of educational work which is placing farming on a high plane and is making scientific agriculture a pleasing reality.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE MONUMENT, WORLD'S FAIR.

The conspicuous role played by agriculture at the World's Fair should bring untold benefits and wealth to the farming community of the world and impress all farmers with the importance and dignity of their calling.

Passing through these colossal buildings, studying the attractive exhibits and fascinated with the bewildering encyclopedia of rural life which is spread out before his eyes, the World's Fair visitor is impressed with the important part the farmer plays in the great world of industry, and every farmer who views these interesting exhibits is given a new pride in his vocation if filled with inspiration and impressed with new ideas in harmony with the progressive strides that farming has been making for the past few years. The visit will give an insight into up to date farming on the most approved plan and will bring new hopes and blessings to the farm.

How properly to rotate crops, how to get the best results from fertilizing and irrigation, how to protect crops and fruit from the ravages of insects—all these and many more things of vital interest to farmers and fruit growers are taught at the World's Fair.

Mothers' Rights Recognized.

The right of mothers as well as fathers to decide regarding the domicile, choice of profession, and marriage of their minor children has been recognized legally by the Dutch Parliament. Holland has also passed a law by which women may be appointed guardians for children not their own.

Aged, But Still Vigorous.

There will be a political rally at Gonvick Saturday night, with a grand ball.

Local news are rather scarse this week, as the farmers are all busy threshing.

Don't forget to put an X opposit the name of B. S. Bennett for representative.

There is a time for all things, so it is said. Mark's Sarsaparilla is a good blood purifier any time.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kankel, of Terrebonne were visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ohms from Friday last until Tuesday. Mr. Kankel is propietor of the Terrebonne flouring mills.

A large number of our farmers recieved a letter from Tom Bjoin, yesterday afternoon but we did not learn just what he wanted. Maybe he is coming to see them again and wants them to have a cold lunch ready.

We publish in this issue the announcement of L. W. Larsen as a candidate for the nomination for representative. Mr. Larsen is an a number one business man and would no doubt make the District a good representative.

J. A. Hendricks is one of the ablest attorneys in northern Minnesota, being a lawyer of long experience, geniel of personality and strength of charector. The great County of Polk needs a man for the Attorney's office who is confident, feerless and prompt in enforceing the laws. In Mr. Hendricks the County has an opprotunity to secure such a man for County Attorney who will be under obligations to no one but the people who elect him. Dic.

We would like to see J. A. Gregerson, of Fertile recieve the nomination of the republican party for treasurer of this county for the reason, that he is one of the common people and is the only candidate Fertile is asking for.

FOR SHERIFF OF POLK COUNTY.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the nomination of Sheriff of Polk County at the coming primary election. I earnestly solicit the support of my friends, and if nominated and elected will faithfully discharge the duties of the said office.

Trolley Car Conductor—Did I get your fare? Passenger—I guess so; I didn't see you ring it up for the company.—Utica Herald.

SOMEWHAT POLITICAL.

If the republican voters of the City of Crookston would like harmoney in the party after the primaries, and different parts of the County have a representative on the ticket, we would suggest, that they put their spare X opposit the name of B. S. Bennett, for representative.

* * * * * *

If Tom Bjoin would not send out his picture, or say so much about his long residence in the county we are of the opinion he would get more votes. We can imagine how many hundred hard working farmers wives in Polk county will look at that picture and say to her husband, "That's the man that talked so nice to get us into buying that threshing machine, and the next fall when crops were poor made us mortgage our farm to pay him, and I am sure if he was sheriff he would come up here and take our last cow for one dollar tax, if he could make a fiew dollars for himself". Now farmers take a good look at that picture and see if you do not think the lady is right.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the republican nomination for Register of Deeds of Polk county, at the primary election to be held September 20, and respectifully ask the support of the voters at said primary election.

Monkey—When it comes to a swing, the elephant for mine!—New York Evening Journal.

A Kanaka Canoe.

The early Kanakas built their fast sailing canoes out of the body of a single tree, hollowing it out and staying the edges with strips of hard wood. These strips extended to the ends and covered a space at both stem and stern. The triangular sails were made of fine matting, and the little craft was steadied by an outrigger. The ruling chiefs and their families traveled in large double canoes, with a raised platform in the center for passengers.

The building of a canoe was a very serious business. Offerings were made to the gods, and prayers were especially addressed to the fisherman's tutelary saint. A priest finally stood with the owner at the bow of the canoe and recited the last prayer in unbroken silence; death and disaster were sure to follow if any extraneous noise disturbed the scene.—New York Times.

Undignified but Cool Official.

A humble French official who was sent to one of the hottest departments of France found his bureau a perfect furnace until he had a brilliant idea. He improvised a cistern and sat in it all day. The public came into his office and panted, but he was up to his armpits in water, cool and comfortable. Nobody minded; it was thought very clever of him, and he grew in the local esteem. But one day there came an inspector whose business it was to maintain the dignity of the public service. He stood aghast. What! A registrar sitting in a cistern? It was a stigma on the republic. The case was reported to Paris, and the offender was on the point of being dismissed when a cynic suggested a more humorous punishment. "Send him to Algeria!" Even the cisterns are hot in that climate.—London Chronicle.

The Back Porch Sanitarium.

Ninety-eight per cent of those who have tuberculosis of the lungs, if they get well at all, will have to do so at home, but not "by the fireside." Even in tenement houses people have made good recoveries, but it has been by lying under a wide open window all day long and all night long, by extra feeding, by rest and by good courage. There are wondrous possibilities on back porches and in sheltered nooks. It isn't the coolness of the air nor yet the sweltering heat of the sun that heals. It is the fresh, pure air and comfort. The patient must not be annoyed by cold or heat, but must be dressed so as to be comfortable. Sleep out of doors, shielded from the storm, and dress indoors where it is warm.—Everybody's Magazine.

The Oriental Thief.

Even in common robbery the orient has picturesque ways peculiar to itself. A Burmese woman traveling in a third class compartment by the day train recently was reclining in the carriage with one of her arms out of the window somewhere near Sitkwin, on the Burma state railway, when some one came along the footboard and cut her arm clean off, apparently with a sharp sword. On the lost hand were rings with the usual accompaniment of bangles.

The Disenchanting Phonograph.

The best story I have heard recently is that told of a well known Oxford don who was asked to speak into a phonograph. A little later the machine was turned on again, and he was requested to listen to his own voice. The don then turned to the assembled company and said, "It is strange that through this machine I am made to speak in a peculiarly bumptious and affected manner."—London Tatler.

Your Heart

May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

One of the surest signs of a weak heart is shortness of breath after exercise.

Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulder; Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough, Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

Finally, remember, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold under a guarantee that the first bottle will do you good.

If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would [illegible] all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what circumstances I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DREHBACK, Leipsic, O.

Cold Tea?

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground, after the crowd had left, picked up 219 bottles ranging in capacity from a half pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

Fighters for Humanity.

Every important step in the progress of civilization has come from those who for humanity and the world's benefit were willing to fight battles and become unpopular; but their memory remains, and the bell of every steamer that plows the waters of the Potomac is tolled while passing the tomb of Washington.—George T. With the Majority.

"Now, gentlemen, do you think this is or is not a case for operation?" asked an eminent surgeon of his class of six students as they walked the wards in a city hospital. One by one the young men diagnosed the case, and all of them answered in the negative.

"Well, gentlemen," announced the surgeon, "you are all wrong, and I shall operate to-morrow."

"No, you won't!" exclaimed the patient, as he rose in his bed, "six to one is a good majority. Gimme my clothes."—N. Y. Press.

Always Food for Laughter.

When Johnny was a child they laughed at the ridiculous things he said. When he was a youth they laughed at his half-baked opinions. When he was a man they laughed at his wisdom because they couldn't grasp it. When he was old they laughed at him for a crank. There is always some one to laugh, and this is a jolly world.—Newark (N. Mrs. Elizabeth H. Thompson, of Lillydale, N.Y., Grand Worthy Wise Templar, and Member of W.C.T.U., tells how she recovered by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am one of the many of your grateful friends who have been cured through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and who can to-day thank you for the fine health I enjoy. When I was thirty-five years old, I suffered severe backache and frequent bearing-down pains; in fact, I had womb trouble I was very anxious to get well, and reading of the cures your Compound had made, I decided to try it. I took only six bottles, but it built me up and cured me entirely of my troubles.

"My family and relatives were naturally as gratified as I was. My niece had heart trouble and nervous prostration, and was considered incurable. She took your Vegetable Compound and it cured her in a short time, and she became well and strong, and her home to her great joy and her husband's delight was blessed with a baby. I know of a number of others who have been cured of different kinds of female trouble, and am satisfied that your Compound is the best medicine for sick women."—MRS. ELIZABETH H. Boiler Explosion.

Five men were killed by the explosion of a threshing machine boiler sixteen miles southwest of Wells.

Peter Daley, the owner was sitting on the drive wheel just putting on the drive belt when the explosion occurred, blowing him through the tops of some high trees and severing one leg, which was found about five hundred feet from where the explosion occurred. He is survived by a wife and two small children.

Abe Foster, sixteen years old, son of John Foster, was blown into the wheat stack, which was ignited by the explosion, and he was burned to a crisp.

Chris Sunde was blown completely to pieces. He is survived by a wife and four children. James Seymore of Bricelyn and Willard Gallion of address unknown were also killed outright. Several large grain stacks were destroyed. The heavy castings of the engine were found about five hundred feet from the place where the engine stood.

Sucked to Death.

Two playmates with whom he had been romping about in the grain elevator of the Sheffield Mill company in Faribault saw James A. Anderson, sixteen years old sucked down to his death in a discharging wheat bin.

Anderson, who was a son of George L. Anderson, a laborer, was playing about the structure with the two sons of T. B. Murtaugh, the elevator manager. Anderson jumped into a 35-foot wheat bin and began leaping up and down.

Several hundred feet below they were loading cars with grain, and suddenly the bin in which the young Anderson stood was opened. The struggling lad was gradually drawn down until he disappeared.

The victim had sunk fifteen feet, and it took a crew of six men on hour to reach him.

Editor Suicides.

Grant Riggle, editor of the Madelia Tribune, committed suicide at the Golden West hotel, Minneapolis, by swallowing 100 quarter-grain morphine tablets, which he secured on a prescription. He retired to his room early in the evening, and in the morning when he did not appear a bell boy made an investigation and found him fully dressed, and dead in bed.

The coroner held no inquest, having pronounced it a case of suicide.

Mr. Riggle was affected with an incurable disease which had settled in lower extremities, and the fear that it would be necessary to amputate his limbs is supposed to have caused him to end his life. He leaves a wife and two children.

The Prize Farmer.

The fair judges declared D. C. Hazleton of Cutler to be prize farmer in Minnesota among the many who made exhibits in the agricultural building. Out of a possible 1,200 points Mr. Hazleton's exhibit scored the big figure of 1155.

Orville C. Thompson of Farmington was a close second, his exhibit scoring 1,135 points. His exhibit of vegetables was better, but in arrangement, and in several classes of products he fell down slightly below the leading exhibit.

C. H. Murphy of Caledonia was third with a score of 1093. In threshed grain Mr. Murphy's exhibit was perfect.

Will Show Profit.

Despite the unfavorable weather the state fair will make a clean profit of $20,000 to $25,000," declared President Gosgrove. "We shall not touch the emergency fund of $30,000 this year as the surplus from the fair will be ample for the permanent improvements we contemplate making this year. The success of the fair, in the face of all circumstances, is a surprize and delight to the managers."

More Money for Butter.

A strong effort will be made next year to have the prize money offered for exhibits of creamery butter at the state fair increased from $800 to $1200. The idea increasing the prize money is to make the Minnesota butter contest interstate in its character. This year there were many entries from Iowa and Wisconsin, and some from the Dakotas.

News in Brief.

The Northern Pacific received four tourist cars of a new type. They are larger than those now in use and the interior furnishings are much finer than usually found in such cars.

Only five cases of smallpox were reported last week to the state board of health. Three of them were in Minneapolis, one at Motley and one in Burns township, Brown county.

Lulu Anderson, the 2-year-old daughter of G. W. Anderson, Minneapolis, died of strangulation as the result of swallowing a small screw with which she had been playing.

Thomas H. Loyhed of the firm of T. H. Loyhed & Son, at Faribault, is the oldest hardware merchant in Minnesota. He came to this state from Tompkins county, New York, in 1853.

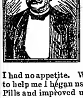
Not a democrat in Washington county filed for legislative, commissioner or other county office nor for city treasurer.

Max Voelk, aged 78, was found dead in his room at Monticello. Death was caused by heart failure.

The new No. 4 wheat grade established by the state grain inspection department was put into force at the Minneapolis chamber of commerce. The new grade is between No. 3 and rejected, and was made because of the damage to this year's crop. The qualifications call for a weight test of from 49 to 53 pounds.

HAD TO GIVE UP.

Suffered Agonies from Kidney Disorders Until Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.



George W. Renoff, of 1953 North 11th St., Philadelphia, Pa., a man of good reputation and standing, writes: "Five years ago I was suffering so with my back and kidneys that I often had to lay off. The kidney secretions were unnatural, my legs and stomach were swollen, and I had no appetite. When doctors failed to help me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and improved until my back was strong and my appetite returned. During the four years since I stopped using them I have enjoyed excellent health. The cure was permanent."

William P. Steele, of Princeton, Md., died a few months ago while setting up a monument over his wife's grave. The stone fell, crushing his head and chest.

Emanuel Beveler, of Sterling, Ill., cut his throat on his high collar. He was riding a bicycle, and in trying to avoid a passing horse was thrown. In his fall his collar cut his throat.

While carrying a keg of beer intended for a picnic in Reading, Pa., one day recently Elmer Kerchoff stumbled over a wire. The keg slipped so suddenly that the jar dislocated his neck.

Mergaret Kirchhaum died of eating hot potatoes. She was in a hurry to go out and gulped several hot potatoes. She died in great agony. The autopsy showed that her throat and the lining of her stomach had been so badly burned that the swelling had caused her to choke to death.

Francis J. Birdwell, a Boston ornithologist, climbed high up in a tree at Rio Pecos, N. M., after a bird's nest. The rope he was using caught on a limb, and when he slipped and fell, a loop caught him around the neck and he was slowly strangled to death. His bride of a month stood at the foot of the tree, but was unable to help him.

An Atchison husband hovered at death's door so long his wife remarked that she supposed he was having his usual trouble finding the keyhole.

WHAT'S THE USE

To Keep a "Coffee Complexion."

A lady says: "Postum has helped my complexion so much that my friends say I am growing young again. My complexion used to be coffee colored, muddy and yellow, but it is now clear and rosy as when I was a girl. I was induced to try Postum by a friend who had suffered just as I had suffered from terrible indigestion, palpitation of the heart and sinking spells.

"After I had used Postum a week I was so much better that I was afraid it would not last. But now two years have passed and I am a well woman. I owe it all to leaving off coffee and drinking Postum in its place.

"I had drank coffee all my life. I suspected that it was the cause of my trouble, but it was not until I actually quit coffee and started to try Postum that I became certain; then all my troubles ceased and I am now well and strong again." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MAKING TOO LIGHT OF IT.

Drug Clerk Who Needed to Learn the First Principles of His Business.

"I notice," said the chemist to his assistant, in a Smith's Weekly yarn, "that a gentleman came in with a prescription, and that you took it and gave him the stuff in about three minutes. What do you mean by that?"

"It was only a little carbolic acid and water," replied the assistant. "I simply had to pour a few drachms of acid into the bottle, and fill it up with water."

"Never mind if you had only to do that," the chemist declared. "Don't you know that every prescription must take at least half an hour to prepare, or the customer will think he isn't getting anything for his money?

"When a prescription for salt and water or peppermint and cough sirup is handed to you, you must look doubtfully, as if it were very hard to make up. Then you must bring it to me, and we will both read it and shake our heads. After that you go back to the customer and ask him if he wants it to-day. When he says yes you answer that you'll make a special effort.

"Now, a patient appreciates a prescription that he's had so much trouble over, and when he takes it he derives some benefit from it. But don't you do any more of that three-minute prescription business, my boy, if you want to become a first-class chemist."

THE WEEK'S NEWS

Happenings of the Past Seven Days in Brief.

ROUND ABOUT THE WORLD

Casualties and Fires, Personal and Political Notes, Business Failures and Resumptions, Weather Record.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

Almost every business block in Idaho Falls, Idaho, was wiped out by a fire that started in the Butte cafe and which burned seven hours. The loss will reach $300,000 with small insurance.

The first session of the interparliamentary union, which convened in Festival hall, at the world's fair grounds, St. Louis, was devoted to speeches of felicitation and greeting by delegates from the 14 nations represented.

Two men were killed and several passengers were injured by a collision between Southern Pacific passenger trains at Lawton, Nev.

New coal fields in Illinois are to be opened by the St. Paul road through the medium of a railway company just incorporated in Springfield.

Nearly 20,000 of the former strikers at the Chicago stock yards have been reemployed by the packers.

The increase in savings accounts of Chicago banks is the smallest in several years, as the result of strikes and shut downs in many lines of business.

Henry Peterson, a Chicago cigar dealer, was killed by four bandits, who raided his store and also shot the porter, William Portee, stealing $300.

Four persons were killed and six injured in an early morning tenement house fire in New York.

John D. Rockefeller has made an additional gift of $50,000 to the Young Women's Christian association of Cleveland, O., to be added to the fund for the erection of a new building. Mr. Rockefeller subscribed $50,000 to the fund.

Fire has destroyed the Manasquan, N. J., block ice and cold storage plant, entailing a loss of $150,000. Fish to the amount of 1,000,000 pounds, stored against the winter demand, was destroyed.

President Francis has signed a warrant for the sum of $500,000, the regular semi-monthly payment on the government loan of $4,600,000.

James M. Wilson, one of the oldest conductors connected with the St. Paul road, died at Hartford, Wis., aged 70 years. He was well known in railway circles throughout the northwest.

Rev. H. W. Hatter, a merchant and postmaster of Poplar Hill, Ky., was shot and instantly killed by Johnson Elliott, a neighboring farmer. The two men quarreled over a road site.

J. P. Fenton, a traveling man from Philadelphia, while intoxicated, leaped from a second-story window of the Butler hotel, Boono, Ia., striking on his head. The force of the fall drove his head completely through a cellar door. He died later.

President Roosevelt has put the case of the Russian auxiliary cruiser Lena in the hands of the state and navy departments. The belief is that the vessel will repair and disarm, fearing to risk capture by the Japanese.

The government weekly weather report says little harm was done by the light frost in the northwest September 11 and 12, favorable conditions continuing in nearly all the most productive part of the corn belt.

The third anniversary of the death of President McKinley was noted with deep sorrow in his home city, Canton, O. Many floral tributes were placed on his tomb.

The greater portion of the business section of St. Helen, county seat of Columbia county, Ore., was destroyed by fire. Loss, $50,000.

A severe windstorm prevailed along the Atlantic coast, doing considerable damage in Wilmington, N. C., near Norfolk, Va., and in Newark, N. J. The damage in Wilmington is $30,000, and two fishermen are reported drowned.

Seymour Clark, a farmer, and his son were found cremated in their residence, five miles north of Youngstown, O.

At Hoquiam, Wash., James Miles shot and killed the woman with whom he lived and then fatally wounded Ole Sand, a logger, and ended by shooting and killing himself. Jealousy led to the shooting.

Mrs. Henry Holt, a bride of one day, was shot to death near Mead, Wash., by a rejected lover, Fred Hoffman, who then committed suicide.

The Russian cruiser Lena, which took refuge in the harbor at San Francisco, has been ordered by President Roosevelt to disarm and remain until the end of the present war. The commander of the Lena has signified his willingness to meet the demands.

The plate glass factory of Zahn & Bordlay, at Carlton, Pa., was burned. The loss is estimated at almost $100,000.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

INTERESTING SHIFTS IN ARMY CIRCLES TO BE MADE.

CORBIN TO GO TO MANILA

How Sentiment Selected a Tenant for Corbin's Washington Home — Passing of Picturesque Character—Other Topics.

Maj. Gen. Corbin.

Washington.—There will be some interesting shifts in army circles within the next month, one of the most interesting and important of which is the detail of Maj. Gen. Henry C. Corbin to the command of the department of the Philippines. This will bring about transfers in the United States and will send Maj. Gen. Fred Grant, son of the great war commander, to be Corbin's successor in command of the department of the Atlantic and Maj Gen. Fred Funston, whose meteoric career in the army since the war with Spain has made a unique chapter in the army's history, to take command of the department of the west.

The assignment of Gen. Corbin to the Philippines is significant of future honors in store for him. President Roosevelt with that devotion to civil service principles that has marked all his public career, believes that in the army men should be fitted by experience for positions to which they may be promoted. He believes that the lieutenant general of the army and chief of staff should be an officer who has had practical experience in every department of the service. For this reason he considers it essential that this officer, who is virtually head of the army, although nominally the president and secretary of war are superior to him, should be thoroughly acquainted with conditions in the Philippines. It is appreciated that the most important army problems are involved in that archipelago, and to have a proper conception of conditions there the ranking officer of the army ought to have had actual experience in army administration in the Philippines.

With this end in view, President Roosevelt has asked Gen. Corbin to take command in the Philippines. The assignment is somewhat of a surprise to those who unwarrantedly supposed that the president would promote Brig. Gen. Leonard Wood to military command of those islands. President Roosevelt is Gen. Wood's friend, but not to the extent of partiality. His assignment of Gen. Corbin to the Philippines is proof of this, as it is no secret that the friendliest feeling does not exist between Corbin and Wood. When Gen. Corbin has served a year or so in the Philippines he will be recalled and will succeed Lieut. Gen. Chaffee as chief of staff. He will then have rounded out a career that includes every feature of army administration, as his term as adjutant general embraced the Spanish war and the Philippine insurrection and gave him knowledge of every branch of the service.

Mrs. Hanna Gets Cabin Home.

Miss Ruth Hanna.

Gen. Corbin has been able to do a favor to Mrs. Hanna, widow of the late Senator M. A. Hanna, of Ohio. He has leased to the latter his Washington residence, one of the handsomest and best-adapted houses at the capital for home living or entertaining. It was a source of gratification to the general that he could offer his home to the widow of one of the best friends he ever had. In order to do this he had to break off abruptly negotiations with Secretary of the Navy Paul Morton, who was extremely anxious to secure the Corbin house during the general's absence in the Philippines. Terms had been agreed upon between the general and the secretary, and the latter was congratulating himself on obtaining an ideal home where he could entertain in a manner befitting a cabinet officer.

At this juncture Mrs. Hanna telegraphed Gen. Corbin, expressing a wish to rent his house, as she proposed making Washington her winter home. The general considered the matter just about two minutes, or long enough to indite an answering telegram saying: "The house is yours." He then had to wire Secretary Morton that under the circumstances their negotiations would have to be dropped. It was considerable of a disappointment to Mr. Morton, but he fully appreciated the sentiment governing Gen. Corbin in the matter, and declared that not for one minute would he think of asserting any sort of a claim against the wish of Mrs Hanna for the house.

Mrs. Hanna will add another to the colony of distinguished people that is making Washington celebrated as a winter residence city. In her latter years Mrs. U. S. Grant spent the winter and fall in the city. Mrs. Gen. Sheridan lives here; Mrs. Hearst, the widow of the late senator from California, makes Washington her home, and many other people formerly holding distinguished positions in official life maintain residences here.

A Picturesque Character.

Interrupted the Queen's Bath.

There is passing away in Washington one of the most picturesque characters of official life that has been known in the last quarter of a century. For some years past he has been out of public gaze, but soon after the war, during reconstruction days and later, he was a familiar figure in political and official walks and achieved no little notoriety and reputation. He is Judge George O'Reilly, a native of Ireland, born with the proverbial Irish wit and genius, but for years a prominent republican leader in Virginia. Such a position in this rock-ribbed democratic state naturally gave him notoriety.

During President Grant's administration he was given the place of consular agent to Zanzibar, South Africa, as a slight recognition of services he rendered to the party.

If the idea was to commit him to obscurity by sending him to that far-off station, the state department reckoned without its man. He had not been there very long before he came prominently before the public. A man of some means, he set up an establishment with his family that was considerably above those maintained by the native officials, no matter how high their rank. The Judge insisted on the observance of official etiquette and the amenities of diplomatic life.

The manners of the natives were very primitive, and their customs grated upon the finer feelings of the judge and his family. It was the habit of the queen of Zanzibar and her court to take her daily bath in the waters immediately in front of the United States consulate. The dusky monarch was not trammeled by any restrictions as to bathing costume, and the appearance of her and her attendants with no suggestion of a bathing suit shocked the United States representative, who warned them to desist from the habit. He accompanied the warning with a threat if they persisted in bathing in this style he would drive them out of the water with a gun.

The queen refused to regard the threat seriously, and the next day she and her suite assembled at the usual place and prepared to bathe. The judge wasted no words, but took his gun, which he had charged with salt and pepper, and fired into the crowd. The queen received most of the stinging charge and there was a tremendous commotion. The incident was reported to Washington, and the judge recalled. He has lived most of the time since in Washington and has always delighted in relating his experiences as the representative of the United States in far-off Zanzibar.

New Typesetting Machines.

Introducing Typesetting Machines.

Public printer Palmer is working a revolution in the government printing office by the installation of new typesetting machines. There has all along been a decided, although quiet, opposition to the introduction of these machines into the government service, the old-line typos being reluctant to give up their cases. Mr. Palmer has long been of the opinion that economy should be practiced in the government work as well as in private establishments and has been convinced that the modern typesetting machines should be used. Their introduction has been gradual, but in a short time the bulk of the government printing will be done upon these machines.

The public printer states that 74 new typesetting machines are now being installed, but this will not mean the dismissal of any of the regular force. This dissipates one of the objections, which was that man would be thrown out of if mechanical typesetters were introduced. Mr. Palmer has had his printers attend schools of instruction, where they have studied the methods of operations and learned to manipulate the keyboards of the machines now in general use. These men will simply leave their cases and sit down before the machines, while they draw their usual compensation from the government treasury. There is a temporary force employed at times when there is a rush at the printing office, and these men may be affected by the change, but the steady growth of government printing is sure to make places for all of them in time.

Well how did it happen?. How would you do if it was to do all all over again?.

The method being employed to dispose of the Red Lake Indian Lands will certainly delay the general settlement of them for a number of years. When a prospective settler looks at those lands and selects a quater section of it, he makes induiry how he is to get title to it, and when told that he must go to the U.S. Land office on a certain date and buy it at auction he is liable to make settlement in some other locality and when the lands are offered that he would have bought and commenced improveing, he is in some othe state and the word "passed" is placed opposit them and the wild grass continues to grow in place of the waving grain. If this land was placed on the market and people allowed to make their selections and go to the Land office and buy them they would not long remain vacant.

The King of Bardsey.

About a mile distant from the rocky promontory of Braich-y-Pwll, the extreme westerly point of north Wales, lies the island of Bardsey, the home of a singularly isolated community. The island is the property of Lord Newborough and was a favorite resort of the third baron, grandfather and predecessor in the title of the present peer. At that period the island was even more remote and out of the way than at present. Communication with Pwllhall was infrequent and uncertain. Consequently the Bardsey folk formed an entirely independent community, forced by circumstances to conduct their own affairs without special reference to the laws of the country. Lord Newborough instituted the office of "king." Selecting from the islanders one of superior parts and character, he invested him with the general authority which he himself possessed as landlord, bidding the rest to obey his ruling, abide by his decisions in case of dispute and in general respect his authority. Partly in jest, partly to strengthen his vicegerent's position, he conferred upon that worthy the title of "king of Bardsey" and bestowed upon him a crown, a treasure and an army. The "crown" was a gorgeous diadem of brass, wondrously embossed and wrought; the "treasure" a silver casket brought from Italy, and the "army" a wooden figure painted to represent a soldier.

Grotesque African Customs.

Tattooing is almost universally practiced by both sexes of the natives of Africa. It is, however, very roughly done and is altogether inferior to the tattooing of the Maoris of New Zealand and other Pacific races. The method of operation is simply to make a slit in the skin and then rub in charcoal. Among the less pleasing feminine ornaments must be reckoned the nose buttons of the Wa Yao and the frightful pelele, or lip ring, of the Anyanja. The nose button is a circular disk of ivory or burnished lead let into one side of the nostril. Ugly as is the effect produced by this, it is yet a thousand times less hideous than the pelele, which consists of a round, flat piece of ivory or wood fixed in a slit in the upper lip. The slit is gradually increased by the insertion of successive plugs, each a little larger than the preceding one, until it can accommodate a full sized pelele, which sticks out an inch or more in front of the face, rendering the appearance of the wearer scarcely human.

Infallible.

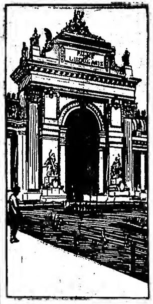
He—The trouble with you, dear, is that you never will admit it when you are in the wrong. She—That's no such thing. I'd admit it in a moment if I were wrong, but the fact of the matter is I never am wrong, and you know it. Harry Merrilton.

PHILIPPINES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Complete Exhibition of Island People and Industries Covers Forty-seven Acres and Is Independent of Larger Show.

Not even in the heart of Manila city could there be found forty-seven acres of Philippine territory as interesting as that amount of space covered by the islands' display at the World's Fair. Here is an exposition within an exposition, a little wheel that revolves independently of the larger one encompassing it.

Scores of buildings are filled with exhibits, native life is depicted by as many different villages as there are tribes on the islands, military drills are given by Philippine troops, and concerts are rendered by native bands. For its amusement features the Philippine exposition has the humorous Igorrote, who dines on dog meat, and visitors are entertained by Visayan actors and actresses. Nothing is lacking to make the show complete.



SOUTH ENTRANCE PALACE OF LIBERAL ARTS, WORLD'S FAIR.

The Administration building is a replica of the government offices in Manila, while the Art and Education building reproduces in miniature the cathedral within the walled city, even the mellowed tints of age being faithfully rendered. A section of the ancient but still serviceable town wall has been reconstructed to serve the double purpose of a gateway to the show and a museum of arms and war relics. The other main edifices are types of Filipino homes, being built of undressed timber, bamboo and rattan, with thatched roofs and broad verandas.

Then there are the tribal villages nestling under the trees, some of the houses perched high up among the boughs, others on piles above the waters of the Arrowhead lake, all of them actual dwellings fashioned of native materials by native workmanship and illustrating the manners, customs and pursuits of their occupants. Here are women weaving a coarse cloth on a rude hand loom, others making baskets, others tending irrigated fields of rice. One group of men are in village council, trying an offender according to their tribal laws; others are slowly moving in a circular dance to the thump of tomtoms and the clang of brass gongs; others, again, are smelting iron by the aid of a primitive but most ingenious bellows, the constituent parts of which are a bamboo tube and an air-tight mop of feathers working therein like the piston of a syringe. And these are but a few of an almost endless variety of life pictures.

The ethnological problem is a somewhat complicated one; but, although there are no fewer than sixteen races represented among the village dwellers, the scouts and the constabulary, each race speaking its own dialect and following its own customs, all may be roughly classified into four groups—the true aboriginals or non-Malays, the pagan Malays, the Christian Malays and the Mohammedan Malays.

The first are the dwarf Negritos, with dark skins and woolly heads, wearers of scanty raiment, proficient in the use of the bow and poisoned arrow, a race of nomads and forest dwellers, pagans pure and simple. They live in their own stockaded village.

Next to them are the Igorrotes, whose origin is traced back to the first wave of Malay invasion. Here, again, we have scanty clothing, amounting almost to nudity, but copper colored skins, long wavy tresses, pleasant featured faces and fine physiques, even though the stature be small. Among these pagan Malays are the head hunters and the dog eaters. They are savages, yet have their code of laws and a knowledge of several primitive industries.

The Christian Malays, produced by the second wave of invasion, are represented by the Visayans, a tall and handsome race, dressing well, living in pretty homes, skilled in weaving, dyeing, basket making, hat making, wood carving and other handicrafts, musicians of no mean merit, the one group of natives who came early and thoroughly under the influence of the early Spanish settlers.

Very different are the Moros, who swept into the islands from the Malay peninsula last of all, bringing with them their Mohammedan religion, also a knowledge of gunpowder acquired with the Koran from the Arabs—fanatics like their teachers, pirates, bloodthirsty, treacherous and vindictive fellows, ever at war among themselves and with the whole outside world. Despite their ferocity they are a clever race, dress handsomely, have their sultans and their slaves and are expert seamen, while long continued pillage on the high seas has surrounded them with many of the luxuries and conveniences of western civilization.

The buildings of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries show all the varied natural products, also the extremely primitive processes now yet in vogue, while in the Women's building we are introduced to a number of native manufactures, including the beautiful fabrics from the jusi, banana and pineapple fibers. This information is collated in the Building of Commerce, where a unique and most effective method of exhibiting is followed. In one hall are samples of all the articles produced for export, among which manila fiber, of course, holds the chief place of prominence, while in a second hall are all the manufactures from every country that are imported and find a ready market among the populace. Thus the business man gets a dual lesson. He sees what he can profitably take from the islands, and also what he may profitably send to them. When it is added that a large number of representative Filipinos have been brought over to visit the Exposition and study American business methods and manufactures, it will be recognized that great benefit both to the islands and to the world at large must result from this work of mutual enlightenment.

CONCERTS BY MASSED BANDS

Prizes Aggregating $30,000 to Be Distributed at the World's Fair.

Never were musical events in America planned upon such an elaborate scale as those of the World's Fair. A series of concerts will be given by competing bands in contest for prizes offered by the World's Fair. These contests will take place in Festival Hall, Sept. 12 to 17.

Nine cash prizes, aggregating $30,000, are offered for the successful bands. The prizes are divided so as to give to the organization scoring the highest number of points $3,250; $2,500 will be given to the band scoring the second highest number of points and $1,500 to the one getting the third highest number.

The above division is made for bands in Class A, which consist of twenty members. In the B class $10,000 will be given in prizes—first, $4,500; second, $3,500; third, $2,000.

Class C, which includes bands of thirty-five members, will enjoy the division of $12,750. For the organization scoring the highest number of points a prize of $6,000 has been named. The second prize is $4,000 and the third $2,700.

Bands employed by the Exposition are not permitted to contest. All players must be bona fide members, and each musician must have been enrolled at least three months prior to the date of the contest. Each band must send to the bureau the name of its members and a nominal entrance fee.

Festival Hall concerts by massed bands will be given at 7:30 each day during the contest, in which all contesting bands will take part under the direction of a distinguished conductor. All bands entering must agree to play one concert in addition to the competing concert and massed concerts.

A separate programme has been prepared by the Bureau of Music for each class, and each band will play through the full programme of its class. The numbers in all three programmes are by eminent composers and are chosen with the view of bringing out the qualities of the bands performing them. The list of composers includes Wagner, Gounod, Offenbach, Verdi, Saint-Saens, Bizet, Strauss and Leoncavallo.

WEATHER AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Cool Nights and Delightful Indian Summer to Be Expected at St. Louis.

Usually the warmest month of the year, July proved to be one of the most pleasant of the World's Fair season, the average temperature being 77 degrees, a record lower than that made by either Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati or Chicago. The weather bureau records show that the temperatures in St. Louis during July were just between the extremes recorded at New Orleans and St. Paul cities located at great variance.

August in St. Louis is a month of cool nights, and September and October are the most delightful months of the year. It is that period known as Indian summer, when the foliage and birds linger to challenge the coming winter. Nowhere on the American continent is there a spot more delightful than the World's Fair city, a garden of blooming flowers and spraying fountains.

St. Louis, like all cities, experienced several hot days during July, but her highest temperature recorded was 93 degrees against 94 degrees registered by the thermometer at Chicago. On the same day the mercury rose to 96 degrees in Philadelphia, and scores of heat prostrations were reported from New York and Boston.

The relative humidity shows St. Louis to be about normal. Assuming absolutely no moisture in the atmosphere to be zero and absolute wetness to be 100, the relative humidities for July, taken from the records of more than twenty years, Boston shows 70.0, New York 72.2, Philadelphia 68.0, Cincinnati 64.6, Chicago 66.0 and St. Louis 66.3. The same degree of heat in two places, with different degrees of humidity, would cause it to seem the hotter at the point of greater density.

St. Louis may therefore rightly claim to be a summer resort this summer, positively one of the most comfortable and delightful places on the map.

Appreciated His Mercies.

Bishop Wilberforce used to tell a story of a greedy clergyman who, when asked to say grace, looked anxiously to see if there were champagne glasses on the table. If there were he began: "Bountiful Jehovah!" But if he saw only claret glasses, he said: "We are not worthy of the least of thy mercies."

Blessings of the Railroad.

"The new railroad has been a great blessing to us," says a rural exchange. "In less than six weeks we got enough damages out of it to build a town hall and grade the cemetery. A few more enterprises of this kind, and our town will rise to heights undreamed of in the history of new settlements."—Atlanta Constitution.

The primary elections were not largely attended by the farmers on Tuesday,but there was enough out to give the different candidate a sample of the opinion of the people and a larger vote would not have changed the result.

Candidates cards that were scattered around, during the primary election campaign were sometimes dressed up with a pencil in such a manner as to prevoke mirth. We noticed one fitted out with eye glasses and on the bottom of his card was written. "Don't cry but take Marks Bracer Bitters".

Human Inequality.

There is a notion, and a most pernicious one, that it is the highest realization of republican form of government that all the people should by some forcing process be made as much alike as possible. All human beings are born equal only in the single fact that they all come into the world by the same natural process. The same equality exists in the matter of death, since what we call life is extinguished for all under the selfsame conditions. But that is all the equality that is possible, for human beings are all unlike and unequal in bodily and mental characteristics, and to such an extent does this lack of equality go that it is seen in the peculiarities of every individual.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Whistler Adorer.

In his book on Whistler, Mortimer Menpes writes: "Once an interesting figure appeared on our horizon, a French painter. He was Whistler's find and was held up to us followers as an example. 'At last,' Whistler said, 'I have found a follower worthy of the master.' I noticed with secret joy that he did not call him pupil. This man went bareheaded always when in the presence of Whistler. Whether out of doors or in, no one could persuade him to wear a hat."

Its Advantages.

Scene—Train stopping at small railroad station. Irritable Old Gentleman—What on earth do they stop at a station like this for? Objectionable Passenger (alighting)—To allow me to get out. Irritable Old Gentleman—Ah! I see it has its advantages then.

The Reason.

Little Son—Father, is there a reason for all things? Father—Yes, I suppose so. Little Son—Well, then, father, why do hens lay eggs? Father—Because they can't stand them on end.

Give Him a Chance.

The Elderly Lady—They say his wife has money. The Younger—Well, that isn't his fault. They've only been married a short time.

Old London Bridge.

Old London bridge was a monstrosity. It dated back to the year 1176 A. D., and at least three wooden bridges are known to have occupied the same site prior to that date.

The old bridge was slightly over 900 feet in length, and had eighteen solid stone piers, varying in thickness from twenty-five to thirty-four feet, thus confining the flow of the river to less than half its natural channel. The entire surface of the bridge was occupied by blocks of brick and stone buildings—erected on arches, with the roadway running tunnel-like beneath—some of them four stories high. All of these bridge buildings were densely packed with human beings—at one time estimated at 1,700—carrying on all the trades and other vocations of life. Spanning the two center piers was a huge church building, dedicated to St. Thomas of Canterbury, but usually styled St. Peter's of the Bridge.

In very early time the arch opening from the bridge toward the city was called "Traitors' gate," and it was an unusual thing to see the heads of a dozen executed criminals hanging over it.

Christmas Feasting In Old Times.

There are certain dishes which are peculiarly dedicated by custom and tradition to the Christmas feast. The plum pudding is almost the sole survivor of a long list of equally savory ones. There was the boar's head, always the herald of the feast and always seasoned with mustard. Next in importance was the peacock. The skin was carefully stripped off, with the plumage adhering. The bird was then roasted. When it was done and had cooled it was served up again in its feathers and with gilded beak was sent to the table. Sometimes the whole body was covered with gold leaf and a piece of cotton saturated with spirits placed in its beak and lighted as it made its gorgeous entry. The noble bird was not served by common hands. That privilege was reserved for the ladies most distinguished by birth and beauty. Geese, capons, pheasants and pies of carps' tongues also helped to set out the Christmas table in days gone by.

Trial by Jury.

Trial by twelve compurgators, which was of canonical origin, existed in Anglo-Saxan times, and only resembled what is known as trial by jury in the number of persons sworn. Under the name of wager of law it continued to be the law of England until abolished Aug. 14, 1833. Traces of trial by jury are found in the reigns of William I. and II., Henry I. and Stephen, but it was not fully established until the reign of Henry II. Trial by jury was first adapted in criminal cases in the reign of John, 1189-99, and was the established mode of dealing with them at the end of the thirteenth century. Witnesses were examined and evidence first laid before juries in the reign of Henry VI., 1422-61, but this change was not fully carried out till the time of Edward VI., 1547-53. The laws respecting juries in England were remodeled June 22, 1825.—London Globe.

Rare Ornithological Curios.

The catalogue of the Musaeum Tradescantianum, or Tradescant's museum, published in England in the year 1656, makes mention of many rare ornithological curios owned or left on deposit in that institution. Among the dozens listed three are especially interesting—viz, "two feathers from the tayle of a phoenix," "Easter eggs laid by ye mayle barnyarde fowls" and "the claw of the bird roc, who, as authors report, is able to truss an elephant."

Sixteenth Century Manners.

In an old book published in the sixteenth century and entitled "The Accomplished Lady's Rich Closet; or, Ingenious Gentlewoman's Delightful Companion," it is written:

"A gentlewomen being at table must observe to keep her body straight and lean not by any means with her elbows nor by ravenous gesture discover a voracious appetite. Talk not when you have meat in your mouth and do not smack like a pig nor venture to eat spoon meat so hot that the tears stand in your eyes, which is as unseemly as the gentlewoman who pretended to have as little a stomach as she had a mouth and therefore would not swallow her peas by spoonful, but took them one by one and cut them in two before she would eat them. It is very unseemly to drink so large a draft that your breath is almost gone and you are forced to blow strongly to recover yourself. In carving at your own table distribute the best pieces first, and it will appear very comely and decent to use a fork, so touch no piece of meat without it."

Science and Human Sense Organs.

Dr. Carl Snyder says in the American Inventor, while pointing out the inferiority of human sense organs to the instruments of science, that, whereas the human eye can see only little more than 3,000 stars in the heavens on the clearest of nights, the photographic plate and the telescope can discern countless millions. The eye if a good one can perceive a measure of one two-hundredth of an inch. The microscope makes an object one ten-thousandth of an inch look comparatively large. To hear the footsteps of a fly seems inconceivable; but, assisted by the microphone, the tread of that insect sounds like the tramp of cavalry. The most sensitive skin cannot detect a change in temperature of less than one-fifth of a degree, but the bolometer will register on a scale an increase or decrease of temperature of one one-millionth of a degree and can discern the difference in temperature in a room when a match is lighted.

Imitation In Animals.

Some animals have wonderful powers of imitation. Dogs brought up in the company of cats have been known to acquire the trick of licking the paws and then washing the face. When a cat has been taught to sit up for her food her kittens have been known to imitate her action. Darwin tells of a cat that was in the habit of putting her paw into the mouth of a narrow milk pitcher every time she got the chance and then licking the cream off her paw. Her kitten soon learned the same trick. A lady tells of a rabbit that she keeps in a cage with a monkey and says that Bunnie has caught many of the monkey's ways. It is said that starving pigeons that have been brought up on grain will not eat peas to save their lives, but that if pea eating pigeons are put with them they follow their example and eat peas.

Von Lenbach the Painter.

Franz von Lenbach, the great portrait painter, painted three portraits of the poet Adolph Wilbrandt. The sittings varied from three to five hours. On one occasion the sitting lasted through the whole day, with intervals for meals. The afternoon passed, and dusk came on, but still Lenbach worked away without appearing to notice the falling light. At last it got so dark that Wilbrandt could [illegible] him. He called his attention to this, saying that it seemed impossible for him to paint any more, but Lenbach begged him, unless he was tired, to continue sitting. "But what can you see of me?" asked the puzzled poet. "Quite the best of all. Excellent. Sit still, please." And the sitting only ended with the last glimmer of light.

A Pert Maid.

The B.'s had given an impertinent maid notice and in consequence were obliged to assume the duties that she pointedly neglected. On the last day of Katia's stay as one of the ladies of the family was hastening to answer a ring at the front door she was arrested by an explosive whisper from the rear of the hall, where the irrepressible servant, Katia, in most unpicturesque dishabille, was established. "Mrs. B., if that's any one for me, say I'm out."

Fruitful Normandy.

A traveler in France writes: "Normandy is sweet, clean, green and prosperous. Its inns are crowned thatches are the most beautiful, its posy gardens the most sedulously nurtured and its farmyards the most enchanting in all France. Its cows are sleek and good milkers, its horses world famous and its bland women—even those seasoned by field labor—always sphinxlike and often fair. It is attractive, sensuously speaking, at every season, and the Normans, with all their droll fears for their pocketbooks, are not bad company in the long run."

How He Viewed It.

There was a carriage accident in a town in Scotland. A brougham containing two ladies was run away with down a steep hill. The noise and clatter of the horses' hoofs on the causeway with which the town was paved were terrific. A Scotch farmer who was walking on the footpath turned to watch the carriage disappearing in the distance and said to his companion, "For us who see it, it is indeed a fearsome sight, but for those who are inside it must be a rich spiritual experience!"—London Gentlewoman.

Your Heart
May Be Weak. One Person in Four Has a Weak Heart.

One of the surest signs of a weak heart is shortness of breath after exercise. Your heart is not able to pump the blood fast enough to your lungs.

Some of the other symptoms of Heart Trouble are: Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulder; Fainting or Weak Spells; Dry Cough; Swelling of Feet and Ankles; Cold Feet or Hands.

No one can afford to allow a weak heart to go without medicine, because weak heart means poor circulation, and poor circulation means weak lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, etc.

If, therefore, you suspect heart trouble, begin taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. The Heart Cure will do you good, as it is a splendid tonic for the blood and nerves, and will revitalize your entire system.

Finally, remember, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold under a guarantee that the first bottle will do you good. If it doesn't—your money back.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Leipsic, O.

Cold Tea?

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground after the crowd had left, picked up 219 bottles ranging in capacity from a half-pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

Fighters for Humanity.

Every important step in the progress of civilization has come from those who for humanity and the world's benefit were willing to fight battles and become unpopular; but their memory remains, and the bell of every steamer that plows the waters of the Potomac is tolled while passing the tomb of Washington.—George S. Angell.

MADE HIM UNDERSTAND.

Least Intelligent Member of the Audience Pleasantly Acknowledged the Truth.

A famous scientist whose early home had been in a country district had long promised to visit the scenes of his boyhood and deliver a lecture in aid of the funds of one of the institutions of the place. At last he fulfilled his promise, and the lecture was given, relates London Tit-Bits.

When, at its close, he was conversing with some of the principal promoters of the affair they warmly congratulated him on the facility with which he made his rather technical matter interesting and clear to his somewhat uncultured audience.

"Oh," said he, by way of explanation, "I invariably fix my attention upon that member of my audience who strikes me as having the least intelligent face, and I continue to explain any subject upon which I touch until I see by that person's expression that he understands it."

Almost directly afterwards the leading public official of the little town came into the room and made his way to where the scientist was standing.

"Sir," he exclaimed, "you cannot possibly believe how much real pleasure you have given me to-night. It seemed to me all the time as if your eye was never away from me, that you spoke to me alone, and that your whole wish was to make me understand every word you said."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

His Son Was Alive.

The body taken from the river in St. Paul is not that of Chris G. Urness. Urness is alive and hearty. He is working in a Minneapolis boarding house.

The body was identified by John Urness of Mondovi, Wis., as that of his son Chris who came to the Twin Cities during the fair week for the purpose of seeing the fair. The absence of certain birth-marks was accounted for by the partial decomposition caused by the water.

While the father thought the body taken from the river was that of his son he did not stop his search for him thinking there was a possibility of some mistake. What was his joy later to discover that his boy was still with the living, and working in Minneapolis well and hearty, while for two days the aged father was weeping over the supposed body of his son.

Held Up Gambling House.

As Patrolman James Nolan rushed up to the door of the Asnmore gambling rooms in Minneapolis, where he had been called by a shooting affray, a masked man, who had just held up the place, ran out and without waiting an instant, raised his revolver and shot the policeman two times.

Turning from his prostrate victim he saw Frank McCormick running toward him and fired again, but missed. Then as McCormick placed a revolver against the highwayman's head but he broke away and escaped, while the other snapped a broken revolver.

The shooting occurred at the entrance to the gambling room over McCormick's saloon.

The place, which is the finest equipped in the city, was filled with men at the faro tables, roulette wheels and poker games.

The highwayman secured only $13. Policeman Nolan was not seriously hurt.

Lumber Shipments.

Shipments of lumber out of Lake Superior ports last month were 150,308,000 feet, and for the season to date they have been 493,324,000. This is in comparison with 152,443,000 and 576,118,000 for the corresponding periods of last year. The decrease is due entirely to the later opening of navigation, for since business commenced in 1904 it has been it has been greater than for the same period in 1903. Shipments are going along rapidly from all ports and will make up a good deal of the losses of the early part of the year, but the total cannot be expected to reach as high. About four-ninths of shipments off the lake are from Duluth and Two Harbors. Ashland comes next.

Cases are Ended.

If the motion offered by the county attorney when the case against A. A. Ames was called is granted by the judges of the district court, the former mayor of Minneapolis will never be brought to trial upon a corruption charge. The motion, was in brief, to nolle all the indictments now standing against the ex-mayor, ten in number.

One of the indictments is for offering a bribe to a public officer, another for conspiracy, another for extortion and seven for receiving a bribe. Mr. Boardman in moving that the indictments be dismissed, gave full reasons.

The court however refused to entertain the motion and decided that the trial should proceed.

Precarious accident.

Arthur Smith of Lockhart met with a precarious accident and it was at first thought the accident would prove fatal. Together with some neighbors he was preparing to go hunting and just before starting they drove up to a shock of oats and were going to throw on some bundles for feed. Smith threw out the pitchfork and then jumped out of the wagon. In some way the tines were upturned and in jumping out of the wagon Smith landed on the fork, the tines entering his body full length, taking two men to extract the fork.

The chances are favorable for his recovery but the accident is a very serious one and it will be some time before Mr. Smith will be able to be around again.

Peculiar Death.

Frank Chrisovski, employed at the Diamond sawmill, Minneapolis, died at the city hospital from the effects of a a most peculiar accident. He was working at a machine and a sliver of a board he was sawing flew off and entered his head. It went in so far that it was necessary to saw a piece off before it could be removed.

The injured man was taken from the mill to the city hospital and died there ten minutes after their arriving.

Brief Notes.

The Security State bank of Seaforth has been admitted to do business with a capital stock of $10,000. George H. Johnson is president, and John Longbuttom, cashier.

The plant of the Buckeye Foundry company, St. Paul, was burned, causing a loss of $3,000, partially covered by insurance.

The Minnesota artillerymen invite the Illinois batteries to shoot for the cup held by Minnesota.

Nels Nelson, a harvest hand, became violently insane at the Wiedemann farm near Moorhead. His home is in Wisconsin.

Engebret Haaginson of Battle Lake, who was kicked by a horse some days ago, died.

The general store of O. C. Reed at Crookston was damaged by fire. Reed's stock, valued at $25,000, is almost worthless. The insurance is $12,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A new depot is to be built at Angus to replace the burned by lightning in the summer.

"Did you ever hear about that tax collector's hard luck?"

"No. What was it?"

"He called on a mesmerist. She hypnotized him into the back yard and made him beat carpets for five hours."

"Great Scott!" cried the head clerk, "does it take you four hours to carry a message a mile and return?"

"Why," said the new office boy, "you told me to see how long it would take me to go there and back, and I did it."

"Frankly, madam," said the honest outfitter, "I wouldn't advise you to take that dress."

"Why not?" asked the woman.

"It doesn't match your complexion," he explained.

"Oh, well," she replied, carelessly, "I can change the complexion."

"I see by this poiper dat the sciantific sharps say dat a feller ort ter wash his hands every time he handles money," said Dodgen Wurk, looking up from the paper he had begged from a passing stranger.

"I ollus wash me hands after handlin' money," said Will Knott Toylo, gazing at his fingers.

"Here is another example of faulty English," said the teacher of the class in rhetoric. "In this essay you have written: 'Her sight broke upon a landscape of entrancing loveliness.' How could her sight 'break upon' a landscape?"

"She might have dropped her eyes!" timidly ventured the young woman who had written the essay.

HOME REMEDIES.

A fig split open makes a good poultice for a boil. It is especially useful for gum-boil. A split raisin is also good.

In severe paroxysms of coughing, either in coughs, colds or consumption, one or two tablespoonfuls of pure glycerine, in pure rye whisky or hot, rich cream, will afford almost immediate relief; and to the consumptive a panacea is found by daily using glycerine internally in the proportion of one part powdered willow charcoal and two parts of glycerine.

CHANGE FOOD

Some Very Fine Results Follow.

The wrong kind of food will put the body in such a diseased condition that no medicines will cure it. There is no way but to change food. A man in Mo. says:

"For 2 years I was troubled so with my nerves that sometimes I was prostrated and could hardly ever get in a full month at my work.

"My stomach, back and head would throb so I could get no rest at night except by fits and starts, and always had distressing pains.

"I was quite certain the trouble came from my stomach, but two physicians could not help me and all the tonics failed and so finally I turned to food.

"When I had studied up on food and learned what might be expected from leaving off meat and the regular food I had been living on, I felt that a change to Grape-Nuts would be just what was required, so I went to eating it.

"From the start I got stronger and better until I was well again, and from that time I haven't used a bit of medicine, for I haven't needed any.

"I am so much better in every way, sleep soundly nowadays and am free from the bad dreams. Indeed, this food has made such a great change in me that my wife and daughter have taken it up and we are never without Grape-Nuts on our table nowadays. It is a wonderful sustainer, and we frequently have nothing else at all but a saucer of Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast or supper." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Good food and good rest. These are the tonics that succeed where all the bottled tonics and drugs fail. Ten days' trial of Grape-Nuts will show one the road to health, strength and vigor. "There's a reason."

SOME FORMS OF BEGGING.

Two, Once Familiar, Now Seldom Heard and One That Is Perennial.

"There are fashions in begging, no doubt," said Mr. Blinkintoo, according to the New York Sun, "just as there are in all things. They come and go.

"A fashion that prevailed not so many years ago started with this formula:

"'Mister, I don't want any money, not a cent, but I'm hungry. I want something to eat. Take me to some restaurant and gi' me something to eat. Don't give me the money; you pay for it yourself. Only gi' me something to eat.'

"The theory of the inventor of this form of begging was the that first it would appeal by its apparent sincerity; and, secondly, that the person thus asked for a meal wouldn't have time to turn aside from his business to take the beggar to a restaurant, and so if he were impressed would give the beggar money; which, of course, was what the beggar wanted.

"This form of begging was very popular and successful for a time. It even came to have quite a literature.

"There was, for instance, the story of the hardy and able man who, held up with this appeal, dragged the beggar to a restaurant and there compelled him to eat, standing over him with a club; and, though the beggar had already eaten four breakfasts, forcing him to keep on eating until he begged for mercy.

"And there was the story of the beggar told by himself in a beggar's joint of how in one short afternoon he had been compelled by seven stingy givers to eat in quick succession seven meals of doughnuts and sinkers. Thus the stories ran. I had one actual experi- of my own:

"I'm no judge of beggars, I frankly confess; I can't always tell by any means whether a beggar is worthy or not. But once, when this form of begging was common, I met a tall, slim young man who stopped me and said to me: 'Mister, I'm hungry, can't you gi' me something to eat?' I took a chance and took the young man to a restaurant.

"I couldn't tell whether he was just a beggar who had learned the patter or whether that request had just come up out of him spontaneously, but the instant I had said 'Come along' I felt sure he was all right; for that instant he stopped being a beggar and smiled up and walked along with me, not cringing, but as if I was his friend.

"And was he really hungry? Well, you should have seen him eat.

"'Son,' says I to him, when we got to the restaurant, 'there's the bill of fare. Feed yourself,' and he did.

"I think he must have been 17 days in an open boat without food, or something of that sort; but certainly he was of tubular construction inside, hollow all the way down, for his storage capacity was something stupendous.

"Eat? I never saw a man eat so in my life, and I never saw a man enjoy a meal so much. I like to eat myself and have been hungry at times, but I don't suppose I ever ate anything that tasted so good to me as that meal did to him.

"Lucky it was a cheap restaurant, for I only had about a dollar and a half with me. His check was $1.25, but I never begrudged him the money.

"But the 'Mister-I-don't-want-any-money-but-I-do-want-something-to-eat' form of begging, once so common, has now gone almost wholly out of fashion: it is now comparatively seldom employed.

"Another fashion in begging that in a more limited way and for a briefer time prevailed, and which also was celebrated in its day, was that which consisted in asking a man, not for food, but for money for a drink.

"'Mister,' says this beggar, picking his man, 'I ain't hungry a bit, but I do want a drink. Can you stand a dime for a drink?'

"This supposed frankness of this request, or its pure gall, or both combined, amused some people and was effective in some instances for a time; but not for long. It did not generally commend itself and it has now fallen practically into disuse.

"The perennial form of begging is that which consists in asking for carfare to get from the Battery to Harlem, or from Harlem to the Battery; the way he wants to go depending on where the beggar is at the moment of asking. Once I said to a man in Harlem, who had told me that he wanted to get to the Battery, but he hadn't got any money:

"'Then why in thunder don't you walk?'

"'Cause I got to get there at 11 o'clock,' he says, 'or I lose my job.'

"It was then 10:15, and what could I say to that? I have never asked a man since why he didn't walk.

"Only this morning I met a man at the Battery who wanted to get to Harlem and wanted a nickel for carfare. Honest, I don't know whether he was worth it or not, though I think he was, but anyhow I gave him the money and he took it with a smile, and:

"'Thank you,' he says.

"'I'm much obliged to you.

"'The Lord may spare your health, I hope.

"'Good luck to you.'

"And I was glad to give the nickel for such a blessing."

Train Song Birds.

Yorkshire has at Huddersfield a novel English association, which promotes the singing of larks. Captive birds are trained by being taken in boxes into the fields, where they are left to pick up the notes of free birds as best they can. Competition for prizes have just been held at various public houses, birds singing for ten minutes or longer without a break. In this way £6 or £7 in small prizes have been distributed, and the contests, from their sheer novelty, have proved an infinite source of amusement, if not of profit. The association has been in existence about 30 years.

"Sometimes," said the moralist, "friendship is only skin deep." "And most of the time," replied the cynic, "it's only a deep skin."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Miss Gannon, Sec'y Detroit Amateur Art Association, tells young women what to do to avoid pain and suffering caused by female troubles.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can conscientiously recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to those of my sisters suffering with female weakness and the troubles which so often befall women. I suffered for months with general weakness, and felt so weary that I had hard work to keep up. I had shooting pains, and was utterly miserable. In my distress I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it was a red letter day to me when I took the first dose, for at that time my restoration began. In six weeks I was a changed woman, perfectly well in every respect. I felt so elated and happy that I want all women who suffer to get well as I did."—MISS GUILA GANNON, 359 Jones St., Detroit, Mich., Secretary Amateur Art Association.

It is clearly shown in this young lady's letter that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will certainly cure the sufferings of women; and when one considers that Miss Gannon's letter is only one of the countless hundreds which we are continually publishing in the newspapers of this country, the great virtue of Mrs. Pinkham's medicine must be admitted by all; and for the absolute cure of all kinds of female ills no substitute can possibly take its place. Women should bear this important fact in mind when they go into a drug store, and be sure not to accept anything that is claimed to be "just as good" as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for no other medicine for female ills has made so many actual cures.

How Another Sufferer Was Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise your wonderful remedies enough, for they have done me more good than all the doctors I have had. For the last eight years and more I suffered with female troubles, was very weak, could not do my housework, also had nervous prostration. Some days I would remain unconscious for a whole day and night. My neighbors thought I could never recover, but, thanks to your medicine, I now feel like a different woman.

"I feel very grateful to you and will recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all. It has now been four years since I had the last spell of nervous prostration. I only weighed ninety-eight pounds at that time; now I weigh one hundred and twenty-three.

"I consider your Vegetable Compound the finest remedy made. Thanking you many times for the benefit I received from your medicine, I remain, Yours truly, MRS. J. H. FARMER, 2809 Elliott Ave., St. Louis, Mo."

Remember Mrs. Pinkham's advice is free and all sick women are foolish if they do not ask for it. She speaks from the widest experience, and has helped multitudes of women.

$5000 FORFEIT If we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

THE WAR AND ITS PROGRESS

RUSSIANS LOSE HEAVILY—JAPANESE CAPTURE DALING PASS.

Another Fierce Assault on Port Arthur—Slaughter Said to Be Indescribable.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—Daling pass, one of the most strategic spots in the siege of Mukden, has fallen to the Japanese, after repeated assaults.

The Russian Cossacks, who held the pass, were routed and fled in utter defeat Friday. They left 280 dead on the field.

This is the report which has just reached the war office here, and officials are plunged in the deepest gloom. The news, while official, has not been confirmed by messages from Kuropatkin, and until he reports to the czar it will not be known how the Japanese were able to defeat the Russians at the pass, which has been considered impregnable.

May Not Resist Advance.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 24.—The absence of detailed reports from the seat of war, despite the important character of events that are believed to be developing around Mukden, leads to the supposition that Gen. Kuropatkin may after all, not seriously contest the Japanese advance, and that the long expected battle at Mukden may turn out to be merely a rear guard action upon a large scale. Gen. Sakharoff reports that the Japanese army is moving from Bentsiaputze toward Fu Pass, a village six miles northeast of Mukden and near the right bank of the Hun river. The river at this point is shallow, and probably for this reason the locality has been selected by the Japanese for crossing. If the Japanese succeed in gaining a foothold at Fu Pass, Gen. Kuropatkin's position at Mukden will be insecure as the Japanese will from thence be able to threaten the Russian line of communications. Fu Pass is only 20 miles north of Beatsiaputze, but at the present rate of progress the Japanese will probably occupy four or five days in traversing it. The Russian force south of Mukden is believed to consist of only one army corps, which is acting as a rear guard and is not intended to offer a serious resistance to the Japanese advance.

Japan Needs Mukden.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—The Japanese advance towards Mukden continues slowly, according to information received by the authorities here. Both official reports and press dispatches place Marquis Oyama's advance guard 30 miles south of Mukden, while stories printed in the foreign press that a great battle at Mukden has already begun are disproved by the actual development at the scene of operations. There is no question in the minds of the Russian authorities of the importance of Mukden to the Japanese as a winter base. It is believed the Japanese will exert every effort to push out the Russians, but it is thought a serious struggle for the possession of the town is still some days distant. The Japanese probably will have to reckon first with a stubborn defense of the Fushun mines, where the next important fight is expected to take place.

Storming Port Arthur.

Paris, Sept. 24.—The Matin's St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs as follows: "Telegrams of which the general staff have as yet no knowledge reached the emperor at four o'clock this morning. I can affirm that they concern Port Arthur, regarding which place the greatest anxiety prevails at court. The Japanese are now engaged in a general assault, which is more furious than its predecessors, attacking the town on three sides simultaneously, and employing their whole forces, being determined to finish the business. Russian mines blew up whole battalions. Gen. Fock especially distinguished himself, directing the fire from the wall, which the Japanese reached after indescribable massacre. The whole of Admiral Togo's and Vice Admiral Kamimura's squadrons are aiding the struggle, which it is feared here will be final. The besieged forces are fighting as in a furnace. A perfect storm of shell is falling on the town, port and fortress from the whole hill and roadstead. Gen. Stoessel is going from fort to fort encouraging the defenders in their desperate efforts. In St. Petersburg the facts concerning the tragic event which will perhaps terminate by a glorious fall of Port Arthur are wholly unknown. At court hope has not yet been entirely abandoned."

Russians Meet Loss.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 23.—A detachment under Gen. Rennenkampff, while reconnoitering Wednesday lost two officers and nine men killed and had three officers and 23 men wounded.

Will Make Determined Effort.

Shanghai, Sept. 22.—A Chinese who left Port Arthur last Monday reports that owing to the incessant bombardment of the harbor by the Japanese the Russian fleet is determined to break out this week and endeavor to reach Tsingtau, the German port on the Shantung peninsula.

Woman Runs Blockade.

Chefoo, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Anna Kravtchenko, the English wife of a Russian army officer, who arrived here the night of September 17 with Lieut. Prince Radzivil from Port Arthur, is the first woman to run the blockade from the Russian stronghold since the Japanese increased their vigilance to prevent egress from the port. Her trip was rendered extremely perilous because she came out with the prince and his companion, Lieut. Christoforoff, who carried messages from Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, the commander at Port Arthur, to Gen. Kuropatkin. Both these officers were disguised, and had they been captured by the Japanese they certainly would have been executed.

Czar's Troops Routed.

Tokio, Sept. 24.—Two fierce fights have just occurred at Tieling and Sanlangku, disclosing the strength of the Japanese army farther north than the Russians had suspected. It is unknown whether or not the men belonged to the command of Gen. Kuroki.

Hope of remaining in Mukden has been abandoned by the Russians since the encounters farther north.

Official confirmation of the battles has been received here. The Japanese detachments, according to advices, advanced through Heinluchuang on September 20, slipping past a stronger Russian force. They then attacked the enemy, which was strongly fortified at Tieling. The spoils captured were valuable and the losses of the Japanese slight. One company of Russian infantry, a troop of Cossacks and a machine gun corps were routed at Tie pass. A whole battalion of infantry was attacked and put to flight at Sanlangka, which is eight miles north of Tieling. The Russians were driven off to the northward and left 19 dead on the field.

Headquarters' Transferred.

Rome, Sept. 24.—A telegram asserts that the Japanese headquarters have been transferred from Liaoyang to Yentai. Gen. Kuroki, according to the telegram, is gradually drawing his forces nearer to Mukden, and has now reached a point 25 miles to the eastward of that city.

Cholera in Port Arthur.

Tsintau, Sept. 24.—A Russian naval officer here has received official advices that cholera has appeared at Port Arthur. Up to September 19 there were only a few cases, but there were grave fears that the disease would become epidemic.

NINE MEET AWFUL DEATH

BOX OF DYNAMITE DROPPED ON STREET RAILWAY TRACK.

Car Loaded with Passengers Strikes It and Is Blown Up with Terrible Loss of Life.

Melrose, Mass., Sept. 22.—An outward-bound electric car, containing 32 persons, was blown to pieces in this city Wednesday night by striking a 50-pound box of dynamite that had fallen off an express wagon. Six persons were killed outright three more died of their injuries within an hour, and 19 others on the car were taken to the two hospitals suffering from severe injuries. At least a score of persons in the immediate vicinity of the explosion were hurt by flying glass and splinters.

So great was the force of the explosion that all but ten feet of the rear portion of the car was blown into small pieces, while windows within a radius of a quarter of a mile were shattered. The immediate vicinity of the accident presented a fearful spectacle when those in the neighborhood reached the scene. The ground was strewn with legs, arms and other portions of the bodies of those who had been killed, while shrieks and groans came from the writhing forms of the injured.

The police arrested Roy Fenton, driver of an express wagon. Fenton, it was learned, was carrying four 50-pound boxes of dynamite on his wagon and did not notice, until he reached the express office, that one of the boxes had dropped off. He hurried back in the hope of picking it up, but the electric car reached the box first. The force of the explosion was terrific, and the report was heard many miles. Directly opposite the scene was the Masonic building, every window of which was shattered, and through one of the windows a human foot was blown. A score of persons within 100 yards of the car were knocked down and rendered deaf by the concussion.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

Compromise Is Reached and Herrick Is Nominated for Governor.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Out of a situation which at times seemed almost impossible of amicable solution, the leaders of the democratic party on Wednesday found a way to unanimous action, and at 3:23 o'clock in the afternoon the state convention adjourned without day after having nominated unanimously the following ticket:

For governor, D. Cady Herrick, of Albany, at present justice of the state supreme court, and for lieutenant governor Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, now a representative in congress from the Thirteenth district.

The platform is chiefly devoted to state issues. It "arraigns before the bar of public judgment the one man power that to-day dominates the republican organization of New York state." The democratic national platform and resolutions adopted at St. Louis in July last are indorsed, as complete expositions of democratic principles and policies, upon all the living issues of the present time. The platform also indorses the democratic nominations for president and vice president of the United States.

SCAFFOLD FALLS.

Two Score Workmen Fall Fifty Feet—Three of Whom Are Killed—Many Injured.

Siloam Springs, Ark., Sept. 23.—A special to the Daily Republican from Grove, I. T., says: A fatal accident occurred Thursday three miles west of here, in which three men were killed outright, three fatally and five seriously injured by the falling of scaffold work on a bridge. The dead are: Henry Rucker, Thomas Browning and Ray Moore.

Fatally injured: Rufus Blevins, back broken; Charles Watson, internally injured; Lee Cary, back broken and other injuries.

Seriously injured: Henry Glenn, E. P. Huneig, J. P. Jackson, James Perrin. J. J. Smith, foreman of the steel works here, had his leg broken and is badly cut.

Forty men working on scaffolding surrounding an iron wagon bridge in course of construction across Grand river, were suddenly precipitated into the river below, a distance of over 50 feet, by the breaking of the scaffold work. Most of the workmen lived at Grove.

Wife's Fatal Error.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 23.—A special to the Register and Leader from Mount Ayr says: Mistaking him for a chicken thief, Mrs. Peter Lewis, of Blockley, Ia., fatally shot her husband early Thursday morning at their farm house. He died a few hours later. The Lewis farm had been repeatedly raided by chicken thieves and when Lewis returned unexpectedly from watching a sick neighbor Mrs. Lewis thought him a thief, opened a window and fired on him.

Don't blame Roosevelt or Bob Dunn because you were defeated at the primary election, but just consider that if they had been in your County they might have supported you and the result would have been different.

Between the Horns of a Dilemma.

He was walking to and fro on the station platform, and his anxiety was so marked that a friend inquired:

"What's the matter, Tibbs? You look as if you had something serious on your mind."

"I have," he replied. "I'm worried; badly worried. I've just found a dollar in my trousers pocket."

"You're the first man I ever saw that worried over finding money he didn't know he had."

"But you don't understand. I can't make up my mind whether I forgot the dollar or whether my wife slipped it in my pocket to try me. You see, she has been accusing me of keeping things from her. Now, if I were to blow this bill in without saying anything to her about it and it should turn out that she had played a trick on me my finish would be worth writing up. On the other hand, if I go to her and confess that I found it she'll simply take the dollar. I haven't been so worried in a month."—New York Press.

The Repulsive Squid.

Having caught a squid, a landlubber at sea thus describes him: "The squid is a small cousin of the octopus. He is about one foot long from the tip of his tail to the tip of his tentacles (extended). Normally he is of a pale tan and rich sienna, with darker spots, but he has the power to become if frightened almost colorless in an instant. In extreme fright he discharges a dirty brown secretion in the manner of his kind and escapes while the enemy is enveloped in the impenetrable smudge. The head is principally arms, with a formidable parrot-like beak in the center, while his eyes are located just back of the arm cluster. The tail is of the shape of a spearhead, with rounded barbs. I did not examine him very closely because of his snakelike tentacles, and, further, because his beak, rasping on the spear iron, was most unpleasant. We dropped him overboard, and I was glad to see him go."

Wild Dogs of Africa.

Of the wild dog of central Africa an explorer writes: "The wild dog is common enough. He is an ugly looking beast, with a pied body, coarse hair, short head and large, upright ears. These wild dogs play fearful havoc with game, occasionally clearing out whole districts precisely in the same manner as the red dhole of India, before which even the tiger is said to retreat. They have a wonderful power of scent, wonderful boldness, endurance and pertinacity, and their loose, easy gallop covers the ground far more quickly than it appears to do. They usually hunt in considerable packs, although I have sometimes met them in threes and fours. I have never heard of wild dogs actually attacking man, but they often behave as if on the point of doing so, and unarmed travelers have been literally treed by them before now."

Letter Perfect.

Rustic poets do not always find rhymes come easily and naturally. At least the following epitaph in a country district would seem to suggest it:

Here lies the body of William Lee.
This was him, this was he.
A B C D E F G.

Nevertheless there is no fault to be found with the actual rhyme as such.—London Globe.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN ON THE WORLD'S FAIR

What Distinguished Statesmen and Others Say of the Educational and Inspiring Exposition at St. Louis.

The public utterances of distinguished men who have visited the world's fair have but one note, and that of emphatic praise. Here are some of their comments:

Hon. John Hay, secretary of state: "I have never seen nor heard of anything so fine."

Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury: "Any father of a bright boy can afford to send him to the Fair simply to study any one of at least a thousand exhibits."

Hon. Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio: "A visit of ten days by a man of ordinary aptness and appreciative capacity to the Fair is almost equal to a postgraduate course in a university."

Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, governor of New York: "St. Louis has been badly misrepresented by accounts which say that her weather is unbearable. The Fair is wonderful."

Hon. George C. Pardee, governor of California: "The governor of the Golden State who has spent all his life within her borders, finds that he knew only a little about his state until he came to the Fair and saw all her varied products assembled together."

Hon. Albert B. Cummins, governor of Iowa: "The Louisiana Purchase Exposition is on the grandest scale of any exposition the world has ever seen."

Hon. Richard Yates, governor of Illinois: "The more I see of the Exposition the more I enjoy it."

Hon. Fenimore Chatterton, governor of Wyoming: "I wish the Fair the greatest success. It certainly deserves it."

Hon. Franklin Murphy, governor of New Jersey: "It is well worth coming from New Jersey to see even a small part of this Fair."

Hon. A. B. White, governor of West Virginia: "I cannot speak too strongly of the greatness of this Fair."

Hon. William J. Bryan: "The Exposition is an unparalleled wonder."

Hon. John Sharp Williams, member of congress from Mississippi: "The most wonderful thing of its kind."

Hon. Hoke Smith of Georgia, formerly secretary of interior under President Cleveland: "I am highly pleased with the Exposition and believe it to be one of the triumphs of modern civilization."

Hon. Perry Belmont of New York: "In magnitude and beauty the Fair is wonderful. It is worth coming a long distance to see."

Hon. Daniel J. Campau, chairman of the Michigan delegation to the Democratic national convention at St. Louis: "It is positively sinful for parents to fail to bring their children to see the Fair."

M. Paul Dupuy, editor of Le Petit Parisien of Paris, France: "I admire the Exposition for its immensity, its spirit of the sublime, its general beauty and its completeness."

Prince George of Bavaria: "I have never seen anything prettier than the St. Louis World's Fair buildings when outlined at night with their millions of electric lights."

Hon. Louis E. McComas of Maryland: "The greatest Fair in the world."

Hon. John F. Dryden of New Jersey: "The people have no idea of the greatness of the Exposition. Every American should see it."

T. P. Shants, president of the Clover Leaf route of Chicago: "The Fair is a big success and will continue to become a greater success as it progresses."

WAGE EARNERS AT THE FAIR

Prominent Men Planning to Help Workers See the Great Exposition.

Wage earners of America are to see the World's Fair by tens of thousands under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. A new bureau of the Federation has just been established at St. Louis upon the World's Fair grounds. Back of the movement are Grover Cleveland, David R. Francis, Andrew Carnegie, Cornelius N. Bliss and others. Plans are making to have a vast number of the wage earners of the United States see the World's Fair, the most glorious spectacle of the age and the most influential factor in the education of the American citizen.

The bureau is in charge of Miss Gertrude Beeks, secretary of the Federation's welfare department, of which Mr. H. H. Vreeland, head of the street railway system of New York city, is chairman. The bureau headquarters is in the east end of the Palace of Transportation, on the ground floor. The Exposition management is in hearty accord with this movement on the part of the Federation to induce the large manufacturers and other employers of labor to provide ways and means for the wage earners of America to visit the Exposition. President Francis is displaying personal interest in the undertaking by affording the Federation every facility for the consummation of its efforts, and in this connection he has directed Theodore Hardee, assistant to the secretary, to co-operate with Miss Beeks and Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the Federation's executive council, in every possible way.

The Exposition management has also equipped this bureau with clerical assistance and a full supply of World's Fair literature. The bureau will be used as headquarters for all wage earners coming to the Exposition under its auspices. The aim of the Federation is to make it feasible for the largest possible proportion of wage earners to visit St. Louis and see the World's Fair. It will see that they are met at the depot by responsible persons and conducted to suitable lodgings, where they will be treated fairly.

There will also be furnished, free of charge, appropriate itineraries indicating the points of interest to be seen within a limit of one week, which is about the average time each party will spend here. It will also indicate the objects of special interest to various craftsmen in their particular lines, so that they may devote as much time as possible to the objects of peculiar interest to them. These and many other efforts will be made to help all wage earners to enjoy the benefits of this great Exposition comfortably and at an expense within their means.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

In Such a Case Fear Is One's Most Dangerous Enemy.

Every woodman—yes, every Indian—gets lost at some time—that is, loses his bearings and has difficulty in getting to camp. As a matter of fact, the wild birds and beasts will sometimes get lost, although they are wonderfully equipped for finding their way home.

The worst thing a person lost in the woods can do is to get frightened. The truly dangerous enemy is not the cold or the hunger so much as the fear. It is fear that robs the wanderer of his judgment and of his limb power; it is fear that turns the passing experience into a final tragedy. Only keep cool and all will be well.

A man of little experience usually sets out at a run when he is lost. He wishes to travel twice as fast as usual, and of course that merely wears him out and sends him farther astray. If he sits down calmly he will not only spare himself, but will help his friends to find him, and this he can do by shouting at intervals and, above all, by getting on as high and open a place as possible and there making two smokes, the recognized signal, "I am lost."—Ernest Thompson Seton in Country Life In America.

ECLIPSE FORECASTS.

The First One Was Made by Thales to the Egyptians.

The eclipse of May 28, 585 B. C. (total in the east of Asia Minor), is the first that can be fixed with certainty. The prediction of it by Thales to the Ionians brought him lasting fame and excited among the Hellenes the love of science. Its occurrence during a great battle ended a five years' war between the Medes and the Lydians and led to a permanent peace.

The Chinese boast of a series of eclipses recorded in their annals extending over 3,858 years. But these are of very doubtful character. The Egyptians said they had accurately observed 373 eclipses of the sun and 832 of the moon before the time of Alexander the Great, who died 323 B. C.

An eclipse observed at Nineveh, June 15, 763 B. C., is recorded on an Assyrian tablet now in the British museum. A lunar eclipse, occurring at 8:40 p. m., March 19, 721 B. C., was observed, according to Ptolemy, with much accuracy at Babylon. Each central eclipse visible in our time is one of an unbroken series, extending from the earliest historic times to the present and recurring at regular intervals.

THE FIRST ENVELOPES.

They Were Used In a Private Penny Post In Paris.

The first mention of envelopes occurs in 1653, when M. de Valayer set up, under royal patronage, a private penny post in Paris, and boxes were placed at street corners for the reception of letters wrapped in post paid envelopes.

The earliest uses of the word in English were by Bishop Burnet in 1714 and Dean Swift in 1726. That the "little bags called envelopes" as Rowland Hill described them, were nothing but a revival and were in use as a covering for postal purposes long before 1840, when his postal reform was established, is evident from the following: Under date July 23, 1627, Secretary Conway gives an account of his "opening a letter in the presence of the king, which contained a blank sheet." Lamb mentions them in 1825, and in "Harry Lorrequer," published by Charles Lever in 1837, we find, "The waiter entered with a small note in an envelope."

The early covers were probably rude enough, as machine made envelopes were unknown before 1840, and the "lick of the gum" did not make its appearance till the succeeding year.

The Armenians.

The Armenians are one of the most ancient races in the world. Their country is mentioned by Xenophon and Ezekiel and in the cuneiform inscriptions of Babylon and Assyria. All the nations that surrounded them have passed away, but they remain, though their country has been harried with fire and sword for centuries. The speaker ascribed the permanence of the Armenian race to the virtue of their women and the exceptional purity and stability of their family life. Even in their heathen days polygamy was unknown to them. They have been a Christian nation for more than 1,500 years and have undergone perpetual persecution for their faith from the surrounding oriental peoples.

Route of the Bobolink.

The amount of traveling done by some of our birds is astonishing. Dr. Cooke says that the common night hawk spends the summer in Alaska and the winter in Patagonia. The bobolink, which is the reedbird of the middle states and the ricebird of the south, winters on the waving pampas of southern Brazil. It covers 700 miles from Cuba to the South American coast in a single flight, following a track not popular with other birds, which might be called the bobolink route.—Saturday Evening Post.

Appreciated His Mercies.

Bishop Wilberforce used to tell a story of a greedy clergyman who, when asked to say grace, looked anxiously to see if there were champagne glasses on the table. If there were he began: "Bountiful Jehovah!" But if he saw only claret glasses, he said: "We are not worthy of the least of thy mercies."

ODD BURIAL CUSTOMS.

Some Strange Observances Among Australian Tribes.

There are some queer customs observed by the native Australians, their modes of disposing of the dead being noticeable and varied. When a mother loses a favorite child she carries the dead body about with her in a box or casing of bark until decomposition forces her to dispose of it either by burial or fire.

In the case of some prominent person of the tribe dying his nearest relatives cut off his hands and keep them as sacred remembrances, only parting with them after the odor from the dead members has become unendurable. Then they are thrown into a stream, hidden in a hollow tree or burned.

Women are held in such contempt among the Australian tribes that often they receive no burial at all, and it is a rare thing to see one mourned for by family and friends. But at the funeral of a man or boy the lamentations are loud and long, the female mourners being the most demonstrative.

With some of the tribes the practice of throwing the bodies of the dead over the branches of trees and leaving them for nature to dispose of is observed.

SLUGGISH RIVERS.

The Volga Falls Only About Three Inches Per Mile.

Considering its length the Volga is the most sluggish river. In 2,325 miles it falls only 665 feet, or slightly over three inches per mile, while at one point about the middle of its course the bed is fully fifty feet below sea level. Thus all the water to that height above the bottom must be still; save when stirred by floods.

The Volga also is singular among great rivers in having no mountainous course. It rises among marshes and lakes, and is so sluggish even then that a dam has been erected, which makes it navigable from its sixty-fifth mile onward. Almost within the historic period it must have been an offshoot from the Caspian, which then stretched far into the interior of Russia, drying up into a series of river connected lakes. The Volga has taken the place of these, along with many of their characteristics, including a general sluggishness.

The Scheldt is proverbially a slow river and is practically lost in a maze of canals, but its fall from source to sea is about fourteen inches in its total length of 240 miles.

A Monkey Detective.

A monkey brought a criminal to justice at Singapore some time ago. A native with a little boy, a bear and a monkey traveled lately through several villages in the Straits Settlements and made a good sum of money by his animals' tricks. One day he was found with his throat cut, the boy and the bear lying murdered close by, while the monkey had escaped up a tree. The bodies, with the monkey, were being taken to the police station when the monkey suddenly rushed at a man in the crowd, seized his leg and would not let go. The man seemed so alarmed and anxious to get away that the police became suspicious and searched him, with the result of finding part of the money belonging to the murdered native. The balance was discovered at his house.

A MODEL OF CAUTION.

Yet an Innocent Remark Was the Cause of His Death.

The father of Gueau de Reverseaux had been a distinguished lawyer, and through his influence he held important offices under the government. When the revolution began he gave up his office at La Rochelle and retired to Chartres.

From the time that the revolution began Gueau de Reverseaux devoted his attention exclusively to preserving his own safety. He wrote no letters. He would receive no letters. He saw no visitors and paid no visits. He spoke to no person and allowed no one to come near him. It would have been impossible to be more prudent than he was.

However, he wanted some sheds built on his farm near Chartres and ventured to consult a carpenter. The carpenter told him that he could not undertake the work immediately, as Gueau de Reverseaux wished, because most of his workmen were drafted to join the army at once.

Gueau de Reverseaux replied: "The workmen need not go. They can send substitutes."

This remark was heard by the workmen, but only the first phrase made any impression on them. They reported everywhere that M. Gueau de Reverseaux, who must be good authority, had said that they need not go. The news went to headquarters that Gueau de Reverseaux declared that the drafted workmen need not obey the government. This was considered to be conspiracy, and he was condemned to death and executed.

A BID FOR SILENCE.

Five Million Dollars Was the Sum Offered and Rejected.

Immediately it became known to the Tweed ring that the proofs of its guilt were in possession of the Times an effort was made to buy them. A carefully verified report of this attempt was published in Harper's Weekly for Feb. 22, 1890:

"A tenant in the same building (the Times building) sent for Mr. Jones to come to his office, as he wished to see him on an important matter. Mr. Jones went to the lawyer's office and, being ushered into a private room, was confronted by Comptroller Connolly.

"'I don't want to see this man,' said Mr. Jones, and he turned to go.

"'For God's sake,' exclaimed Connolly, 'let me say one word to you!'

"At this appeal Mr. Jones stopped. Connolly then made him a proposition to forego the publication of the documents he had in his possession and offered him the enormous sum of $5,000,000 to do this. As Connolly waited for the answer, Mr. Jones said:

"'I don't think the devil will ever make a higher bid for me than that.'

"Connolly began to plead and drew a graphic picture of what one could do with $5,000,000. He ended by saying:

"'Why, with that sum you can go to Europe and live like a prince.'

"'Yes,' said Mr. Jones, 'but I should know that I was a rascal. I cannot consider your offer or any offer not to publish the facts in my possession.'"—From "Thomas Nast" in Pearson's.

The Frolicsome Scallop.

The scallop takes life less seriously and servilely than his cousins, the clams and oysters. The oyster can't move from his place; the clam can, but rarely does. The scallop is as free as a bird almost to the end of his days. Then, again, the scallop has temperament. He exhibits the frolicsomeness of childhood, as higher animals do. We see little scallops by tens and dozens darting swiftly here and there in the water by a quick opening and shutting of the two valves of their shells. They are as graceful as a flock of snowbirds and as vivacious. Capture one, lay it on the sand, and it snaps its valves, impatient of the interruption. If we interpret the signs aright, it is altogether happy if put back in the pool.—Country Life In America.

Her Case Exactly.

It is related of a clergyman who was the happy father of a charming and beautiful daughter that one day while preparing his Sunday discourse he was suddenly called from his desk on a mission of mercy. The sentence at which he left off was this: "I never see a young man of splendid physique and the promise of a glorious manhood almost realized but my heart is filled with rapture and delight."

His daughter, happening to enter the study, saw the sermon and read the words.

Sitting down, she wrote underneath, "Them's my sentiments, papa, exactly."

Many a tongue shakes out its master's undoing.—Shakespeare.

Nerve Fag.

If You Waste Your Nerve Energy, After Awhile You Will Suffer For It.

You can waste nerve force by excess, over-work, worry, anxiety, etc.

You can weaken yourself by not eating proper food or securing sufficient rest to renew the nerve energy you use up.

The proper treatment, in addition to good phosphatic food, such as whole meal bread, prepared cereals, etc., is Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

This is as truly a brain and nerve food as any food you could eat, and besides, furnishes strength and tone of its own, which goes to the weakened nerve system, and sets it to rights.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a refreshing, revitalizing tonic food-medicine for the brain and nerves. It reconstructs worn-out nerve tissue, and fills your languid brain with new life and vigor.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has made so many marvelous cures of people so sick the doctors thought they were incurable, that it is today the standard medicine in many thousands of American homes.

The first bottle is guaranteed to help you, or druggist returns your money.

"The extreme heat, close confinement and intense mental strain incident to the banking business, has caused me to suffer with nervousness and insomnia. It gives me pleasure to say that I have used Dr. Miles' Nervine with very satisfactory results in the treatment of these affections. I am now on my fifth bottle, and eat and sleep well, in fact have almost forgotten that I possess nerves."—R. J. DALEY, Asst. Cashier, State Bank, Texarcana, Ark.

A Wolf in Town.

A huge timber wolf menaced the lives of scores of people in the train shed of the Union station, Minneapolis, and was finally killed with a coupling pin after a hand-to-hand struggle.

The animal ran swiftly in the wake of a passenger train and was not noticed until it had entered the shed. There was a crowd clustered around the coaches, when suddenly the wolf appeared it its midst.

A panic was created in an instant. Women screamed, children yelled and the men were too astounded to act. Everyone rushed towards the gates, while the wolf, its wicked mouth wide open and its long tongue hanging out, scampered up and down the enclosure, in and out among the scurrying passengers.

Then from the end of the shed a small colored man, William Hines, 218 Nicolett avenue, threw a rock which grazed the animal's head. A few seconds later Hines saw two coupling pins lying close to the track just outside of the canopy and, picking one up, he hurled it at the animal.

The missile caught the animal in the side and with a yelp of pain and rage it charged its assailant.

Hines hurriedly seized the other pin and as the wolf jumped at him, hit it a glancing blow on the head. The animal managed to seize Hines by the left hand, but was soon beaten to death with the weapon of iron, not, however, until the gloves which the negro had worn were tore to shreds and his hands and face badly lacerated.

The man had a dog with him but he refused to attack the wolf.

University Building Burns.

The main building at the university—"dear old main," as it is fondly referred to by thousands of students who have gone out from it—was destroyed by fire early the 24th.

It will be a complete loss.

The interior was consumed, including the score or more of classrooms and its fine and costly department of libraries. There remain only portions of the gray stone skeleton, which loom in ugly outline against the sky and teeter in insecurity, which means that they will have to be torn down.

The building was the oldest on the campus, having been erected, in part, in 1857. For many years it was the whole university, and the traditions which center there are dear to the heart of every alumnus and alumna of the institution. In recent years it was the home of the departments of mathematic, rhetoric, pedagogy, French, Greek, Latin and German. The Minnesota Daily, the university newspaper, and the Gopher, the annual, had their offices in the building, which also were a ladies' reception room and a restaurant, the university postoffice, and the home of Captain Guile, custodian of the buildings.

Nothing was saved from the burning building except the desk of the postmaster and the mail.

Congressional Nominations.

The following are nominated for congress throughout the state:

First District—James A. Tawney, (Rep.), Winona; H. C. Nelson, (Dem.) Hayward.

Second—James T. McCleary, (Rep.) Mankato; George P. Jones, (Dem.) Jackson.

Fourth—Frederick C. Stevens (Rep.), St. Paul; Dem., no nomination.

Fifth—Loren Fletcher (Rep.), Minneapolis; C. H. Kohler (Dem.) Minneapolis.

Sixth—C. B. Buckman (Rep.), Little Falls; Cleve W. Van Dyke (Dem.), Alexandria.

Seventh—Andrew J. Volstead (Rep.) Granite Falls; J. H. Driscoll (Dem.), Madison.

Eighth—J. Adam Bede (Rep.) Duluth; Martin Hughes (Dem.), Hibbing.

Ninth—Halvor Steenerson (Rep.), Crookston; Dem., no nomination.

Butter Score.

Minnesota again has the highest average score on butter at the world's fair. J. C. Jocelyn of Winsted takes the sweepstakes on print butter with a score of 98; Mrs. J. C. McRosta of Owatonna sweepstakes on dairy, with a score of 97.

Iowa gets a quarter of one point ahead of Minnesota on creamery with a score of 98¼; O. P. Jenson of Union Creamery, Minn., takes the second, score of 98; James Rasmussen of Lerdahl, Minn., third score, 97¾.

Minnesota wins the sweepstakes on unsalted butter by a score of 97. Mrs. Sondegard of Hutchinson, Minn., was at a great disadvantage owing to the fact that she complied with the rule that required all butter to be in St. Louis by Sept. 10. Iowa delivered its product two days after the required time. Wisconsin and Illinois delivered their showing at the exposition grounds on Sept. 15, five days after the time required by the exposition rules. This completes the third of the four tests. Minnesota has for the third time won the highest average and her ultimate full victory is practically assured.

Brief Notes.

Wanting to die because he cannot get rich quick enough to please himself, and having made several attempts to end his existence with a butcher knife, Tom Jensen, a farmer who lives near Fosston, was committed to the Fergus Falls asylum.

The two-year-old daughter of William Uran, who lives near the tracks of the Soo railway on Buffalo river, was run over and instantly killed by a gravel train.

The plans for the St. Paul jubilee are progressing.

SHORT-SIGHTED DRUMMER.

Was Foolish Enough to Sass a Postmistress and Soon Learned Something.

"I had a money order on a village post office in Michigan," said the Chicago drummer, relates the Daily News of that city, "and when I went in to get it cashed I found a postmistress instead of a postmaster. She was gabbing away with another woman and, being in a hurry, I spoke to her rather sharply. In fact, I asked her if Uncle Sam employed her to gossip about her neighbors. In reply, she looked at the order and said:

"'James M. Blank, eh? Well, sir, you will have to be identified.'

"I had half a dozen letters, but she shook her head. I showed her my initials on my collar, but it was no go. I had sassed her and she had a chance to get even and, as a matter of fact, she kept me in that town for two whole days, and would then hardly believe a lawyer who came 20 miles to identify me.

"It's safe enough to sass your landlady when you are not behind on your board, but don't try it on a postmistress, who has got the United States government at her back."

Time-Honored Truth.

"Wisdom is better than rubies," declared Solomon. And now, some centuries later, this opinion has been confirmed in Germany where they manufacture by chemical process, while you wait, a just-as-good article in this line of gems at a price within the reach of all—or nearly all. How much better wisdom is than rubies is shown by the fact that wisdom can now make rubies, while whole oodles of rubies have failed in numerous recorded instances to make a man wise.—Indianapolis News.

THE STRAIN OF WORK.

Best of Backs Give Out Under the Burden of Daily Toil.

Lieut. George G. Warren, of No. 3 Chemical, Washington, D. C., says: "It's an honest fact that Doan's Kidney Pills did me a great lot of good, and if it were not true I would not recommend them. It was the strain of lifting that brought on kidney trouble and weakened my back, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills I have lifted six hundred pounds and felt no bad effects. I have not felt the trouble come back since, although I had suffered for five or six years, and other remedies had not helped me at all."

LITERARY GLEANINGS.

An Italian novelist, Salvatore Farina, confesses that for six years he completely lost his memory for languages and names.

Col. Prentiss Ingraham, the novelist who has just died, was a cousin of Mrs. Maybrick and had been looking after her estates in Virginia and West Virginia.

Cheng Yow Tong, former secretary to the Chinese commission to the St. Louis fair, has published a volume of poems relating, in the main, to the United States.

Richard Sattler, publisher of Lieut. Bilse's notorious military romance exposing the alleged rottenness at German military posts and garrison towns, has received the manuscripts of about 150 imitators, most of them retired officers.

Julia Cooley, a little Chicago girl 11 years old, is receiving considerable attention from the literary world through a book of poems she wrote which has just been published. Richard LaGallienne is her literary godfather, and it was he who selected those among her verses to appear in the book.

Mollie Elliot Seawell, the authoress, must pay duty on several pictures which she brought back with her from her last trip to Europe. Miss Seawell claimed free entry for the pictures on the ground that they were articles necessary for her well-being and comfort on the journey, but the board of general appraisers decided that they were not included in this category.

John Philip Sousa, the conductor, has received notice of his promotion from Officier de l'Academie Francaise to "Officier de l'Instruction Publique" of France. The new distinction gives Mr. Sousa the golden palms and rosette of the French academy. He is the only American who has received this decoration. He is also a member of the Royal Victorian order of England, having been decorated by King Edward VII. three years ago.

There are four different state swords belonging to the city of London. The black sword is used on fast days and during the mourning for the royal family.

WASHINGTON LETTER

SOME TIMELY GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

PASSING OF CONFEDERATES

Ex-Senator Vest Was the Last Member of the Southern Senate—When Pugh Made a Mistake—Other Items.

Ex-Senator Vest.

Washington.—With the death of ex-Senator George G. Vest, of Missouri, a few weeks ago there passed away the last remaining member of the confederate senate. There are still living five ex-members of the confederate congress, and one member of President Davis' cabinet. The last vestiges of that government that fought for life so strenuously for four years are fast being removed. The surviving member of the Davis cabinet is ex-Senator John H. Reagan, of Texas. He was postmaster general of the confederacy.

The five members of the confederate house of representatives are Judge John V. Wright, of Tennessee, now an attorney in the general land office of the interior department; Messrs. Atkins and Colyar, of Tennessee; Judge John Goode, of Virginia, and ex-United States Senator James L. Pugh, of Alabama. It is said that S. B. Callahan, who was a delegate from the Creek and Seminole Indian nations to the confederate congress, is still alive, but he did not have a voice in that body.

There are a number of ex-confederate soldiers in public life here and thousands of them, of course, in private life, but the confederate congress and cabinet has about passed away. Many of the ex-confederate soldiers found good positions with the federal government eventually, republican administrations taking care of some of them. One of the most noted was Gen. James. Longstreet, the famous corps commander, who for years drew a handsome salary under a republican administration as commissioner of railroads. Gen. Mosby, the celebrated guerilla, who says he honored that name, has been in the public service as United States consul, and is now filling a position in the treasury department.

A Distinguished Confederate.

"Pettus, You Are Too Old."

Probably the most noted ex-member of the confederacy is ex-United States Senator James L. Pugh, now living in Washington, at the age of 86. He is seen daily on the business streets, walking a little slowly, but as erect as a pine, and with a rotund voice that sounds like distant thunder. During his long service in the senate Mr. Pugh's voice was celebrated. It would not be controlled. When he tried to carry on a conversation with a neighboring senator in a low tone the disturbance was such that the presiding officer would have to rap for order and suspend business until the Alabamian's whisper had subsided. When he indulged in ordinary conversation in the cloakroom the doors leading into the senate chamber had to be closed or the proceedings would be halted.

Mr. Pugh made the mistake of his life when he told Edmund W. Pettus, of Alabama, that the latter was too old to hold the position of United States district judge in his state. This occurred during Mr. Cleveland's last administration, when Senators Morgan and Pugh had the distribution of patronage in Alabama. Mr. Pugh's term was nearing a close and he was anxious to strengthen himself with his party in order to secure a reelection. The district judgeship was one of the plums at his disposal, and it was a position desired by Mr. Pettus, who had served on the bench before the war. Mr. Pettus came to Washington and asked Senator Pugh to recommend him to the president for the appointment.

"Why, Pettus, you are too old for that position," answered Senator Pugh, who was anxious to fix his fences with younger material in Alabama.

"I may be too old for a United States judgeship, but ——" and here the old lawyer glared over his spectacles at the senator, chewing tobacco vigorously, as he concluded with an emphatic—"I am not too old to be United States senator."

Pettus went to his hotel, packed his carpet sack, returned by the next train to Alabama and began a canvass for the United States senatorship, which ended in his being nominated for that place at a popular election, and being elected by the unanimous vote of his party in the state legislature. He is four years younger than Pugh.

Across Historic Ground.

Some years ago Tom Hannum, a bright newspaper correspondent, came to Washington for a Pittsburg paper. His training on this paper had filled him with deep resentment against corporations and particularly soulless railway corporations. Nothing good could be said of any of these companies, and Tom concluded he would find a field in Washington for attacking them. Soon after he located here he was given an annual pass on the Pennsylvania railroad. Tom's views immediately underwent a revision, and he declared: "If the Pennsylvania railroad wants the rotunda of the capitol for a round house I am in favor of letting them have it."

The rotunda is not being used for a railroad round house and never will be, but a railroad is now running across across the historic plaza in front of the capitol, and brings to mind Tom Hannum's suggestion. Right across the wide expanse of asphalt where the big throngs and military pomp of inauguration days are seen every four years, there is now laid a narrow gauge road, on which the shrieking locomotive and rattling cars are daily seen and heard. This road runs right past the tree where President Thomas Jefferson tied his horse on inauguration day a century ago, and originated the term "Jeffersonian simplicity."

There is no protest, however, against this road as it is simply a factor in national progress and the development of the national capital. It serves the humble purpose of conveying the dirt now being excavated from the site of the new office building which is to be erected for the use of the house of representatives. This ground is needed in filling up about the site of the new union railroad station which is to be the finest in the world, and in keeping with the national buildings in Washington. As soon as the foundation has been excavated for the new office building, of course this little narrow gauge railroad will be removed, but just now it is a strange spectacle, and one that gives the average tourist a slight jar when he is taking in the beauty of the big capitol and surrounding grounds.

The Late Dr. Herran.

Dr. Herran.

The offer of the United States government to convey the remains of Dr. Thomas Herran, late Colombian charge-de-affaires at Washington, to Colombia came too late. There was a blunder somewhere, as the proposition to place a warship at the disposal of Dr. Herran's family to carry his body in state to the republic he represented had been considered and decided upon, but the funeral took place in New York city before the proper authorities were prepared to notify the family. Mr. Thomas Herran, son of the late diplomat, said that the family considered it best under the circumstances to have the body interred in this country, although the honor suggested by the state department would have been deeply appreciated.

Dr. Herran was one of the most popular diplomats in Washington, and had the confidence and respect of everybody in the government, from the president down. He was grievously disappointed at the failure of his government to ratify the canal treaty, which he and Secretary Hay had negotiated. His efforts to secure the ratification of that instrument put him under some suspicion in Colombia, where the faction that was endeavoring to squeeze $10,000,000 more from this government were angered because Dr. Herran insisted that the treaty gave Colombia all that she could justly ask for. For awhile it looked as though Dr. Herran would not dare show himself in his own country, but he made a visit to Bogota and succeeded in reestablishing friendly relations with the United States after the Panama revolution, and was again Colombia's representative here.

The tender of a man-of-war to convey to their native country the remains of a foreign diplomat is one marked way in which nations show courtesy. United States representatives abroad who have died at their posts have been brought home in foreign war vessels, and the last time the United States had occasion to show that mark of respect to a foreign power was when the body of Lord Pauncefote, late ambassador of Great Britain, was conveyed to England in a United States battleship.

L. C. Simons recieved the republican nomination and will no doubt be elected for the next representative from the 61st district, but with Bob Dunn governer the people of that district have nothing to fear about Mr. Simons spending his time next winter trying to pass sugar beet bounty laws, which would be vetoed by governor Dunn.

Why should there be a change in the national administration? What's the matter with Roosevelt?

Has anything gone wrong? Has it been necessary to issue bonds to pay the running expences of the goverment? Is there any money in the treasury? Has the soup house asserted its supremecy since the palmey days of Grover? Has Theodore Roosevelt betrayed any trust reposed in him, or has he manifested any symptoms of spinal affections? Has the so-called democratic party advanced any assurence to the American people that they are more proficient in the twentieth century than they were in the nineteenth? Can they satisfy the honest industrious, produceing citizens of America that they seek for anything but to again grasp the surplus and again empty the treasury, as they have on every previous opportunity?

Tramping in France.

One tramps because he likes to tramp, not to save money. Nevertheless in Normandy, and the same is true of nearly every other section of France except Savoy and the Cote d'Azur, one must make a distinct effort to spend while tramping more than 7 francs a day, or $1.40. Nearly all the auberges and many of the smaller hotels give comfortable rooms for 30 cents a night and no extra charges, the petit dejeuner for 10 cents and a prix fixe dejeuner and dinner for 30 cents each.

In a word, 7 francs ($1.40) a day represents luxury, 4 to 6 comfort and 3 to 4 the essential. To bring the average per day below 3 francs and keep moving it is necessary to go to the length of buying provisions at the stores and sleeping sometimes in the open air and in granges, a method which is not without its special piquancy, as I know from experience, but which it would be hazardous if not unpardonable to recommend.—Alvan F. Sanborn in Booklovers' Magazine.

The Roman Forum.

There were many forums in Rome, but the oldest and most famous was not created like a building at a certain time. The Forum Romanum was originally the lowlands between the Palatine, Capitoline and Quirinal hills, used as a meeting place for barter and politics by the tribes living on the hills named and on other hills near by. The development of this crude trading place and neutral ground into the Roman forum of later times was very gradual and irregular.

"No," answered the litterateur in hard luck. "It's a modern novel now. But I guess it will be historic before I get it published."—Washington Star.

ALCOHOLIC CRIMINALS.

The Dreamy Mental State That Leads to Murder or Suicide.

In a paper on the criminal responsibility of the alcoholic the medical officer of Pentonville prison said that "no one becomes mad when drunk who is wholly sane when sober."

Referring to the dreamy mental state of morbid drunkenness, the doctor said that what ordinarily happened was that after many years of intoxication the individual acquired a peculiar susceptibility to alcohol, so that relatively small doses led to more or less lengthy dream states, in which the patient might seem to speak and act pretty coherently, though in reality he was in a sort of somnambulistic state and knew nothing at all afterward of what he had done or had only a hazy recollection of it. In one of these phases he will probably murder his family or attempt suicide.

The admission of morbid drunkenness as a condition excluding full responsibility was especially desirable in that it would further the trend of public opinion to adopt preventive measures against the criminal alcoholic. When, therefore, the chronic alcoholic had once shown the disposition to dream states with impulsive tendencies, especially homicidal or suicidal, he ought to be dealt with on the same footing as the impulsive epileptic—immune from ordinary punishment, but unfit for ordinary freedom.—London Globe.

STAINED GLASS.

What Old Makers Got by Accident We Now Get by Design.

There are no lost secrets in the art of making stained glass, though at one time the art itself was in abeyance, so that when Winston, with the aid of Messrs. Powell & Sons, sought to revive it they found that much of its tradition had died out.

Modern science proved equal to the task of solving the mystery. It was soon discovered that the artistic merit of old glass was due to its chemically imperfect composition, for it was irregular in thickness and color and also striated and flecked with air bubbles. The light coming through it was therefore broken up and deflected, as if by an infinite number of tiny prisms, and hence came its lustrous richness of tone in comparison with the crudity of chemically perfect material. What the old makers got by accident the modern get by design.

Old glass has one advantage due to its age and its lack of uniformity. Some particles, being more alkaline than the rest, have been washed out of it by the rains of ages, and it has been left on the weather side rough and "fritted;" hence have come more prisms, more refraction and softer, mellower colors.—London Standard.

Took the First Tow.

John H. Hamline of Chicago was one of the foremost advocates of civil service reform in that city, says the Outlook, and was instrumental in securing the passage of the law that established the merit system there. Although the mayor who appointed the first civil service commission was notoriously hostile to the measure and planned to render it useless, Mr. Hamline did not hesitate to accept a place on it.

"How can you compromise with the opposition," he was asked, "by getting on a commission like that, which will have no power?"

"When I am going anywhere," he replied, "I do not wait for a star. I hitch my cart to anything which happens to be going my way."

It is worthy of note that, having climbed aboard his cart, he managed, to the mayor's amazement, to keep it straight in the path of municipal reform and made the law effective despite all opposition.

How Horace Walpole Dressed.

In the early part of the eighteenth century, says the author of "Social England," a fashionable gentleman ordinarily wore a toupee of curls raised high over his forehead. For daily wear most gentlemen were dressed like George I., dark tie, wig, plain coat, waistcoat and breeches of snuff colored cloth and stockings of the same color; for ceremony, like Horace Walpole, in a lavender suit, the waistcoat embroidered with a little silver or of white silk embroidered in the tambour frame, partridge silk stockings, gold buckles, ruffles, lace frill and powdered wig. The linen for shirts was bought in Holland, costing from 10 to 14 shillings the English ell.

Corelli and Caine.

Marie Corelli's first story, "A Romance of Two Worlds," which made her name, was sent to the London publishing house of Bentley. Hall Caine was the principal reader of that house, and his report condemned the book so strenuously that it was rejected. Miss Corelli was deeply discouraged, but after some time she was persuaded to send the manuscript to another publisher. He accepted it eagerly and made a big fortune out of it and out of her later novels.

TO KEEP FRIENDS.

Be Interested In Them, but Never Descend to Curiosity.

If you would have friends be interested in them.

There is a difference between interest and curiosity. Never be curious.

Interest asks nothing, but is glad in other's joys and sorry for others' misfortunes. Curiosity seeks to find more than is written upon the surface, seeks it for the purpose of distribution, for innocent slander.

One's friends like one to be interested. They detest one who is curious.

To be interested in those one needs but to wish them well.

To see the best of those about us will cause us to wish them well.

To our wellwishers we pour out our joys and sorrows. They are interested. They understand.

The interested friend always understands. The curious acquaintance never sees through motives. The curious one is blinded by his own interpretation of causes and his prejudiced view of results.

Don't, therefore, seek to know what is hidden. If your friend conceals something from you he has a reason for doing it. Prove your interest and your lack of vulgar curiosity by trusting him in spite of the concealment.

Those who are truly interested and never curious are surrounded by friends.—Detroit Tribune.

A CITY WITHOUT TAXES.

All Its Expenses Are Paid by the Income From Its Property.

In the Black forest of Germany is the little city of Freudenstadt, with about 7,000 inhabitants, a busy industrial place with iron and chemical works of some importance.

Small as it is, Freudenstadt is a full fledged city, with a mayor, aldermen, half a dozen policemen and a fire engine. The public business is conducted on an economical basis, and the total expenses do not exceed £5,000 in a year.

Freudenstadt has the distinction of being the only city in Germany and perhaps in the world which does not tax the citizens a shilling for municipal expenses. The yearly net revenue from the public property covers all the expenditure.

This property consists of about 6,000 acres of fine forest, which, being managed under the best forestry methods, is a permanent source of income. One or more trees are planted for every one that is cut down. No tree is cut till it can yield the maximum profit.

After deducting all the expenses of the industry the annual profit to the acre is about £1.—Pearson's Weekly.

BRIEF TWILIGHT.

At the Equator It Lasts Only a Little Over an Hour.

As twilight is caused by the refraction of the atmosphere, without which we should be instantly in darkness at sunset, all points of the earth have twilight, though of varying duration. When the sun has sunk eighteen degrees below the horizon no more light can be refracted anywhere, but the path of the sun at the equator is so nearly vertical that its disappearance is proportionally rapid.

The shortest twilight at the equator is one hour and twelve minutes at the equinoxes in March and September; the longest is one hour and nineteen minutes at the solstices in June and December.

In London from May 22 to July 22 it is twilight all through the night. No wonder, with a disparity so great, people speak of night in the tropics as coming on almost suddenly. Farther north still, in the Shetlands and Norway, we speak of the midnight sun, where men never lose sight of the orb of day and twilight is unknown.—London Spectator.

Early Action In Tuberculosis.

The whole secret of success in the treatment of tuberculosis is to so increase the resistance of the patient as to bring about the arrest of the tuberculosis process and to prevent secondary infection. Early recognition and proper management in the beginning of the disease are the chief elements of cure. If the family physician encourages the hopeful patient to believe that "it is only a bad cold and that it will wear off," or when warm weather comes he "will be all right," he not only seals the patient's doom, but fails to take advantage of the opportunity presented today for the cure of consumption.—Suggestion.

The Demand Was Granted.

A certain city in England sent a deputation to Charles II., who was very ill, soliciting some favor. The orator, without any mercy to the sick man, made a long, tedious discourse. "Have you anything more to say?" asked the merry monarch impatiently. "Nothing," replied the orator, "except that if you do not grant our request I am instructed to recite my speech over again." Charles ordered that all his demands should be freely and instantaneously complied with.

An Exposure.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "a lie can be acted as well as told. Now, if your father was to put sand in his sugar and sell it he would be acting a lie and doing very wrong."

"That's what mother told him," said Johnny impetuously, "but he said he didn't care."—London Tit-Bits.

The Original Macintosh.

"Macintosh boasts a good deal about his family, doesn't he?" "Yes; I think he claims that the head of his family was the original Macintosh that Noah had with him during that rainy season."—Philadelphia Press.

Appreciated His Mercies.

Bishop Wilberforce used to tell a story of a greedy clergyman who, when asked to say grace, looked anxiously to see if there were champagne glasses on the table. If there were he began: "Bountiful Jehovah!" But if he saw only claret glasses, he said: "We are not worthy of the least of thy mercies."

Potatoes a Foe of Gout.

Gout is rarely known among the working classes of Ireland. Their immunity from this complaint is thought to be due to the fact that their food consists largely of potatoes.

Protecting the Salmon.

Realizing that the salmon will soon become extinct in British Columbia waters at the present rate of consumption, the chief canning firms on the shores of Puget sound have decided to build salmon hatcheries on the Fraser river.

"Tit For Tat."

Professor Skeat in his Etymological dictionary explains the expression as "blow for blow" and says that it is a corruption of tip for tap, where tip is a slight tap. He refers to Bullinger's works, 1., 283 (Parker society), the translation of which is, I believe, dated 1577. May I be permitted to direct attention to the fact that "tit for tat" had already appeared at an earlier date in John Heywood's "Proverbs," 1546?

Set the hares head agaynst the goose jeblet.

A Dangerous Trade.

The dangers of work in a white lead factory are described by a medical authority in a discussion of the causes and effects of lead poisoning. Most of the cases occur among the workers in the department where the preparation of the carbonate of lead is carried on by what is called the "Dutch process," in which the lead, in sheets, is placed on the top of pots filled with acetic acid and converted first into the subacetate and finally decomposed by carbon dioxide emitted by tar. In moving the carbonate clouds of white lead dust are easily caused by careless handling on the part of the workmen, and in spite of the respirators worn by them much of the poison is taken into the system.—Harper's Weekly.

Artists' Difficulties In Painting Men.

Artists will tell you it is no easy thing to paint a man in a frock coat so that he shall appeal picturesquely to the casual wayfarer. The modern habiliments affected by the male person do not lend themselves to artistic reproduction on canvas. There are no scintillant colors, no fine lines of form in a trousered poseur, and to achieve a successful portrait of a man is to spell the artist's capabilities in capital letters. With women models—well, there the story is of a different cast, just as woman herself is so wholly different, so enchantingly complex.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Hours and Luck.

As strong as the superstition of Friday is that concerning certain hours in European and oriental countries.

In Paris the superstition is so prevalent that an enterprising business is that of selling cards on which are printed the hours that should be avoided.

The famous Gambetta consulted a reader of cards as to the auspicious day for embarking on any important enterprise.

President Carnot was skeptical of such things, and he chose an unlucky hour for his journey to Lyons, where he was assassinated.—American Queen.

The Young Fool.

There may be no fool like the old fool, but he is given a close rub by the young man who tries to keep step with companions who have three or four times as much spending money as he. —Hartford Post.

His Sobriety.

A gentleman who had grave doubts as to a servant's sobriety one day accused him of intemperance and as a test chalked a line across the floor and commanded him to walk along it.

The fellow looked at the line for a bit, then at his employer, and said: "No jokes, now, sir. Which line do you want me to walk on?"

SOMEWHAT POLITICAL.

This is a country boys account of his father's enterence in politics: Dad has took up the stump, I dunno who ran him up—but he's on it just the same. Dad is after an office. The First Locomotive In Maine.

The first locomotive used in the state of Maine came from England, having been built at the works of Robert Stephenson & Co. in the year 1835, and made its first trip over the Bangor, Oldtown and Milford railroad on Aug. 19, 1837. This road was then generally known as the "Veazie road," and the track was made of wooden rails strapped with iron. The shackles used to connect the engine and cars were made of three thicknesses of sole or belt leather held together by copper rivets and had a hole in each end so as to hook over an upright stationary pin bolted or driven into a rigid beam extending from the end of the car. It is said that for a time the engine was run in opposition to a six ox team employed by a Bangor lumber dealer who was not willing to pay the rates charged on the railroad, and it was not until the management of the line came to what he considered fair charges that he turned his traffic over to it.

In Nature's Wonderland.

There is but one Grand canyon. The name should never have been given to lesser gorges. The very fact that there is a so called Grand canyon in Colorado is misleading. "The Grand canyon of Colorado" does not sound much different from "the Grand canyon of the Colorado." Hence many people confuse them.

The canyon of the Colorado river, which flows through Arizona, forms the boundary line between that territory and California and then empties into the gulf of California.

It is the grandest gorge in the world. In it 8,000 of the wonderful gorges of the state of Colorado could be buried. With its tributaries, many of which have never yet been explored, it would reach, if all the canyons were placed one after another, nearly around the world.—Four Track News.

The Queer Man.

Of all forms of temper there is none more tiresome to deal with than that which is known as "queer." Down comes a bolt from the blue in the midst of apparent sunshine, and a sudden gloom and moroseness hide our friend completely from our view. An injured attitude is assumed, a martyr's halo carefully pinned on, and happy, everyday life becomes an impossibility. People who want to be loved or even liked should never be difficult. Society has not time, even if it had the inclination, to study their idiosyncrasies and play up to all their petty prejudices. The passionate and even the sulky temper is forgiven sooner than the difficult one and is perhaps more possible to cure.—Edith H. Fowlar in London Mail.

THE NAME BLACKGUARD.

It Was Originally Applied to Link Boys and Servants.

The earliest record of the term blackguard is in the churchwarden's account of St. Mary-at-Hill, London, where, under date 1532, is, "Item, received for iiij Torches of the Black Guard iiijd." This and the following old lines seem to show that the name was then applied to linkboys:

Her Cupid is a blackguard boy
That rubs his link full in your face.

The name was also given to menial servants in the king's kitchen. In the "Calendar of State Papers" is the following entry: "Aug. 17, 1535, Sir William Fitzwilliam to Mr. Secretary Cromwell—Refusal of the workmen to work for less than sixpence a day. Two of the ringleaders had been for some of the time blackguards of the king' kitchen." These "blackguards" were responsible for all cooking utensils and coals.

According to Miss Strickland, the historian, the scullions of the royal kitchen were for many centuries clad in black and were called the blackguards of England.

Loud Voiced Africans.

The timbre of the voices among central Africans is usually good—deep and strong in the men, very melodious and sweet in the women. One notable peculiarity about the people is the forced key in which they always carry on conversation. The ordinary quiet tones of civilized speech are scarcely ever heard among them. They literally shout, and, such being their habit, it is a matter of indifference to them whether the person to whom they are speaking is close by or twenty yards away. "They are most tireless chatterers," says a traveler. "I doubt whether any other people in the world talk so much or laugh so much. Their laughter is particularly healthy, natural and unrestrained, a most exhilarating sound."

Lovely Liverpool Lasses.

Can you or your readers give any explanation of the remarkably heavy percentage of splendidly handsome ladies to be seen in Liverpool's city thoroughfares? When I say handsome, I refer not only to facial beauty, but also to symmetry of form and perfect physique. Walk from the Central station via Bold street to, say, the landing stage, any day in the week, and you will behold a phalanx of superb womanhood. I am a Manchester man by birth and sentiment, but I must confess our city can produce nothing to compare with Liverpool's battalions of tall, lovely girls.—St. James' Gazette.

Effectually Suspended.

Only one dog has ever had the audacity to enter parliament during the proceedings. A hundred years ago the lords were thrown into consternation by a dog's entry. Lord North was addressing the house, and the dog promptly proceeded to bark furiously at him. Lord North, considerably upset, moved that the member who was interrupting him should be suspended. Thereupon the dog was driven out and suspended in such a manner that he never interrupted again.—London Opinion.

The Number Forty In the Bible.

The rain that produced the flood fell for forty days and forty nights, and after it ceased it was forty days before Noah opened the ark. Moses was forty days on the mountain fasting, and the spies spent forty days investigating matters in Canaan before making their report. Elijah fasted forty days in the wilderness, and Jonah gave the people of Nineveh forty days in which to repent. The forty days' fast of Jesus is known to all readers of the New Testament.

A Mark of Culture.

Maud—That's a letter from Jack, is it? What horrid spelling! Mabel—I know it. He does it on purpose. He says that bad spelling is a mark of high literary culture nowadays.—Chicago Tribune.

The heart of the wise man should resemble a mirror, which reflects every object without being sullied by any.—Confucius.

Loaded For Them.

"Eddie, do you know what happens to bad little boys?"

"Yes'm; the bears eat 'em up."

"Then why don't you try to be good?"

"Huh! S'pose I am afraid of bears? Say, I got a toy pistol!"—Erie Dispatch.

They Were Orphans.

"What a mendacious duffer you are, Phillis," said Dibbs. "You said this was an orphan asylum, instead of which it is an old men's home."

"Well, you go in and look for an old man who isn't an orphan. You won't find him."

Dr. Fuller's Memory.

Among those who have performed great feats of memory may be mentioned Dr. Fuller, author of the "Worthies of England." He could repeat another man's sermon after hearing it once and could repeat 500 words in an unknown language after hearing them twice. He one day attempted to walk from Temple Bar to the farthest end of Cheapside and to repeat on his return every sign on either side of the way in the order of their occurrence, and he did it easily.—London Mail

Nerve Fag.

If You Waste Your Nerve Energy, After Awhile You Will Suffer For It.

You can waste nerve force by excess, over-work, worry, anxiety, etc.

You can weaken yourself by not eating proper food or securing sufficient rest to renew the nerve energy you use up.

The proper treatment, in addition to good phosphatic food, such as whole meal bread, prepared cereals, etc., is Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

This is as truly a brain and nerve food as any food you could eat, and besides, furnishes strength and tone of its own, which goes to the weakened nerve system, and sets it to rights.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a refreshing, revitalizing tonic food-medicine for the brain and nerves. It reconstructs worn-out nerve tissue, and fills your languid brain with new life and vigor.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has made so many marvelous cures, of people so sick the doctors thought they were incurable, that it is today the standard medicine in many thousands of American homes.

The first bottle is guaranteed to help you, or druggist returns your money.

"The extreme heat, close confinement and intense mental strain incident to the banking business, has caused me to suffer with nervousness and insomnia. It gives me pleasure to say that I have used Dr. Miles' Nervine with very satisfactory results in the treatment of these affections. I am now on my fifth bottle, and eat and sleep well, in fact have almost forgotten that I possess nerves."—R. L. DALBY, Asst. Cashier, State Bank, Texarcana, Ark.

The Glory of the Great.

As the stars are the glory of the sky, so great men are the glory of their country, yea, of the whole earth. The hearts of great men are the stars of earth; and doubtless when one looks down from above our planet these hearts are seen to send forth a silvery light just like the stars of heaven.—Heinrich Heine.

Cold Tea?

THOUGHT SHE WOULD DIE.

Mrs. S. W. Marine, of Colorado Springs, Began to Fear the Worst. Doan's Kidney Pills Saved Her.

Mrs. Sarah Marine, of 428 St. Urain St., Colorado Springs, Colo., writes: "I suffered for three years with severe backache. The doctors told me my kidneys were affected and prescribed medicines for me, but I found that it was only waste of time and money to take them and began to fear that I would never get well. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. Within a week after I began using them I was so much better that I decided to keep up the treatment, and when I had used a little over two boxes I was entirely well. I have now enjoyed the best of health for more than four months, and words can but poorly express my gratitude."

Four of the cannon taken from the French off Finisterre in 1747 by Admiral Boscawen now fill the lowly, if useful, roles of curb posts and lamp posts in front of the house No. 2, St. James' square, London, of Boscawen's descendant, Lord Falmouth.

CAN DRINK TROUBLE.

That's One Way to Get It.

Although they won't admit it many people who suffer from sick headaches and other ails get them straight from the coffee they drink and it is easily proved if they're not afraid to leave it to a test as in the case of a lady in Connellsville.

"I had been a sufferer from sick headaches for twenty-five years and anyone who has ever had a bad sick headache knows what I suffered. Sometimes three days in the week I would have to remain in bed, at other times I couldn't lie down the pain would be so great. My life was a torture and if I went away from home for a day I always came back more dead than alive.

"One day I was telling a woman my troubles and she told me she knew that it was probably coffee caused it. She said she had been cured by stopping coffee and using Postum Food Coffee and urged me to try this food drink.

"That's how I came to send out and get some Postum and from that time I've never been without it for it suits my taste and has entirely cured all of my old troubles. All I did was to leave off the coffee and tea and drink well made Postum in its place. This change has done me more good than everything else put together.

"Our house was like a drug store for my husband bought everything he heard of to help me without doing any good but when I began on the Postum my headaches ceased and the other troubles quickly disappeared. I have a friend who had an experience just like mine and Postum cured her just as it did me.

"Postum not only cured the headaches but my general health has been improved and I am much stronger than before. I now enjoy delicious Postum more than I ever did coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Gold and Silver Plate.

Valuations on gold and silver plate in Hennepin county was raised 100 per cent by the state board of equalization while Ramsey county suffered an increase of 300 per cent on the returns. The board went after this item in the schedule savagely, as the total returns for the state were only $161,701 this year against $339,963 last year. Hennepin furnished nearly half the valuation, 70,677, but this was low compared to last year, when Hennepin paid on $147,455. Ramsey returned only $33,250, compared with $132,812 last year. H. W. Fagloy, the St. Paul member, declared that two families alone owned as much as the return, but he protested against the increase because it hit the honest ones who had made returns.

Some counties reported nothing under this item, while Olmsted, containing the city of Rochester, reported only $25. This valuation was not touched.

Death of Charles A. Morey

Charles A. Morey, president of the state normal board, died suddenly from apoplexy, while driving in the country near Winona. He was born in Vermont in 1851, attended school at Lake City, and graduated from the Winona normal school in 1872.

Two years later he became a professor in the school, and in 1876 was elected president, which position he held three years, resigning to take up the study of law.

For more than twenty years he had been a member of the normal board. He was an original member of the board of control, but resigned after his fall in the capitol three years ago.

Mr. Morey had anticipated sudden death for some time past, and had placed his affairs in condition for such an event.

Cigar Almost Deadly.

A most peculiar case of nicotine poisoning nearly caused the death of E. R. Lynch of St Paul.

Mr. Lynch was enjoying an after-dinner smoke at the grocery store of a friend. The cigar did not draw well and he punched a hole in the end with a match, and a considerable quantity of nicotine accumulated in the hole of the cigar.

He laid the cigar down, and when he relit it, it again drew hard. Mr. Lynch gave two or three vigorous puffs, which loosened the accumulated nicotine, and he swallowed a large part of it. The effect of the poison was almost instantaneous. He became dizzy, suffered from nausea and in a moment fell to the floor apparently dead. He was finally resuscitated.

Populist Electors.

At a meeting of the populists in Minneapolis the following presidential electors were selected:

ELECTORS AT LARGE.

J. J. Hibbard, St. Louis county.
Thomas J. Meighen, Fillmore county.

Eighth—John A. Keyes, St. Louis county.
Ninth—M. J. Daly, Otter Tail county.

Violent Death

Edward D. McDonald of Proctor, who is in charge of the entire pumping equipment of the Missabe road, met with a terrible death. He was inspecting a pump at Iron Junction when he was caught by the flywheel, whirled around several times and dashed to the floor. He was fatally hurt. A special train was made up to bring him to Duluth, but he died before reaching there.

Will Use Cyclometers.

News in Brief.

Mrs. Annie Roubal and her father were badly beaten by a burglar, when they interrupted his search of their home at St. Paul.

The Minnesota Women's Christian Temperance union opened its twenty-eighth annual convention at Rochester.

Benjamin Nodell was instantly killed in a runaway accident on his father,s farm in Richfield.

Thomas Duffey of St. Paul, seven years of age, touches a match to a stick of dynamite, and may lose both of his eyes.

The storage plant of the Minneapolis Brewing company at East Grand Forks was damaged to the extent of $3,000 by a fire.

Julius E Moersch, state factory inspector, received word from the Panama canal commission that he has been selected as one of the mechanical engineers in the engineering department of the commission.

A barber at East Grand Forks, named Charles, Tuttle, was found dead in bed, presumely from an overdose of morphine.

Judge Watts has decided that the Crookston city council has no right to build a library building, and the work will be passed on to the library committee unless some one hobs up with another injunction in the meantime.

IN GREAT DISTRESS

VOMITING SPELLS LONG RESISTED EVERY EFFORT TO CHECK.

Mrs. Brooks Became So Weak She Thinks She Would Have Died But For Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. Sarah L. Brooks, of No. 45 Lincoln Park, Chicago, Illinois, gives the following account of her cure from distressing spells of vomiting:

"For five years off and on I was treated in vain by different doctors for relief from a stomach trouble which showed itself in frequent and trying spells of vomiting. Part of the time I was able to work and again I would be confined to bed for three or four days in succession.

"My stomach was at times so delicate that it would not retain even plain water. The spells would sometimes occur at intervals of half an hour, and would leave me so weak that I would be compelled to lie down between them. I would have several of them during the night following a day of such attacks. Finally I became so weakened that I had to give up working altogether. I weighed only ninety-four pounds.

"Last January I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in one of the Chicago daily papers and bought a box and began to use them. After I had used half a box I found that I could keep on my stomach the food I ate. I was encouraged by this and kept on using the pills for four months. At the end of that time the vomiting spells had ceased altogether and my weight went up to 142 pounds and is still growing.

"I think I surely would have died if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I sometimes vomited clear blood, and for three or four days at a time I could not eat a bite of anything. One doctor said I had chronic inflammation of the stomach, and another said my difficulty was a cancer, but none of their medicines did me any good at all. Finally I concluded that I did not have blood enough to digest my food and I began the treatment that has cured me. I can eat anything now, and have strength for all kinds of work. I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on hand, and I recommend them to my friends because I know they cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills agree with the most delicate stomachs and strengthen the digestive organs until they do their work perfectly. They are sold by all druggists.

TOLD OF THE TITLED.

Princess Henry of Battenberg has considerable skill in the almost obsolete art of illuminating. Among Queen Victoria's favorite volumes were a copy of Thomas a Kempis' "Imitation" and a superb autograph album, both of which were illuminated by her daughter.

The ameer of Afghanistan was very dull at book-learning when he was a boy, but had a natural gift for engineering and handicrafts; in fact, he became an expert blacksmith, as he thought a prince ought to have a trade to fall back upon just as much as any of his subjects.

Albert, the reigning prince of Thurn and Taxis, is an ardent sportsman and puts on a new suit of clothes every day. To his critical eye a coat once worn is in rags. Each of these garments is perfumed with attar of roses that costs not less than $90 an ounce. In a year his serene highness wears about 1,000 cravats.

Prince Abbas Hilmi, khedive of Egypt, who was in London recently, is a clever farmer, a skillful engineer, a master of five languages, a scientist, a keen man of business, a yachtsman and a prince of many social accomplishments. He is also a sanitary reformer and has built a model village not far from his palace at Koulbeb, on the outskirts of Cairo. He is a well-built man of medium height.

The empress of Russia is a strong believer in female suffrage, women's clubs, the higher education of women and in her right to enter any and all of the professions. She holds that almost all of the great reforms of the world have been brought about by women, and that they are just becoming conscious of their power and possibilities. Under her imperial patronage societies for the education and development of females are growing numerous in St. Petersburg and even spreading through the jealously guarded realm of the czar.

THE FIELD OF ELECTRICS.

To an electrician one horsepower is 746 watts.

Whenever a plant is wounded a positive electric current is established between the wounded part and the intact parts.

Argon, the recently discovered element of air, is, as was expected from its existence in the chromosphere, very light and apparently monatomic.

The enormous increase in the production and sale of copper, especially in the United States and Europe, is due to the general increase of electricity used.

It is usually imagined that the incandescent electric light gives out very little heat. As a matter of fact only six per cent. of its energy goes to make light, while 94 goes into heat.

The electrometer is so acutely sensitive that it will detect in one minute an amount of matter which must accumulate for 2,000,000 years before there is enough of it to affect the most sensitive chemical balance.

An interesting collection of about 700 incandescent electric lamps, including the first experimental lamps, is being made by the St. Louis exposition. The collection is unique, and includes a specimen of every kind of filament lamp ever made in Europe or America.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the introduction of electric traction into Germany will soon be celebrated in Berlin. On October 1, 1903, there were no fewer than 5,500 kilometers of rails used for electric traffic and 8,702 electric motor cars, with 6,190 ordinary cars attached to them, in use in Germany.

THE KEGS WERE LIGHTER.

Dr. Lorimer's Easy Explanation of an Apparently Difficult Performance.

Rev. George C. Lorimer, whose death at Aix was recently reported, was the main impetus that carried on the building of Boston's magnificent Tremont Temple, and Dr. Lorimer's wit, sincerity and imaginative sympathy made him a great favorite with the students of Harvard during his residence in Boston.

At Cambridge, one day, according to a current story, an undergraduate asked the opinion of Dr. Lorimer on drinking—moderate drinking.

"I am opposed to it," the clergyman said. "It is perilous. It frequently leads to drunkenness. In fact, most drunkards were moderate drinkers first."

"Naturally malt liquors and wines, though, are strengthening, aren't they?" the student asked.

Dr. Lorimer smiled.

"Beer," he said, "is very strengthening. I have known young men to have sent to their rooms large kegs of beer that they could not budge at first, and a day or two later they would be able to lift these kegs with ease."

THE PASS WAS GRANTED.

Young Man of Facile Reasoning Ability Has Only Once to Ask for It.

A young man who was working for the railroad company went to one of the directors and asked for a pass to some distant point, relates the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"You have been working for us some time?" inquired the official.

"Yes, sir," the young fellow answered.

"Have you ever had any complaint to make?"

"No, sir," answered the employe.

"Well, if you were working for a farmer, would you have the nerve to ask him to harness his horses and take you to a certain part of the country?" the director asked.

"No, sir. But if he had his horses all ready, and was going to that point, I would call him a very mean farmer if he refused to take me," was the young fellow's reply.

Looked That Way.

When a young woman at Allentown, Pa., entered the proper office alone the other day and asked for a marriage license, the clerk naturally inquired: "Where is the young man?" "I've got him at home," rejoined the woman, and the license was granted. Wonder if she had him chained. —Boston Globe.

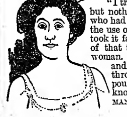
Two severe cases of Ovarian Trouble and two terrible operations avoided. Mrs. Emmons and Mrs. Coleman each tell how they were saved by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am so pleased with the results obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it a duty and a privilege to write you about it.

"I suffered for more than five years with ovarian troubles, causing an unpleasant discharge, a great weakness, and at times a faintness would come over me which no amount of medicine, diet, or exercise seemed to correct. Your Vegetable Compound found the weak spot, however, within a few weeks—and saved me from an operation—all my troubles had disappeared, and I found myself once more healthy and well. Words fail to describe the real, true, grateful feeling that is in my heart, and I want to tell every sick and suffering sister. Don't dally with medicines you know nothing about, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and take my word for it, you will be a different woman in a short time."—MRS. LAURA EMMONS, Walkerville, Ont.

Another Case of Ovarian Trouble Cured Without an Operation.



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For several years I was troubled with ovarian trouble and a painful and inflamed condition, which kept me in bed part of the time. I did so dread a surgical operation.

"I tried different remedies hoping to get better, but nothing seemed to bring relief until a friend who had been cured of ovarian trouble, through the use of your compound, induced me to try it. I took it faithfully for three months, and at the end of that time was glad to find that I was a well woman. Health is nature's best gift to woman, and if you lose it and can have it restored through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel that all suffering women should know of this."—MRS. LAURA BELLE COLEMAN, Commercial Hotel, Nashville, Tenn.

It is well to rememember such letters as above when some druggist tries to get you to buy something which he says is "just as good" That is impossible, as no other medicine has such a record of cures as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; accept no other and you will be glad.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your sickness you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address Lynn, Mass.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

The last services over the body of United States Senator George Frisbie Hoar were held in Sleepy Hollow cemetery in Concord, Mass.

In succession to the late Mr. Payne, George Bruce Cortelyou, former secretary of the department of commerce and labor, and now chairman of the republican national committee, will become postmaster general.

Sheriff Melendez, of Mora county, N. M., has been shot and killed as the result, it is said, of a political quarrel.

Henry Walker, a wealthy Chicago man, was killed at Cedar Lake, Ind., by a Monon passenger train.

Speakers at the international peace congress in Boston urged universal arbitration. The report of the peace bureau says the powers should act to end the Russian-Japanese war.

H. S. Elwell, a Milwaukee travelling man, was killed by a stray bullet in a street duel in San Antonio, Tex., between J. M. Chittenden, "the Texas cattle king," and W. W. Jones, a banker. Neither of the fighters was hurt.

Thomas A. Edison notified the postal department to issue a fraud order against his son and the Thomas A. Edison Jr. Co. for selling an alleged bogus battery.

L. F. Loree, president of the Rock Island and the highest-priced railway man in the world, resigned when his methods were criticised. He will continue to draw a salary of $75,000 a year for four years and also will retain a cash bonus of $500,000.

The case of William Randolph Hearst against the coal carrying roads is to be heard by the interstate commerce commission in New York on October 24.

Louis Schellbach, a prominent business man of Cleveland, O., was shot in the back and killed while duck hunting, near Sandusky.

Bishop Doane caused a sensation in the Episcopal church convention at Boston by admitting the primacy of the pope.

The plant of the National Refining company at Findlay, O., was completely destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of upward of $200,000. The fire was started through lightning striking a 30,000 barrel tank.

The shortage of cars in the Pittsburg district is becoming serious. Sixteen mines of the Pittsburg Coal company were compelled to shut down owing to the shortage.

In New York John Howard, a descendant of one of the earliest American colonies, and who claimed to trace his lineage back to the early English kings, is dead.

John Smith, supposed to be the man who killed Sheriff H. O. Harris, of St. Croix county, Wis., three months ago, has been captured and is confined temporarily in the insane hospital at Mendota, Wis.

Charles Saunders and Mrs. Ella Hammond, of Newark, Del., were instantly killed at Elkton, Md. While crossing the railway tracks their buggy was struck by a train.

During a heavy fog the steamer Boscowiz struck a reef on Harble Down island, in the Pacific ocean. Four passengers, children, were drowned. The crew and 185 passengers were saved.

The international peace congress in Boston adopted resolutions calling on Russia and Japan to end the war and asking The Hague powers to intervene.

The Phoenix line steamer British Princess, from Antwerp, arrived at New York, bringing 156 Percheron horses and 2,000 birds of various kinds.

John Moore, aged 35, balloonist of Charleston, W. Va., fell from a parachute at Frankfort, Ky., breaking both ankles and an arm and sustaining internal injuries which may cause his death.

Henry C. Payne, postmaster general of the United States, died in Washington of heart failure after an illness of less than one week.

Judge Kersten in Chicago granted a change of venue to Thomas J. Noonan and J. E. Cummins, Iroquois theater fire defendants.

The price of anthracite coal was advanced 25 cents a ton by all the retail dealers of Boston.

Burglars entered the residence of Mr. John A. Stewart, at Asheville, N. C., and secured $10,000 worth of diamonds.

Mrs. Erma Ewing Palmer, the last of the two "ossified" sisters, died at Sherburne, N. Y., aged 50. Mrs. Palmer had lain motionless upon her back, totally blind and with every muscle rigid for the last 27 years.

Grief because she shot her husband was the cause assigned by physicians for the death of Mrs. Peter Lewis, at Leon, Ia. She recently shot and killed her husband whom she mistook for a chicken thief.

Minnie Harmening, a 17-year-old girl near Palatine, Ill., at first believed to have been killed by a fiendish assailant, was declared a suicide by a coroner's jury.

Within six days nine men who used revolvers in efforts to rob were sentenced in Chicago to prison for life, and a great decrease in crime is predicted as a result.

Southern delegates to the Episcopal convention in Boston fought resolution calling on the church to denounce lynching of negroes.

An automobile with nine persons plunged over an embankment in New York, falling in front of a railway train, and three persons were killed, one fatally hurt and five others seriously injured.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

President Roosevelt has appointed Julius G. Lay as consul general at Canton in succession to Robert M. McWade, removed. Benjamin H. Ridgely, American consul at Nantes, France, was appointed consul general at Barcelona to succeed Mr. Lay.

William H. Althoff, editor of the News-Democrat at Port Clinton, was nominated for congress by the democrats of the Ninth Ohio district.

Russian treasury official says government has adequate means for covering all war expenses and that rumors of financial embarrassment are unfounded.

The republican national committee has recognized the La Follette committee in Wisconsin.

At Lexington, Ky., two bookkeepers were fined for working on their books on Sunday.

At Spring Valley, Ill., a trolley car jumped the track and was wrecked. Out of 40 passengers only two escaped without injury.

In Illinois there are seven full state and electoral tickets in the field.

Wm. V. Ortman, at Chicago, killed his wife by cutting her throat. He attempted suicide, but failed.

It is reported the Standard Oil company is trying to secure control of the Northern Securities.

The Russian army begins an aggressive movement.

Robbers dynamited the bank at Freeland, Ind., and it is reported they secured $20,000. The safe was blown open and looted and the entire side of the bank building was blown out.

According to a private letter received from a Japanese officer now with the besieging forces before Port Arthur, the Russians are effectively using band grenades filled with a high explosive. The execution of these grenades when accurately thrown is deadly, the officer says, and this probably accounts for the closeness of the fighting.

Six employes of the Grand Trunk railway were suffocated to death by coal gas in the St. Clair tunnel, which runs under the St. Clair river from Port Huron to Sarnia, Ont.

The practice of cremation spreads in England.

HER PINK WRAPPER

By STELLA FELDING

THERE is a place where the leaves grow more profoundly green in Summer, redder and more golden in autumn, and where the brilliant eternity of sky is of a deeper sapphire hue. Thus is slumbrous Greenton Valley.

Here a tiny cottage stood, white and rose embowered; idyllic, poetic, and charged with the gentle Virginian grace of ancient Italy. It was set in a garden laid off with academic primness. Yellow dwarf roses reared their idle, creamy heads beside such lurid effects of nature as red and white chrysanthemums; a sisterhood of passionate red dahlias flaunted away in the sunshine opposite nunlike lilies; and an infinity of little ox-eyed pansies made for borders. It was a most delectable garden. Indeed.

Ernestine's fingers were buried in the rich, clean loam. By her side a huge pair of shears lay, the only thing of consequential size about the place. She raised her hand and pushed back her hair from her forehead, and settled the flapping proportions of her garden hat on the crown of her head. The colonel thought gardening such a pretty, pretty pastime.

"I see you've had your shutters painted," remarked the colonel, with originality.

"Um-um, yes," faltered Ernestine, with a streak of the same element. Then she added, softly: "I did it."

The colonel laughed his hearty, regimental laugh, and flushed rather under the healthy tan of his skin.

"I must confess you made a striking success of it," he said, letting his eyes wander over the six gingerbread windows of this doll house. Everything was so delightfully, ridiculously, absurdly neat and tidy and clean and prim. And the girl before him was remarkably pretty, with her fresh morning face, her silky fawn-brown hair, and her long, flowerlike hands that now lay loosely clasped over her dimpled knees.

The morning wrapper she wore was worthy of being called an invention, and it was a product of her own imagination. It was crisp and very pink and clean, with an infinity of loops and bows and ruffles, and last, but not least, a honeycomb yoke and peekaboo sleeves. Ernestine was also the author of her hat.

This delicious precision and tidiness about the doll house was balm upon the cleanly, order-loving soul of Col. Bell.

"I'm really just curious enough to want to know how you managed, Miss Ernestine," he said, expanding his military chest with the clean, fresh air of Greenton Valley, as he seated himself beside Ernestine.

She bit in her under lip. There was an almost dangerous sweetness lurking about the corners of her round mouth.

Suddenly she laughed outright, and drooped her head, burying her charming, dimpling face in her rosy hands.

"Oh! I'm almost ashamed to tell you," she said, hardly audible. "It's so ridiculous, but then it seems to me that everything that happens during these summers here is ridiculous."

"Miss Ernestine," said the colonel, with unction, "I promise to keep perfectly sober."

"Well, then, I'll tell you."

She sighed a delectable little dirling sigh that thrilled straight through the colonel and finally lodged in his heart.

The yellow, impalpable sunshine beat down upon them, and over them brooded the eternity of lustrous sapphire sky.

"You see it's just this way," began Ernestine, "there are only two of us, of course, and my sister, being past mistress of expedients and strategy, suggested that we make a stepladder of our household goods. So we piled chairs and tables up from the ground and down from the windows, and I stood on these and held to the frame while I painted."

The colonel glanced up at the trim, muslin curtained, gingerbread windows that looked out of the wall like three staring eyes slightly askew.

"But why didn't you take the shutters off to paint them, Miss Ernestine?" exclaimed the colonel, inspirationally.

Ernestine extended her pretty hands in a tender little movement of appeal to the colonel. She pressed her glowing morning face down among the cool leaves and blossoms of the chrysanthemums.

"Oh, don't tell me, at this late day, dear colonel, that shutters come off!"

She was very tempting as she sat there in her trim little garden, her bright head catching and holding the sunlight like a jewel. She herself was like a rare gem, on which one discovered new and beautiful facets at every turn. Her charms were very penetrating, very many, very appealing.

The colonel took counsel with himself. He intended telling a falsehood, he also intended giving it away with the great white light of truth.

"No, Miss Ernestine," he said, "I think you were quite right. It has always been my theory that shutters look better afterward when painted on the house. I do not know why; but that has always been my experience."

She looked up at him gratefully, and he felt repaid.

The colonel had attained a certain age. He had often seen his sisters in the matutinal hours display themselves in, well, perhaps picturesque disarray one might call it, if one were disposed to be lenient. The colonel wished to commit himself not swiftly. He desired his future wife to be his most dainty, his most beautiful, plaything and idol. There was, perhaps a dash of Bagdad and the far east in the make-up of Col. Bell. He would call on Miss Ernestine very early to-morrow morning; and then, perhaps—if—

"Is it eight o'clock yet?" yawned Ernestine, turning over in bed and presenting a white rampart of back to her sister's sleepy face.

"Yes," came the muffled answer.

Ernestine rose, yawned again, pressed her hands to her frowsy head and stretched herself luxuriously, blinking hard to open her eyes. She sent out one small foot to feel about on the floor for the badly down-trodden, slippers that lay hidden under the pile of ruffled bedclothes that had slipped to the floor during the night.

Ernestine groaned audibly, the room was so intolerably, deplorably untidy.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Ernestine crossly, then stopped suddenly as a rather sick looking wrapper came down over her head and shut off utterance. "Do get up, Anne; everything is in such a nasty mess."

She kicked a roll of soiled towels into a corner, and threw a bunch of withered roses into the brimming slop basin. When the shutters were flung open she stepped for a moment before the mirror. In it she saw a most dowdy little figure. She nearly laughed out loud. Her beautiful hair was tumbled about her shoulders and standing absurdly at sixes and sevens. Traces of yesterday morning's chocolate adorned her wrapper front.

"I certainly am a little—fright!" she laughed.

She thought languidly of the transformation that would take place when she donned the fresh pink wrapper now lying across the back of a chair in the next room, and of the effect of a knot of young rosebuds at the belt.

The beat of footsteps sounded in the hall. The girls stopped short, and their eyes met. They came upsettingly near, then ceased. The sisters still stood transfixed, looking at each other.

An inquiring, long, brown nose was softly protruded within the crack of the door.

"Lodusky!" screamed Ernestine Tebbs, running to him and beginning to pat his head vigorously.

"Col. Bell!" ejaculated her sister.

Ernestine had long since raised quick costuming to the level of a science.

Very shortly she emerged distractingly pretty, captivating, immaculate as the morning, and in time to gather a few blossoms for her throat as she tripped down the gravel walk to meet the unregenerate colonel. She was as fresh and sweet as one of her own favorite blush roses that bloomed at her feet, as she faced the colonel in that most delectable of pink morning wrappers. She looked up at him, archly, coyly, from out the shadow of her great garden hat.

"Good morning," he said, abruptly. "Miss Ernestine, pray pardon such an early morning call, but—"

She put out her soft, white hand quickly and laid it on his, pressing it gently.

"Dear colonel," she said, "I find the early, early morning the most beautiful part of the day. Why apologize?"

She let her hand drop. His own still tingled, he felt her little fingertips resting in his palm. The colonel's face was overspread with a not conventional beatitude, for had she not stood the supreme test, and come out with not only flying, but scrupulously clean, colors. He twined his arm about her, drawing her into the shadow of a tree near by, and whispered a few hurried words in her ear. Lodusky lay on the gravel and stared at them with an unfathomable look in his eyes.

It was very quiet, not a leaf stirred in slumberous Greenton valley.—National Magazine.

Motor-Car for the Pope.

According to the Giornale d'Italia, the pope has decided to purchase a motor car for use in the shady groves of the vatican gardens in place of the traditional light carriage drawn by funereal-looking horses.

Maybe it has not occurred to Sir Thomas Lipton that in his hour of need he might turn to that wonderful yacht designer, Kaiser Wilhelm.

Men often meet as antagonists to separate with expressions of friendliness.

Mr. Parker, Democratic nominee for President has never journed west of Buffalo N. Y. What does he know of the great west, its people, their achievements, ther possibilites, their needs? How can he reconcile the demands of the different sections, and decide great questions properly and for the good of the whole country? Of limited experience, of narrowed horizone, he is not compairable with Theodore Roosevelt, who has traveled the country over, lived east and west, knows the people the country, and is a President of the people and is not controlled by Wall street and its influences.

Waiter Couldn't Help Them Out.

A well known Baltimore society man was once spending a few days with his wife at Atlantic City, and in connection with his visit he told the following story: When he seated himself in the dining room on the evening of his arrival he discovered that he could not read the menu, as he had left his glasses in his room, and his eyes were useless without them. When he passed it to his wife she exclaimed that she was in the same predicament. At a loss to know what to do, the gentleman called the waiter to him and, pointing to the menu, said:

"Read that to me and I will give you a dollar."

Quick as a flash the waiter replied:

"Scuse me, boss, but I ain't had much ejication maself!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Webster on Debt.

Once when Daniel Webster was riding along a New England road in a stagecoach, so the story runs, he was annoyed by the jolting and poked his head out of the window to yell at the driver: "Hey! Can't you drive a little slower?" "No," responded the coachman; "the horses are running away, sir." "Run 'em into a fence corner," advised Daniel. "Can't, sir," said the driver reluctantly and despairingly. "They've got the bit between their teeth, sir!" "Well, run them into debt then!" thundered Daniel. "That'll stop anything!"

A Poacher's Ruse.

A poacher, writing in the Country Gentleman of London, says: "When I left home at night to go poaching I always left an end of a candle burning in a saucer of water in my bedroom. This was arranged so that it would splutter out about 10 o'clock, just as if I had extinguished it and retired for the night. This I did because I discovered that the keepers were given to watching my house for signs of my leaving, and it was a long time before they found that a candle could go out without human agency."

The Yorkshireman's Coat of Arms.

Allow me to submit to you the Yorkshireman's coat of arms as it was given to me many years ago by a Yorkshireman. It runs thus: A flea, a fly, a magpie and a flitch of bacon—a flea, because he will bite his best friend; a fly, because he will drink from anybody's cup; a magpie, because he will chatter with anybody; a flitch of bacon, because he is no good until he is hung.—London Spectator.

She Knew.

A certain old lady always knew everything before anybody else. One day her niece saw her passing the house and ran out to meet her. "Do come in, aunty," she begged, "and help us. We are making charades."

"Certainly I will," answered the old lady. "I knew you were making them because I smelled them as I came along."

A Pointer.

"Say, Mr. Smartie," whispered little Tommy, slipping from behind the portals, "for a nickel I'll slip you a pick in the parlor tonight."

"What do I want with a pick?" asked Mr. Smartie in astonishment.

"Why, I heard sister say you were going to break the ice tonight."

MONOLITH PROBLEMS

MYSTERY OF THESE STRANGE STONE MONUMENTS OF THE PAST.

A Theory That All of Them, Those on the American Continent as Well as Those In the East, Were Built by the Ancient Phoenicians.

Among the greatest mysteries in the mystery of the past human history on earth the monoliths that stand in various parts of the globe have always been chief.

These strange stone monuments, generally rude, with hardly any sculpture, but wonderfully large in size, are scattered everywhere. The most famous of them are the cromlechs, such as those in Stonehenge, in England. Others are found in the western part of France, in the northern part of Germany as far as the Oder river, in Denmark and in Sweden.

Northern Africa, Madagascar and Asia, from Mount Sinai and the Caucasus to India, all have some here and there.

Lately they have been discovered even in Siberia. There are several places in Japan where such stones stand.

Others have been found in North and South America. Among the most wonderful and mysterious of them all are the vast, almost terrifying, stones, rudely sculptured, that have been found on Easter island, in the Pacific ocean.

The mystery as to what these stones meant was not the only puzzle. The greatest puzzle was how primitive people, without knowledge of engineering and without known appliances, could have moved and erected such giant blocks, some of which weigh as much as 250 tons. In many districts where the great memorials stand there are no stones of such size to be found in the earth. Consequently they must have been transported from places long distances away.

For many generations—ever since men have spent any time in thinking over these matters—scientists have puzzled their heads over the monoliths in vain. Whether they classed them as all being the same or whether they divided them into different classes, they remained the same riddle.

In more recent years, however, there has been a systematic study of all the monolith memorials of the world, and as a result a novel theory has been advanced.

It is that one race—that of the Phoenicians—erected all these monuments.

Of course if this is correct it means that history will have to be revised, for it would show that the Phoenicians once knew all about the whole globe and that they had visited America and Asia long before modern days.

The first thing that led to the assumption that the Phoenicians had raised the monuments was the observation of M. Levistre, a French archaeologist, that almost all the monoliths were to be found near the mouths of great rivers or along their courses. This pointed to a people that used ships.

Now, the Celts were never strong on the water. Their boats were primitive, being mostly of wickerwork covered with hides, and they were unable to move any distance from land in these clumsy and unseaworthy contrivances.

Consequently, when the question arose as to what race was advanced in navigation in that early time when these monuments were put up, the answer naturally came that the only race known to be a race of sailors and merchants then was the race of the Phoenicians.

And if they were the Phoenicians how did they come to reach America? They had colonies on the islands of the western Mediterranean and even in the islands of the Atlantic ocean, as history proves. It is not hard to imagine that they may have found their way to America. Some archaeologists are even willing to believe that they reached America by way of the lost Atlantis, that legendary continent that is now sunken somewhere in the Atlantic ocean, if it ever existed.

At any rate, the theory that the Phoenicians were the erectors of the monoliths of the world to commemorate discoveries or for religious purposes still later on gained strength through the discovery of a great upright stone near the river Loire, which has Phoenician words engraved deeply on it. Translated, these words say, "On this spot was slain our brave comrade."

In San Luis, in Bolivia, is one of these stones, which has on it the engraving of a foot printed and a snake with its head raised. The footprint is a well known Phoenician symbol of death and is found on many stones that cover ancient Phoenician burial sites. And the snake with head raised is another acknowledged Phoenician emblem. Exactly the same symbols as those on the South American stone have been found on a stone in central France.—New York Press.

Yorkshire Moors.

There is no better walking to be had within the four seas than across a Yorkshire moor. The air is intoxicating. The sun's heat may be tropical elsewhere. Here it is ever tempered by breeze if not by high wind. One is knee deep in honey sweet heather; the grouse rise in numbers at your feet and sweep down the wind with the speed of an express bullet.—Temple Bar.

The best thing Josh Billings knew of was a "first rate wife," and the next best thing was a "second rate wife."

TWEED RING "GRAFT."

[illegible] Millions Its Direct and [illegible] Cost to New York.

[illegible] courthouse was still far from complete and miserably furnished, [illegible] it had already resulted in [illegible] outlay of $11,000,000, when [illegible] liberal estimate placed its value, [illegible] and luxuriously furnished, at less than $3,000,000.

A few items will be sufficient to show the scale upon which the ring had conducted its financial policy:

Forty old chairs and three tables had a record value of $170,729.60.

A charge for repairing fixtures, through J. H. Keyser & Co., was $1,149,874.50.

Thermometers, $7,500.

Another charge for furniture, through Ingersoll & Co., $240,564.63.

A single item of stationery was set down at $186,495.61. What, in heaven's name, could the 61 cents have paid for with stationery bought at ring rates?

Then there were carpets, shades and curtains, also supplied by that marvelous firm, Ingersoll & Co., at the fairly comfortable figure of $675,534.44. Nor must we overlook one G. S. Miller, a carpenter, who was set down as having received $360,747.61 for one month's work.

But Garvey, Andrew J. Garvey, the plasterer! Generations of plasterers yet unborn will take off their hats to his memory! Two million eight hundred and seventy thousand four hundred and sixty-four dollars and six cents had he earned at his humble trade in the brief period of nine months.

It is unnecessary to go further into the details of this monster and monstrous fraud; $5,663,216.83 had been paid through the single "firm" of Ingersoll & Co.

Matthew J. O'Rourke, who since that time made a careful study of the city's finances, states that, counting the vast issues of fraudulent bonds, the swindling of the city by wealthy tax dodgers, by franchises and favors granted, by blackmail and extortion, the total amount of the city's loss through the Tweed ring stands at not less than $200,000,000.—Pearson's Weekly.

PROVERBS ABOUT CZARS.

Dress In Japan.

Between the sexes in Japan there is very little difference in the main features of dress, and little children are only beautiful little miniatures of their parents, more gayly and richly dressed. Under his kimono a man of the upper class wears a sort of kilted divided skirt, something approaching the nature of trousers. This is called the "hakama" and is always made of stiff silk. A woman wears instead an under kimono. Both sexes wear two little aprons round the loins, called "koshi-maki," and a sort of shirt called the "suso-yoke." The narrow sash worn by a man is not an item of great importance, for, although it is always made of rich silk, it is not so much for show as for use, to keep the kimono in place.

Girls and the Old Schools.

A ruling for a New Haven school made in 1684 reads, "And all girls be excluded as improper and inconsistent with such a grammar school as ye law injoins and is the designe of this settlement." One Benjamin Mudge, a New England schoolmaster of many years' service, has left the following interesting memorandum: "In all my school days, which ended in 1801, I never saw but three females in public schools in my life, and they were only in the afternoon to learn to write." Mr. Mudge neglects to say, however, that the girls were permitted not only to the writing lessons, but they were also privileged to attend the general annual catechising.

Poet or Organ Grinder.

"I sometimes feel," bitterly confided the wife of the great poet to her sister, "that I would have been happier with an organ grinder. Then we could at least pass the hat around unabashed. The pride that goes with great gifts too often walks hand in hand with starvation to satisfy an ordinary woman."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Seven Rests In Disease.

Mention is made by Professor Hilton in his lectures on "Rest and Pain" of the seven varieties of the former obtainable in the treatment of disease—namely, mental rest, bodily rest, a combination of those two, as in that most perfect state of rest called sleep; organic rest, as evidenced in the avoidance of exertion in cardiac disease, of talking in affections of the respiratory tract and in limiting, so far as possible, the act of deglutition in affections of the alimentary tract by the substitution of enemata; local rest, as secured by change in the position of body or limb, the use of pillows, cushions, etc.; dietetic rest, by avoiding the too frequent use of food and drink; lastly, medicinal rest, in the relief of spasm by inhalations and the not too frequent administration of medicine to the prejudice of nutrients or stimulants. Professor Hilton lays it down as a rule that by a consideration of the manner in which these principles of rest may be best applied in each special case of disease are relief and comfort to be brought to the sufferer and diseased action arrested.—London Lancet.

Discomforts In Venice.

Venice is not a desirable place of residence in summer for the ordinary mortal. The moisture in the air, caused by the steady prevalence of the sirocco, takes the starch, so to speak, out of men's minds as much as out of their collars, and it is only the artistic, the lazy and the unemployed who can rightly enjoy the summer in Venice. The colors in air, in sky and sea are of a nature to provide perpetual delight and occupation to the eye and hand of the painter, while the abundance and variety of the fruits to be had will equally content his mere appetite, for fruit in Venice is beautiful and almost oriental in its quality and quantity. But there are drawbacks to be set against the lotus eating kind of existence, and not the least of these is that of hot nights, when sleep is almost an unknown quantity and is driven away by one subtle foe after another, the mosquito being the fiercest and most aggressive.

Fishing For Plunder.

A visitor to one of the hotels at Peking was awakened during the night by the noise caused by the fall of a roll of paper. Getting out of bed, he saw with astonishment a pole, to which was attached a fishing line, moving about the room, collecting various objects and removing them through the window. Upon going downstairs he was heard by the burglarious Chinaman outside to whom the rod belonged and who escaped, leaving his fishing line behind him.

Took His Meals In His Cabin.

An Australian millionaire, Mr. James Tyson, left behind him when he died a fortune of £8,000,000. One of the many stories concerning him tells how on one occasion he was a passenger on a Queensland coasting steamer. As usual, when traveling he declined to undress at night and lay in his bunk fully clothed, boots and all. He had taken thither with him, moreover, three loaves of bread upon which to subsist for forty-eight hours in order to save the expense of meals. The stewards complained to the purser of the crumbs which the millionaire's methods caused in the cabin. But nothing would induce Tyson to eat his loaves elsewhere than in his bunk. Great was his rage when at the end of the voyage he was charged not only full rate, but one-fourth extra for having "taken his meals in his cabin."

Self Respect.

Self respect is at the bottom of all our love of life. Lessen our self respect and man is willing to throw his life away in debauchery and the worst kind of dissolute living. Self respect is the bond that holds all his powers together, that makes him able to act, to bear, to endure. Now, nothing but ceaseless striving for conduct, for morality, for principle, can give you self respect Every man who deliberately does wrong and does not strive to put it beneath his foot as he would an assassin seeking to take his life loses self respect, and his power will pass away little by little.

Ears of Lobsters.

Most curious are the ears of lobsters. Each is a sack or bag containing fluid and "ear stones;" these last being particles of mineral matter, or, in some cases, particles of sand. They increase the vibrations set up by sound waves, which in due season impinge on the delicate cells of the ear, which contain the ends of the nerve of hearing. These last in turn convey the impressions to what serves the lobster by way of a brain, and a very respectable nervous mass it is.

The Last Thing He Did.

It was said of Lord Palmerston that he never grew old and was as lighthearted as a boy to the very end. When he was on his deathbed and the doctors told him that his time had come he brightened up for a final jest. "Die, my dear doctor! That's the last thing I shall do!" It was.

Courtship In New Guinea.

Courtship in New Guinea is begun on very different lines from those of the Caucasian. It is the girl who takes the initiative instead of the youth. When a young man falls in love with a Papuan belle he does not look at her and whenever possible shuns her company. If she appears grieved at such slights the suitor performs various acrobatic feats whenever he thinks she is watching. He will leap into the air, stand on his head or knock down some smaller youth. Should the girl be fascinated by these performances she employs a little girl to carry a nut to her lover, and on the nut she will paint certain emblems indicative of her passion. The nut will also tell where she will meet him that night. At this trysting place the two will eat the nut together and make such arrangements as are necessary for the marriage. All the difficulties of proposing on the European or American plan are done away with in New Guinea.

"Knockout Drops" In a Ring.

"A knockout ring," said the detective: "Look at it well. It belonged to Jimmy the Kid. He was notorious."

The ring was of gold, and it contained a huge dark blue stone.

"Now, watch the stone," continued the detective. And he pressed with his thumb a spring, smaller than a pinhead, on the gold loop opposite the setting.

Instantly the middle of the stone slipped back like a sliding door, and out of the opening three or four drops of fluid fell. When the detective ceased to press the spring the stone closed up again.

"See how it works?" he said. "I sit with you, and there are two glasses of liquor before us. Talking away, I draw the hand with the ring on it across your glass, and with my thumb I press the spring. Then into your glass there falls enough chloral to put you out of business."—New York Press.

PRESSED TO DEATH.

Fearful Punishment That Obtained Under Old English Law.

Under the old English law if a prisoner stood mute and failed to plead to the indictment a jury was impaneled to determine whether his conduct came from obstinacy or from a natural impediment. According to Blackstone, if the prisoner was found to be obstinately mute and the indictment was for high treason it was settled that his silence was equivalent to a conviction and that judgment and execution should follow. This same rule applied to petit larceny and misdemeanors; but upon appeal or indictments for other felonies or petit treason, according to the ancient law, the prisoner was not deemed convicted; but, because of his obstinacy, he received "the terrible sentence of penance or peine" and was pressed to death.

Blackstone thus describes this punishment: "That the prisoner be remanded to the prison from whence he came and put in a low, dark chamber and there be laid on his back on the bare floor, naked unless decency forbids; that there be placed upon his body as great a weight of iron as he could bear and more; that he should have no sustenance, save only on the first day three morsels of the worst bread, and on the second day three drafts of standing water that should be nearest the prison door, and in this situation this should be alternately his daily diet till he died or (as anciently the judgment ran) till he answered."

During the trials for witchcraft in New England a respectable citizen being so accused, knowing that by reason of the excitement of the times a plea of not guilty and trial would result in a conviction with confiscation of property, and the same judgment would follow a plea of guilty, refused to plead, thereby preventing a conviction and enabling his family to retain his property. The court ordered that he be pressed because of his obstinacy. The order was carried out and the victim died.—Chicago News.

WISDOM OF ANIMALS.

The Ape of Apuleius—A Dog Actor; Wise Dogs and Elephants.

Apuleius says that in the spring fetes of Isis, the forerunners of the Roman carnival, he saw a monkey with a straw hat and a Phrygian tunic.

But monkeys do not seem to have been popular in Rome. The cleverest of all the animal performers were of course the dogs; and one showman had the ingenious idea of making a dog act a part in a comedy. The effects of a drug were tried on him, the plot turning on the suspicion that the drug was poisonous, while in fact, it was only a narcotic. The dog took the piece of bread dipped in the liquid, swallowed it and began to reel and stagger till he finally fell on the ground.

At the right moment he began to move very slightly as if waking out of a deep sleep. Then he raised his head, looked around, jumped up and ran joyously to the proper person.

The remark that animals do not grow wiser with age is contradicted by the habit of elephants, noticed even in ancient times, of making the young ones cross a ford first. The officer who superintended the embarkation of the elephants sent from India to Abyssinia for use in Lord Napier's campaign tells how one old elephant volunteered to drive all the others on board. His services were invaluable, but when they had all embarked and he was invited to follow them he firmly declined and had to be left on shore.

I myself have noticed the acquired caution of the older dogs of Constantinople, which left untouched the crusts I threw them; while the young ones ate them ravenously. A Greek native told me that this was because Europeans were in the cruel habit of throwing poisoned bread to the street dogs; hence the old ones, having seen the bad effects on their companions, refused to eat bread thrown by Europeans, though they took it readily from any Turkish beggar who shared his scanty fare with them.—Contemporary Review.

Licking the Pencil.

One of the foremost lawyers in New York city licks the point of his pencil whenever about to write with it. The other day it was indelible, and his tongue was a sight to behold. His friends were alarmed, thinking he had met with an accident. "My boy does it," he said. "I did it when I was a boy, and my father and grandfather did it. And nearly every man of my acquaintance does it and did it. Licking the point of the pencil is one of the [illegible] of human [illegible]."—New York Press.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

The Glory of the Great.

As the stars are the glory of the sky, so great men are the glory of their country, yes, of the whole earth. The hearts of great men are the stars of earth; and doubtless when one looks down from above our planet those hearts are seen to send forth a silvery light just like the stars of heaven.—Heinrich Heine.

Cold Tea?

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground, after the crowd had left, picked up 119 bottles ranging in capacity from a half pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO YOUNG GIRLS.

All young girls at this period of life are earnestly invited to write Mrs. Pinkham for advice; she has guided in a motherly way hundreds of young women; her advice is freely and cheerfully given, and her address is Lynn, Mass.

Judging from the letters she is receiving from so many young girls Mrs. Pinkham believes that our girls are often pushed altogether too near the limit of their endurance nowadays in our public schools and seminaries.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with studies, the girl must be pushed to the front and graduated with honor; often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality,—often it is never recovered.

A Young Chicago Girl Saved from Despair.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to thank you for the help and benefit I have received through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. When I was about seventeen years old I suddenly seemed to lose my usual good health and vitality. Father said I studied too hard, but the doctor thought different and prescribed tonics, which I took by the quart without relief. Reading one day in the paper of Mrs. Pinkham's great cures, and finding the symptoms described answered mine, I decided I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I did not say a word to the doctor; I bought it myself, and took it according to directions regularly for two months, and I found that I gradually improved, and that all pains left me, and I was my old self once more.—LILLIE E. SINCLAIR, 17 E. 22d St., Chicago Ill."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one sure remedy to be relied upon at this important period in a young girl's life; with it she can go through with courage and safety the work she must accomplish, and fortify her physical well being so that her future life may be insured against sickness and suffering.

Somebody told Mr. Jenks that red flannel worn next to the skin would cure the rheumatism from which he suffered. So he purchased several sets of red flannel undergarments. The clerk assured him that the firm guaranteed the goods in every particular. About two weeks later, says the New York Times, Mr. Jenks revisited the shop, sought out the proprietor and told his woeful story.

"The goods are the best in the house," declared the proprietor. "Of course," he said, in the reasonable tone used on unreasonable persons, "of course the shirts may have shrunk or faded a little—"

"Shrunk! Faded!" bellowed Mr. Jenks. "What do you think my wife said to me when I came down to breakfast yesterday with one of them on?"

The proprietor looked bored.

"Well, sir," said the aggrieved Jenks, "she looked at me a minute, and then said: 'What is that little red line round your neck, John? It isn't the baby's string of coral beads, is it?'"

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Stole a Lawn.

Daring robberies often puzzle the Minneapolis police, but few are so mysterious as the theft of M. Silver's lawn from his place at 571 Sixth avenue N. The thieves came in the night with a wagon, rolled the lawn into a bundle and hauled it away.

Mr. Silver's lawn has been in an impoverished condition all summer and a few days ago he had the entire surface peeled and resodded. One morning he remarked to his friends that with the continued warm weather it would get a good start before freezing time.

The next morning his hopes were shattered, for his lawn was gone and nothing remained but the soft black loam. Wagon tracks near the curb told the story. The robbers came some time between 11 at night and 5 o'clock in the morning, doing their work well. No one saw the wagon come or go. All that remains for Mr. Silver is to order a new lawn with a burglar alarm attached.

Fought With Snakes.

Pat Lamb of Yucatan has had a fight for his life in a nest of rattlesnakes. Mr. Lamb was walking through a pasture on his farm when he happened upon the snakes which were out sunning themselves. As he only saw a few he started to kill some of them with a club. Some of the reptiles showed fight and soon others came out from the nest which was in a hole in the side of a hill. Mr. Lamb was then compelled to battle for his life and it was only when he was almost exhausted that he succeeded in beating off his assailants. He hurried for help and when he returned eighteen dead snakes were found, some old ones with many rattles, but the majority being small. Mr. Lamb said there must have been a hundred rattlers in the nest, but no more could be found of those that remained alive.

Stabbing Affray.

A fatal stabbing affray took place at Winnipeg Junction. It appears that Olaus Larson, who lives two miles south and one mile east of Ulen, in Goose Prairie township, was passing along near the depot at Winnipeg Junction at about 11 o'clock at night, when he was assaulted by a party named Ole Molstad. Larson received a thrust from a knife, the blade striking the right temple and penetrating the brain. Larson was taken to the Crookston hospital in a semi-conscious condition where an operation was performed. A portion of the skull was removed and a quantity of pus was removed from the effected portion of the brain, but Larson continued to sink and died.

Alleged Horse Thief.

The Winona police rounded up a stranger who is alleged to be a horse thief. He gave his name as M. Kingsley, and the police say he told conflicting stories, one of which was that he is a railway detective. He was overtaken by Herman Bratz, a farmer, on the opposite side of the river in Wisconsin, and was given a ride. When they came into the city, it is alleged, Bratz left his team tied in the street while he went into a store. Coming out twenty minutes later the team and stranger were gone. The police found Kingsley a little later in the lower part of the city.

Tough Citizens.

Terror reigned for a day or more at the village of Little Fork, on the Little Fork river, in the northern part of Itasca county.

Two men supposed to be woodsmen, shot up the saloon of Beasley & Olson, emptied the cash drawer, filled their sacks with cigars and whisky, and then went out on the street and then shot the town up in a most daring manner.

Statue for Northrop.

A more lasting tribute to President Northrop than any that have been tendered him before is being planned by members of the faculty and alumni of the institution. For some time the matter has been discussed and now definite steps have been taken for the erection of a statue of the distinguished educator on some portion of the university campus.

Burned to Death.

Fire broke out in the residence of W. H. Dickinson at Rochester, and for a while the entire block of residences was in danger.

Miss Clara Dickinson was the only person in the house when the fire broke out and burned to death, before she was known to be there, having made no outcry.

News Notes.

Amos Woodman of Baldwin is the victim of a mysterious stabbing affair and is lying at the point of death.

Frank H. Hamilton, who was sent to the penitentiary in February, 1901, for the killing of Leonard Day at the West hotel, Minneapolis, has been released from prison.

The steamer Knute Nelson has been launched at Warroad. Mrs. Gladys Moody broke a bottle of champagne over the prow, and Albert Berg made an address.

The killing of George Judnich while he was hunting on a farm three miles west of Eveleth still remains a mystery. A deer hunter, it is generally believed fired the shot, mistaking his victim for the game he sought.

Delegations of Minneapolis business men appear before the state board of equalization to object to an increase in their assessments.

A small fire in the elevator shaft of the wholesale house of Lindake, Warner & Sons, was the cause of an alarm sent in St. Paul. The blaze was extinguished with chemicals. There was no damage done.

GENERAL GLEANINGS.

Otto Wicke, a prominent New York politician, whose check is worth $125,000, at one time lived on five cents a day and slept in the City Hall park.

The first Japanese to receive the degree of doctor of medicine from Washington university, St. Louis, is Noakazu Fujimori, who has just graduated. He is also a graduate of the Tokio Saisei medical college and the New York state university.

The Japanese have offered to let their Russian prisoners work at building a harbor at Matsuyama, to "pass the time," and earn the usual wages, with which they will be able to buy themselves luxuries during their imprisonment.

Some of the business men at Coney Island want the name of the place changed to "Surf-City-by-the-Sea." They urge that the place has a past to live down and that it could do so more easily with a new name. Others are opposed to change, saying that reform can be effected without adopting the cumbersome name suggested or any other.

A bank clerk writes to the London Chronicle stating that he is afraid the irritation caused by his high collar will produce a cancer under his chin. But he does not know what to do, "for," he says, "I dare not assuage my anxiety by resorting to the low or turned-down variety, for I am sure I should be immediately dismissed from my bank."

More than 8,000 women are employed in the various government offices in Washington, 2,044 of whom have entered the service after competitive examination. Nine hundred of them are paid salaries ranging from $1,000 to $1,800 a year, the others being paid the compensation of ordinary clerks—$600 to $900 a year.

The North German Lloyd company's 4,000-ton schoolship Herzogin Cecilie arrived in London from San Francisco. She is manned entirely by 60 German youths, who are thus educated for command on the company's ships or other German merchantmen. They serve four years and their training is very thorough. The cost to each boy is about $200 a year.

THE UNITED STATES WILL SOON KNOCK AT THE DOORS OF CANADA FOR WHEAT.

A Crop of 60,000,000 Bushels of Wheat Will Be the Record of 1904.

The results of the threshing in Western Canada are not yet completed, but from information at hand, it is safe to say that the average per acre will be reasonably high, and a fair estimate will place the total yield of wheat at 60,000,000 bushels. At present prices this will add to the wealth of the farmers nearly $60,000,000. Then think of the immense yield of oats and barley and the large herds of cattle, for all of which good prices will be paid.

The following official telegram was sent by Honorable Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior, to Lord Strathcona, High Commissioner for Canada:—

"Am now able to state definitely that under conditions of unusual difficulty in Northwest a fair average crop of wheat of good quality has been reaped and is now secure from substantial damage. The reports of injury by frost and rust were grossly exaggerated. The wheat of Manitoba and Northwest Territories will aggregate from fifty-five to sixty million bushels. The quality is good, and the price is ranging around one dollar per bushel."

Frank H. Spearman, in the Saturday Evening Post, says:—

"When our first transcontinental railroad was built, learned men attempted by isothermal demonstration to prove that wheat could not profitably be grown north of where the line was projected; but the real granary of the world lies up to 300 miles north of the Canadian Pacific railroad, and the day is not definitely distant when the United States will knock at the doors of Canada for its bread. Railroad men see such a day; it may be hoped that statesmen also will see it, and arrange their reciprocities while they may do so gracefully. Americans already have swarmed into that far country and to a degree have taken the American wheat field with them. Despite the fact that for years a little Dakota station on the St. Paul road—Eureka—held the distinction of being the largest primary grain market in the world, the Dakotas and Minnesota will one day yield their palm to Saskatchewan.

There are 798 species of roses known, and 488 of chrysanthemums.

WHAT ROME THINKS

THE POPE'S PHYSICIAN ENDORSES AN AMERICAN REMEDY.

Dr. Lapponi Uses Dr. Williams' Pink Pills In His Practice Because Results Meet His Expectations.

Dr. Lapponi, the famous physician to the Vatican, whose name has recently come so greatly to the front on account of his unremitting attention to His Holiness, the late Pope Leo XIII, and the high esteem and confidence with which he is regarded by the present Pope, His Holiness Pius X, is a man of commanding genius. He is more than a mere man of science; he is a man of original and independent mind. Untrammeled by the "etiquette" of the medical profession and having used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in his practice with good results, he freely avows the facts and endorses the value of this remedy with an authority which no one will venture to question.

Dr. Lapponi's Letter.

"I certify that I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in four cases of the simple anæmia of development. After a few weeks of treatment, the result came fully up to my expectations. For that reason I shall not fail in the future to extend the use of this laudable preparation not only in the treatment of other forms of the category of anæmia or chlorosis, but also in cases of neurasthenia and the like."

(Signed) GIUSEPPE LAPPONI,
Via dei Gracchi 332, Rome.

The "simple anæmia of development," referred to by Dr. Lapponi, is of course, that tired, languid condition of young girls, whose development to womanhood is tardy and whose health, at that period, is so often imperiled. His opinion of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People at that time is of the highest scientific authority, and it confirms the many published cases in which anæmia and other diseases of the blood, as well as nervous diseases such as nervous prostration, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis and locomotor ataxia have been cured by these pills. They are commended to the public for their efficiency in making new blood and strengthening weak nerves. After such an endorsement they will be accepted by the medical and scientific world at their full value.

Western Canada's Magnificent Crops FOR 1904

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Western Canada's Wheat Crop this year will be 60,000,000 bushels, and wheat at present is worth $1.00 a bushel.

The oat and barley crop will also yield abundantly.

Splendid prices for all kinds of grain, cattle and other farm produce for the growing of which the climate is unsurpassed.

About 150,000 Americans have settled in Western Canada during the past three years.

Thousands of free Homesteads of 160 acres each still available in the best agricultural districts.

It has been said that the United States will be forced to import wheat within a very few years. Secure a farm in Canada and become one of those who will help produce it.

RUSSIANS IN FULL RETREAT

JAPANESE ARMY DRIVES THE ENEMY BACK.

Fighting Near Mukden Said to Be Most Severe of War—Losses Reported as 30,000 Men.

London, Oct. 15.—The main armies of Russia and Japan in Manchuria continue to be engaged in a desperate struggle for supremacy south of Mukden. On both sides there have been such losses in killed and wounded as mark the contest as one of the bloodiest in history. Already the losses at Liaoyang have been approximated, and the indications are that they will be exceeded, that of the Russians up to noon of October 14 being estimated at 15,000. The Russian advance has been converted into a stubbornly fought retreat. The result, according to the Russians, is still to be determined. Reports from the Russian left wing are lacking, leaving room for question if that part of Gen. Kuropatkin's army is not in worse extremity than the center and right were at any stage of the battle. On both sides the soldiers have shown the utmost tenacity and bravery, and whole regiments have gone down before the fire of the enemy. In official circles of St. Petersburg there is a disposition to argue that even should Gen. Kuropatkin be obliged to retire upon Mukden his position will be quite as favorable as it was when the order to advance was given on October 6, and that on the other hand the Japanese powers of future resistance will have been materially weakened. There is no news from Port Arthur.

Cause of Russian Defeat.

London, Oct. 15.—The cause of the Russian defeat is that the Japanese army drove a wedge into the middle of the enemy's line. Prisoners say Gen. Kuropatkin personally commanded the troops on the main road and that Gen. Mistchenko was in command at Benslhu. A brigade of infantry and a regiment of cavalry crossed the Taitse river, but found themselves in a critical position and retired to the right bank with the Japanese in pursuit. The Japanese hurled back 16 counter attacks upon their right. The army lost 3,000 men in the fighting around Benslhu.

A dispatch from Tokio to the Standard says: "It is unofficially reported that the Japanese right army has succeeded in isolating a force of three or four divisions of Russians in the Benslhu-Kiaotan district. It is rumored that Kuropatkin himself is with the force, which seems doomed to destruction. The central army captured 11 guns and the left army 25 guns, while the spoils of the right army are expected to be still more valuable. It is believed here that the disastrous advance was forced on Gen. Kuropatkin from St. Petersburg. In any case his move was an unexpected Godsend for the Japanese army."

The Standard's correspondent at Yentai, under date of October 10, says: "The whole Russian line has been driven back over a distance of 20 miles and 70 guns have been captured. Pursuit is being kept up by a strong force on both flanks. There is good reason to hope that Oyama has succeeded in enveloping the enemy."

Losses Over 30,000.

Paris, Oct. 14.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Petit Journal claims to have learned that Gen. Kuropatkin's high position is regarded in high quarters as compromised. The losses on both sides have been enormous, more than 30,000 having been killed or wounded.

Both Lose Heavily.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 14.—Desperate fighting and heavy losses on both sides with varying success for the Russians, such is the summing up of the situation by Gen. Kuropatkin in a telegram filed October 13. There is no sign of the battle slackening. On the contrary, Gen. Kuropatkin telegraphs that he had ordered the army to resume the fight with unabated vigor to-day. Gen. Kuropatkin himself is in the thickest of the fighting, and Gen. Sakharoff, his chief-of-staff, is personally directing reconnoissances. The conflict has been most desperate at the center and on the west flank. The advance guards at those points had to be repeatedly reinforced, owing to the great pressure of the Japanese attacks. At nightfall on October 12 the Russian right was withdrawn from its main position; but one of the abandoned positions was retaken at the point of the bayonet during the night.

In the midst of the anxiety and suspense involved in the great fight south of Mukden comes also the first word in many days from the gallant defenders of Port Arthur. While Gen. Stoessel's report of the condition of affairs at Port Arthur is no later than October 7, it shows that the garrison at that time was in unimpaired spirits, making a heroic defense against a series of the most bitter assaults in all the history of sieges. The closeness of the fighting and the deadly character of the attacks and counter-attacks are shown by the fact that both sides are using hand grenades.

Unable to Hold Footing.

After a desperate assault the Japanese captured the important signal station hill, but were unable to hold the position in the face of the fire from the fortress. The repeated failure of the Japanese to hold a footing once gained in the circle of inner forts is received here with considerable satisfaction as indicating the skill with which the defenses of Port Arthur were arranged, the main line of forts supporting each other so as to render any one position almost certainly untenable even if temporarily captured by an enemy. But the reckless ferocity of the assaults by an overwhelming force of Japanese seems to make it certain that Port Arthur can only be held by an immense expenditure of ammunition; and it is becoming a serious question with the authorities how long even the great supply known to exist in the fortress can last in the face of the Japanese attacks.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 15.—A special dispatch from Chefoo reports that the commander of the Russian gunboat Giliak, in the harbor at Port Arthur, has been killed and that many sailors have been wounded. Possibly this refers to the reported wrecking of a Russian warship by Japanese land batteries.

Estate Given to Heirs.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 13.—The jury in the Corrington will case, in which the heirs sought to break the will, returned a verdict Wednesday morning, giving the estate to the heirs. The will of the deceased devoted his estate of $250,000 to the establishment of a university. The case was bitterly fought and lasted more than a week. Among the witnesses called upon to testify were Dr. W. R. Harper and Prof. Albion W. Small, of the University of Chicago. The case will be appealed to the supreme court.

Millionaire Commits Suicide.

Chicago, Oct. 14. — Edmund Burke, a retired shoe dealer and reputed to be a millionaire, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head at his home, 5 Tower place, Thursday. His body was found by his son, George L. Burke, with whom he lived. Mr. Burke was 67 years old, and is said to have suffered from nervous prostration for many years. He had been suffering greatly recently and it is believed he was temporarily insane on this account when he ended his life.

THE TREASURER REPORTS

INTERESTING FIGURES REGARDING NATION'S FINANCES.

A Deficit of $41,770,571 Is Shown Between the Receipts and Expenditures.

Washington, Oct. 15.—Ellis H. Roberts, treasurer of the United States, has submitted to Secretary Shaw the annual report on the transactions of the treasury during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1904.

The net ordinary revenues are shown to have been $540,631,749, a decrease of $19,764,925 as compared with 1903, and the net ordinary expenditures $582,402,321, an increase of $776,303,314. In the receipts the principal falling off was $23,205,017 in customs, while in the disbursements the important increases were $11,423.44 in commerce and labor, $60,788,580 in treasury proper and $20,338,067 for the navy. Unusual expenditures were $50,000,000 on account of the Panama canal and $4,600,000 loaned to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company, which latter has now been nearly all repaid. But for these, the recorded deficiency of $41,770,571 would have been changed to a surplus of $12,829,428.

The operations affecting the public debt exceeded those of the preceding year and amounted to $699,660,941 in receipts and $638,924,379 in disbursements. The aggregate receipts for the year were therefore $1,240,292,690, and the aggregate disbursements $1,221,326,701. For the first three months of the current fiscal year the revenues show a falling off of $6,516,373 and the expenditures an increase of $18,073,539.

The increase in the number of banks during the year was 395 and of these 262 deposited less than $100,000 each in bonds to secure circulation and 381 less than $500,000 each.

An addition of $118,793,148 was made during the year to the monetary stock of the country and another of $31,829,599 in the following quarter. Of the total increase $110,804,469 was in gold. The aggregate supply on October 1, exclusive of certificates, was estimated at $2,835,333,734, of which $2,562,149,489 was in circulation.

Since July 1, 1900, there has been a growth of $463,991,862 in the money in circulation, or an average of nearly $116,000,000. On October 1 the circulation reached the maximum of $31.16 for each person, and the proportion of gold to the whole was 44.03 per cent.

The national bank notes presented for redemption during the year amounted to $262,141,930, or 61.12 per cent. of the average outstanding. This is the highest record for any year of the 30 during which these notes have been redeemed by the treasurer.

An addition of $2,801,644 was made to the subsidiary silver coin in circulation, carrying the total up to $95,528,343. The disbursements of these coins for various purposes amounted to more than $29,900,000. The redemptions were $40,375,137, as against $40,959,244 in 1903.

Minor coins are not included in the general statements of circulation; yet a volume of no less than $38,149,519 is shown to have been coined and not remelted. An increase of $1,583,715 took place during the year, of which nearly $1,000,000 was in five cent nickel pieces and the remainder in bronze cents. The redemptions were $5,587,482.

Worn gold and subsidiary silver coins, the former of the face value of $1,473,391 and the latter of $2,828,384, were recoined. The loss was $11,347 on the gold and $172,280 on the silver. The good condition of the currency is shown by the fact that the treasury offices detected only $12,714 in nominal value of spurious issues.

TWELVE LIVES LOST.

Terrible Result of Wrecking of Schooner Wentworth Off Coast of Cape Cod.

Chatham, Mass., Oct. 15.—A small part of the forward section of the hull and a slanting foremast stand as mute reminders of the ocean tragedy enacted here Thursday night when the three-masted schooner Wentworth, of Moncton, N. B., struck on Chatham bar during a raging northerly gale, and all on board perished in the terrific seas. With the exception of the loss of the steamer Portland in November, 1898, the wreck of the Wentworth is the worst disaster that has occurred on the Cape Cod coast during the last decade.

Of the 12 persons who were on board the stranded vessel not one reached the shore alive, although two bodies were rescued from the surf, one of them that of a woman, believed to be the wife of the captain. With her three children she was accompanying her husband on a trip from Hillsboro, N. B., to Newark, N. J.

The Wentworth was bound from Hillsboro, N. B., to Newark, N. J., with a cargo of plaster rock. On board, so far as known, were the captain, his wife and three children and a crew of seven men, and all were lost.

If there is a citizine in the United States anywhere who has too much business and too much employment and longs for the stagnation that prevailed from 1893 to 1896 he can contribute to that end by voting the Democratic ticket this year

The voters of Clearwater county and the republican voters, in particular should remember, that the campaign for the election of a Clerk of court is to be decided November 8th. The preasent Clerk of court E. H. Reff seems to have given the best of satisfaction and is the nominee of the republican party for election, next Month. Give him your vote and continue him in office for four years more.

According to law, the fellow who wounds another felllow being while hunting this fall in the common mistake of "thinking him a deer," will be prosicuted for manslaughter. This is just and will result in a little more caution upon the part of hunters. An avenue for crime has been left wide open by this excuse and there is little doubt but that men have been sent to eternity by a bullet from the g n of some one who knew full well what he was shooting at.

Of course if our opponents are not sincier in their preposal to abolish the system of protective tariff, there is no use to argue the matter at all, save by pointing out again, that if on one great issue they do not mean What they say it is hardly ssfe to trust them on any other issue But if they are sincere in this matter, then their advent to power would mean domestic misfortune and misery as wide-spread and far reaching as that which we saw ten years ago. —Roosevelt's Letter of Acceptance.

Every citizine who votes for President in the coming election will also vote for a representative in Congress from this district We mention this, for the reason, that there was some of the true friends of Hon. H. Steenerson in this locality, who did not vote for him at the primary election, because, as they said, "he did not need it", While the national honor and the public welfare demand the election of Pesident Roosevelt, those favoring him should not fail to place their X opposit the name of H. Steenerson for member of Congress.

Sleep.

To sleep is to strain and purify our emotions, to deposit the mud of life, to calm the fever of the soul, to return into the bosom of material nature, thence to reissue, healed and strong. Sleep is a sort of innocence and purification. Blessed is he who gave it to the poor sons of man as a sure and faithful companion of life, our daily healer and consoler.—M. Amiel.

The best thing for any one to say who has nothing to say is to say nothing and stick to it.—Schoolmaster.

A STORY OF GEROME.

The Master Painter, the New Student and a Practical Joke.

A number of years ago a poverty stricken painter, since famous and prosperous, went to Paris from a country village and entered the studio of Gerome at the Ecole des Beaux Arts. The new student's first day chanced to be "criticism day," and the older students, finding themselves cheated out of their customary boisterous hazing by this circumstance, resolved to have their fun in an indirect fashion.

Accordingly they took the novice aside and impressed upon him in the most friendly and confidential way imaginable that he was under the obligation of giving a tip to the professor when he criticised his work. Incredulous at first, the callow youth let himself be convinced and promised to do the proper thing. His means were so small that he awaited his turn with an ill concealed anxiety which those in the plot relished keenly. When his turn came he convulsed the room by slipping a half franc piece into the professor's hand.

Gerome was too familiar with the practical jokes of the Beaux Arts not to comprehend the situation and had much ado to keep his countenance. He succeeded, however, and blurted out with the gruffness which he assumed so admirably:

"What does this mean? You'll do well to come to see me some fine morning and straighten this thing out."

The bewildered pupil interpreted the admonition literally and presented himself at Gerome's private studio two days later. Gerome received him like a father, led him on to confess his destitution and to unburden himself of his hopes and fears, gave him good counsel and restored to him his half franc piece in the form of a twenty franc gold piece.

THE MARQUIS PAID.

How the Famous Surgeon Velpean Treated a Free Patient.

The famous surgeon Velpeau was visited one day at his house during the consultation hour by a marquis renowned for his closeness. Velpeau informed the marquis that an operation was urgent and that the fee would amount to 4,000 francs. At this the marquis made a wry face and left. A fortnight later Dr. Velpeau, while making his rounds in the Hospital de la Cherite, had his attention attracted by a face that seemed familiar to him. In answer to his inquiry it was stated that the patient was a footman of a nobleman in the Faubourg St. Germain. The surgeon found that his case resembled in every particular the somewhat unusual one for which the marquis had consulted him a fortnight previously. He refrained, however, from making any comments.

Three weeks after the operation, when the patient was about to be discharged, Dr. Velpeau called him aside and exclaimed: "Monsieur, I am extremely flattered and pleased to have been able to cure you. There is, however, a small formality with which you will have to comply before I can sign your exeat—that is, you will have to sign a check for 1,000 francs in behalf of the public charity bureau of your metropolitan district." The patient's face became livid. "You can do what you like about it," continued the doctor, "but if you refuse all Paris will know tomorrow that the Marquis de D. adopted the disguise of a footman in order to secure free treatment at this hospital and to usurp the place which belongs by right to a pauper." Of course the marquis paid.

Cobweb Pills.

Andrew Wilson, the well known naturalist and writer, in commenting on Culpepper's "Complete Method," published in 1652, shows how this enabled a man to "cure himself, being sick, for threepence charge, with such things only as grow in England, they being most fit for English bodies." "John Wesley practiced music." Wilson continues. "His system was not strictly limited to vegetable simples. Wesley prescribed boiled carrots as an exclusive diet for a fortnight for the cure of asthma and recommended baldheaded people to wash their vacant spots with a decoction of boxwood. For bleeding from the lungs or stomach the juice of nettles is ordered and for an ague six pills of middling size of cobwebs."

Ivy and Dampness.

A physician tells the Washington Post it is a widespread but erroneous notion that the growth of ivy on the exterior walls of residences creates a damp habitation. He is satisfied a little reflection will convince any one of the fallacy of this proposition. The ivy instead of contributing to dampness has rather an opposite influence, since it must extract moisture from the brick or stone that it overruns. The dampness of these is what gives life to the plant, so that the interior of the house is rendered drier than it would be otherwise.

Frankness.

"Do you think a doctor ought to tell a patient exactly what is the matter with him?"

"Yes," answered the physician. "But he should use such terms as to prevent the possibility of the patient understanding a word of what he says." —Exchange.

Took the Profits.

"I remember Schemer was a great chap for thinking out plans for getting rich. I suppose now he's wealthier than any of his friends."

"Oh, no. His friends used the plans while he was dreaming over them."—Detroit Free Press.

WAGNER'S HOME.

How the Great Composer Came to Live In Baireuth.

How Wagner came to make Baireuth his home is a rather interesting story. He had long dreamed of possessing a theater where his compositions could be interpreted to suit his ideas, but had little hope that the dream would ever be fulfilled. When, however, in his period of greatest depression and loneliness he formed the friendship of the late king of Bavaria it seemed suddenly as if all things were possible to him. In 1867 his royal protector instructed the celebrated architect, Gottfried Semper, to prepare the plans for the theater, which was to be built at Munich. Through political and professional dissensions and jealousies the town council of Munich refused permission for the erection of the theater there. In 1871 Wagner visited Baireuth and, after taking counsel with the celebrated bankers, Messrs. Feustel and Gross, decided upon a site in that city. The municipality of the town, correctly estimating the financial advantages which would accrue, presented Wagner with two plots of land, one for the theater and the other for his own house. The latter was immediately built, and in 1872 Wagner removed his family from Triebchen, near Lucerne, to the new house, Wahnfried. The corner stone of the theater was laid on his sixtieth birthday, May 22, 1872. It was estimated that the theater would cost 300,000 thalers (about $250,000), and this sum was very largely raised by Wagner societies throughout the world. It was completed in 1876 and dedicated with the presentation of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" on Aug. 13 of that year. Since then it has been the Mecca of the lovers of Wagnerian music from all parts of the world.

TEETH AND SIGHT.

Decayed Molars Cause Disturbance of the Ocular Nerves.

"Many people who come to me to have their teeth attended to complain incidentally of failing eyesight, and when I tell them that bad teeth in nine cases out of ten are the cause few feel inclined to believe me," said a well known New York dentist.

"Bad sight is generally attributed to overstudy, debilitated constitution and a hundred and one other causes. But have you ever heard any one place the blame on the teeth? Bad teeth are the direct result of insufficient application of the toothbrush, and bad eyesight, resulting from the decayed molars exciting disturbances of the ocular nerves, is the next inevitable penalty. That is a fact which seems to be little known.

"The other day I extracted four decayed teeth of a young girl who was almost totally blind. Her pupils were dilated and insensible. A week after I had pulled her teeth her sight was practically restored. Two months previous to this cure the girl had been examined by an expert oculist, who, after putting her to various eye tests, designated the case as 'hysterical amblyopia,' and I guess that's about all the satisfaction the girl got. Judging by her condition when she came to me. In saying this do not think for a moment that I am in any way prejudiced against oculists. I merely cite the instance.

"In the course of a year I attend to the teeth of scores of people with impaired vision, and in every case where the teeth are drawn the sight is soon after either greatly improved or entirely restored."—New York Times.

Pickwicks In Livery.

The dignity of some fat coachmen in New York is very impressive. Their development is outlined distinctly by their coats. They have swelled steadily and persistently year after year, and every now and then the coats have been let out and the buttons moved to accommodate increasing inches of girth. A coachman's figure has a great deal to do with his success. The attempts of fat men to look lean sometimes verge on the humorous. They hold their heads high to escape the imputation of obesity and puff out their chests heroically. But with all their hauteur, pomposity and pretentious bearing they look only like very fat men in tight clothes, reminiscent of Pickwick in livery.—New York Press.

The Dead Man's Threat.

Returning home recently, a woman who had taken out a summons against her husband, a painter's laborer, on account of his ill treatment, saw by the light of the moon her husband standing, as she thought, behind the door ready to strike her. She ran away, but it was afterward discovered that the man was hanging by a rope from a ventilator over the door with his feet almost touching the floor. He was dead.—London Mail

Three Women Writers.

Among ladies distinguished for the beauty of their penmanship—or penwomanship—was Charlotte Bronte, who wrote a very small, very delicate and carefully finished hand. Mrs. Hemans wrote in a free, flowing style. Elizabeth Barrett Browning's manuscript was very neat and carefully punctuated, the writing being distinct and legible, though the letters were not well joined.

The Literal Truth.

Dunns—What do you mean by sending me word that you were not in? Debts—I didn't. I sent you word that I was out. Dunns—Well, and what did you mean by that? Debts—Exactly what I said. I am out of cash.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Duty, Then Pleasure.

Mr. Nasmyth, the inventor of the steam hammer, once said: "If I were to try to compress into one sentence the whole of the experience of an active and successful life and offer it to young men as a rule and certain recipe for success in any station, it would be comprised in this: 'Duty first; pleasure second.' From what I have seen of young men and their after progress I am satisfied that what is generally termed 'bad fortune,' 'ill luck' and 'misfortune' is in nine cases out of ten simply the result of inverting this simple maxim. My own experience convinces me that absence of success arises in the great majority of cases from want of self denial and want of common sense. The worst maxim of all maxims is, 'Pleasure first; work and duty second.'"

Literary Diseases.

Many occupations have diseases which are more or less incidental to them, and literature is not exempt. The two most prevalent literary maladies are writer's cramp and swelled head. The unfortunate thing about writer's cramp is that it is never cured. The unfortunate thing about swelled head is that it never kills.—Exchange.

Coal Man's Chief Worker.

Coal has become man's chief worker, and horse labor and human manual labor are slowly being pushed aside. In the great transformation it has been brain power that has triumphed over brute strength. Man first sought to shift his burden to the backs of the beasts of the field, and the horse became his patient friend and assistant, but now he seeks to harness the elemental forces of nature to do his bidding. The burden is thus lightened without cruelty to any living creature. Neither man nor beast has had his labors increased, but steadily decreased. —St. Nicholas.

How He Was Identified.

Josiah Quincy of Boston told with glee of how he was once identified by a laborer who was enlightening a friend. "That is Josiah Quincy," said the first laborer.

"An' who is Josiah Quincy?" demanded the other.

"Don't ye know who Josiah Quincy is?" demanded the first man. "I niver saw sich ignorance. Why, he's the grandson of the statue out there in the yard."

AN INSECT MENU.

Every Item Thereon Long Known and Esteemed by Epicures.

Here is a typical insect menu of which no one need be afraid to partake, since every item has been known and esteemed by insect eaters for generations past. It was served not long ago, according to Pearson's Weekly, at the table of a rich London epicure, who is also an enthusiastic advocate of an insectarian dietary:

Green Caterpillar Soup.
Fried Locust with Wood Louse Sauce.
Curried Cockchafers.
Wasp Grubs Baked in the Comb.
Stag Beetle Larvae on Toast.
Moths Baked in Batter.
Deviled Wireworms.
Grasshoppers au Gratin.

The green caterpillars that compose the soup feed entirely upon vegetables, and mostly upon particular vegetables most relished by man, such as cabbage and lettuce.

In appearance the soup itself is not unlike clear turtle, while its flavor is delicious.

The locusts, which constitute the second course, have, as every one is aware, been esteemed by gormands the world over and from the remotest antiquity. "Eat ye the locust after his kind" is the Biblical injunction, and we know that John the Baptist is recorded as having lived for some considerable time upon "locusts and wild honey."

There are of course many ways of preparing them. They can be fried after their legs and wings have been plucked off, which was, as a matter of fact, the process adopted in this particular instance, or they may be powdered and baked into cakes or curried or boiled, turning red, like lobsters, in the process.

The wood louse sauce if properly made with fresh butter, flour, milk, pepper and salt will be found fully equal to shrimp, which it much resembles in taste. Indeed the wood louse, although he lives on land, is first cousin to that much relished crustacean.

Cockchafers, curried or otherwise, are delicious if selected of a serviceable size and plumpness. So, too, are their grubs when full grown. They should then be at least two inches in length and fat in proportion and may be eaten uncooked, like oysters, or stewed in milk.

Perhaps, however, the most toothsome of all insect delicacies is that which comes forth on our "menu of the day," wasp grubs baked in the comb. These grubs have been fed by their parents on a saccharine fluid composed of fruit and vegetable juices and are simply tiny balls of sugary fat possessing a flavor as exquisite as it is unique. No one who has once tasted them will ever again be surprised at the preference shown by fish for this particular grub when used as a bait.

The stag beetle larva is of course identical with the cossus, which the old Roman epicures used to fatten for their table upon flour and wine. The sixth course should be served steaming hot, since there is no more appetizing odor than that emanating from a plump baked moth.

Deviled wireworms are eaten in the form of a paste, spread upon sippets of toasts, and taste not unlike anchovies when treated in similar fashion.

Stage Ice Cream.

An amusing "break" once occurred in a production of "Camille" at the old Walnut Street theater in Philadelphia.

In those days sea island cotton was stage ice cream, just as molasses and water was make believe wine—sherry or port, according to the proportion of molasses.

Armand and Camille were at table, where they had been discussing such viands as these, and their dialogue was making the finest sort of an impression on the crowded house. Enter a maid servant with candelabra of the wabbliest sort imaginable. The scene was so engrossing that the maid was hardly noticed by the audience, but when she had set down the candelabra between the unfortunate Camille and her lover and one candle toppled over and set the ice cream in a blaze the nervous strain upon the house was broken, and the entire audience burst into a roar of laughter that brought down the curtain.—Harper's Weekly.

Divorce In New Guinea.

There is no need of divorce courts in New Guinea. When a woman becomes weary of her husband she simply leaves him and goes back to her mother. When a husband tires of his wife he simply hits her over the head with a paddle, and if not killed outright she is certainly made to realize that she is no longer wanted. When a "divorced" woman marries again her former husband rallies all his friends and conducts a war dance in front of her new home. This ceremony, however, is not as ugly as it looks. Its purpose is not to kill anybody, but simply to satisfy the grass widow's honor.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplesness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

The Glory of the Great.

As the stars are the glory of the sky, so great men are the glory of their country, yea, of the whole earth. The hearts of great men are the stars of earth; and doubtless when one looks down from above our planet these hearts are seen to send forth a silvery light just like the stars of heaven.—Heinrich Heine.

Cold Tea?

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground, after the crowd had left, picked up 219 bottles ranging in capacity from a half pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

GOING TO STAY YOUNG.

Even Government Inspectors Couldn't Make Her Older Than She Looked.

A Brooklyn woman lately returned from Europe was describing to her husband who had remained at home her experiences with the customs inspectors who had taken her declaration in the cabin of the liner coming up the bay, relates the Brooklyn Eagle.

"When he asked me my age," she said, "I told him 30."

"But, my dear," exclaimed the husband, "you're over 30."

"I know it," she returned, "but do I look more?"

"No, you don't; that's a fact."

"Well," she concluded, triumphantly, convinced that mere man was squelched once more by the force of feminine logic, "until I look more than 30 I'm going to be 30, and I don't care for the old United States government and all its customs inspectors and declarations. They can't make me older than I look or want to be."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Drunken Man in Church.

Stepping down from the pulpit in the midst of his sermon, Rev. T. E. Cullen of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Minneapolis, startled his congregation by picking up a palpably intoxicated man from a front pew and carrying him tenderly to the front door and the sidewalk.

The man had staggered into the church during the service and planted himself in a front seat. In the middle of Father Cullen's sermon he was overcome with remorse, and began to moan very audibly about his sins.

The clergyman continued for a brief period, but when the penitent became too loud for endurance he descended from his pulpit and grasped the poor wretch and took him to the cool breezes

Not a word was spoken, and when his charge had been carefully laid on the ground, Father Cullen resumed his sermon at the point where he left off.

Lost in the Woods.

After spending four days and four nights in the woods, without food and sufficient clothing to protect his body from cold, D. J. McPhee, a former employee of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, arrived at Highland near midnight, in a state of utter collapse. He was without shoes or any covering for his feet which were badly cut and bruised and swollen to about twice their natural size.

McPhee said he started to walk from Two Harbors to Duluth, and became lost and wandered around in the woods and sleeping on the wet ground. He was taken care of by the authorities and with proper nourishment will recover.

Dangerous Compounds.

The state dairy and food commission has issued a proclamation, cautioning housekeepers to beware of canning compound which is found in canned fruit and vegetables.

This step was taken as the result of inquiries to the number of about fifty a day, which have been coming into the office asking the opinion of the department on the compound.

A careful analysis was made and this was followed by the proclamation that the compound was dangerous, containing only starch and borax, which is harmful to the stomach. The compound sells at a very high price, while it is lamentably cheap in itself.

Win Grand Prize.

Minnesota has won the grand Prize at the St. Louis exposition for its elementary educational exhibits and the gold medal for the secondary educational exhibit.

The facts were announced in a telegram received by Conde Hamlin, president of the Minnesota board of commissioners, and show the high standard of excellence which was reached in the Minnesota exhibit.

Since the beginning of the exposition Minnesota has captured all the highest awards every month in the dairy division, and has carried off many other high premiums for other exhibits.

Too Bad.

In response to emphatic demands from the northwest that the historic round tower at Fort Snelling be preserved, the government has plastered the structure three inches thick all over with ugly gray stucco. This preserves it effectually and also makes it look about as attractive and historic as an oil tank. The ivy which combined with the original rough limestone of the building to give it a romantic and venerable aspect, has been torn down, and hardwood floors, electric lights and plate-glass windows destroy the last vestige of age.

Successful Butter Tests.

The most successful butter test that has ever been held was announced by the state dairy and food commission the scoring on ninety-six tubs of butter resulting in an average of 94 per cent.

N. N. Engebretsen of Mansfield made the best score of 98, although he had a close second in Harry Spranger of Conger, whose butter was rated at 97⅛ per cent. C. A. Stovick's (of Emmons) tub was marked 97 per cent.

Heavy Grain Receipts.

It is estimated that grain to the amount of more than $1,000,000 was handled on the Minneapolis market in one day, and, for instance the day is said to be one of the biggest, if not the biggest in the history of the Minneapolis chamber.

The total number of cars involved was 1,400, as compared with 1,373 for Monday of week before. The grain receipts for the 3rd were as follows: Wheat, 1,094 cars; corn, 8; oats, 260; rye, 23; barley, 213, and flax, 90.

THIS WOMAN KNOWS

WHAT ONE OF THE SEX DISCOVERED TO HER GREAT JOY.

Mrs. De Long Finds that the Indescribable Pains of Rheumatism Can be Cured Through the Blood.

Mrs. E. M. DeLong, of No. 160 West Broadway, Council Bluffs, Iowa, found herself suddenly attacked by rheumatism in the winter of 1896. She gave the doctor a chance to help her, which he failed to improve, and then she did some thinking and experimenting of her own. She was so successful that she deems it her duty to tell the story of her escape from suffering:

"My brother-in-law," she says, "was enthusiastic on the subject of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a purifier of the blood, and when I was suffering extreme pains in the joints of my ankles, knees, hips, wrists and elbows, and the doctor was giving me no relief, I began to reflect that rheumatism is a disease of the blood and that, if Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are so good for the blood, they must be good for rheumatism and worth a trial.

"I was in bed half the time, suffering with pain that cannot be described to one who has never had the disease. It would concentrate sometimes in one set of joints. When it was in my feet I could not walk, when it was in my elbows and wrists I could not even draw the coverlets over my body. I had suffered in this way for weeks before I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Two weeks after I began with them I experienced relief and after I had taken six boxes I was entirely well. To make sure I continued to use them about two weeks longer and then stopped altogether. For several years I have had no reason to use them for myself, but I have recommended them to others as an excellent remedy."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills furnish the blood with all the elements that are needed to build up healthy tissue, strong muscles and nerves, capable of bearing the strain that nature puts upon them. They really make new blood and cure all diseases arising from disorders of the blood or nerves, such as sciatica, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance, nervous prostration, anæmia and all forms of weakness in either male or female. They are sold by all druggists.

SAFEST FOOD

In Any Time of Trouble Is Grape-Nuts

Food to rebuild the strength and that is pre digested must be selected when one is convalescent. At this time there is nothing so valuable as Grape-Nuts for the reason that this food is all nourishment and is also all digestible nourishment. A woman who used it says:

"Some time ago I was very ill with typhoid fever, so ill everyone thought I would die, even myself. It left me so weak I could not properly digest food of any kind and I also had much bowel trouble which left me a weak, helpless wreck.

"I needed nourishment as badly as anyone could, but none of the tonics helped me until I finally tried Grape-Nuts food morning and evening. This not only supplied food that I thought delicious as could be but it also made me perfectly well and strong again so I can do all my housework, sleep well, can eat anything without any trace of bowel trouble and for that reason alone Grape-Nuts food is worth its weight in gold." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Typhoid fever like some other diseases attacks the bowels and frequently sets up bleeding and makes them for months incapable of digesting the starches and therefore pre digested Grape-Nuts is invaluable for the well-known reason that in Grape-Nuts all the starches have been transformed into grape sugar. This means that the first stage of digestion has been mechanically accomplished in Grape-Nuts food at the factories and therefore anyone, no matter how weak the stomach, can handle it and grow strong, for all the nourishment is still there.

There's a sound reason and 10 days trial proves.

After walking 300 miles to enlist in the United States navy, Hannibal F. Lyman, a youth of 17 years, failed to pass the physical examination at the Minneapolis recruiting station, and is now in the city hospital. The tars at the station have informed him that when he comes out well he may be able to pass and accomplish his ambition to become a sailor.

In the annual report of the United States commissioner of pensions, which was received by L. L. Mahoen, former department commander of the G. A. R., it is shown that there are 16,618 pensioners in the state of Minnesota who received during the present year $2,203,799.93.

The biggest boy for his age in the state of Minnesota was in Bemidji the other day. His name is Wayne Lepley and he is the son of Philip Lepley, a substantial farmer who lives three miles southeast of the city. Wayne is ten years of age and he weighs 171½ pounds.

A prominent Southern lady, Mrs. Blanchard, of Nashville, Tenn., tells how she was cured of backache, dizziness, painful and irregular periods by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gratitude compels me to acknowledge the great merit of your Vegetable Compound. I have suffered for four years with irregular and painful menstruation, also dizziness, pains in the back and lower limbs, and fitful sleep. I dreaded the time to come which would only mean suffering to me.

"Better health is all I wanted, and cure if possible. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me health and happiness in a few short months. I feel like another person now. My aches and pains have left me. Life seems new and sweet to me, and everything seems pleasant and easy.

"Six bottles brought me health, and was worth more than months under the doctor's care, which really did not benefit me at all. I am satisfied there is no medicine so good for sick women as your Vegetable Compound, and I advocate it to my lady friends in need of medical help."—MRS. B. A. BLANCHARD, 422 Broad St., Nashville, Tenn.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

A Severe Case of Womb Trouble Cured in Philadelphia.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been cured of severe female troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was nearly ready to give up, but seeing your advertisement I purchased one bottle of your medicine, and it did me so much good that I purchased another, and the result was so satisfactory that I bought six more bottles, and am now feeling like a new woman. I shall never be without it. I hope that my testimonial will convince women that your Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine in the world for falling of the womb or any other female complaints."—MRS. MAY CODY, 2660 Birch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand. Her address is Lynn, Mass., her advice is free and cheerfully given to every ailing woman who asks for it.

NOTE.—The following article has been widely published and is one of the most remarkable illustrations of the value of careful marshalling and analysis of facts in presenting a subject to the public.

LEVELERS

The Mission of Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee.

The Creator made all things, we believe.

If so, He must have made these.

We know what He made food and water for, and air and sunshine, but why Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee?

They are here sure enough and each performing its work.

There must be some great plan behind it all; the thoughtful man seeks to understand something of that plan and thereby to judge these articles for their true worth.

Let us not say "bad" or "good" without taking testimony.

There are times and conditions when it certainly seems to the casual observer that these stimulant narcotics are real blessings.

Right there is the ambush that conceals a "killing" enemy.

One can slip into the habit of either whiskey, tobacco or coffee easy enough, but to "untangle" is often a fearful struggle.

It seems plain that there are circumstances when the narcotic effect of these poisons is for the moment beneficial, but the fearful argument against them is that seldom ever does one find a steady user of either whiskey, coffee or tobacco free from disease of some kind.

Certainly powerful elements in their effect on the human race.

It is a matter of daily history testified to by literally millions of people that Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee are smiling, promising, beguiling friends on the start, but always false as hell itself in the end. Once they get firm hold enough to show their strength, they insist upon governing and drive the victim steadily towards ill health in some form; if permitted to continue to rule, they will not let up until physical and mental ruin sets in.

A man under that spell (and "under the spell" is correct) of any one of these drugs frequently assures himself and his friends: "Why, I can leave off any time I want to. I did quit for a week just to show I c[illegible] a sure mark of the slave when one gets to that stage. He wiggled through a week fighting every day to break the spell, was finally whipped and began his slavery all over again.

The slave (Coffee slave as well as Tobacco and Whiskey) daily reviews his condition, sees perfectly plain the steady encroachments of disease, how the nerves get weaker day by day and demand the drug that seems to smile and offer relief for a few minutes and then leave the diseased condition plainer to view than ever and growing worse. Many times the Coffee slave realizes that he is between two fires. He feels bad if he leaves off and a little worse if he drinks and allows the effect to wear off.

So it goes on from day to day. Every night the struggling victim promises himself that he will break the habit and next day when he feels a little bad (as he is quite sure to) breaks, not the habit, but his own resolution. It is nearly always a tough fight, with disaster ahead sure if the habit wins.

There have been hundreds of thousands of people driven to their graves through disease brought on by coffee drinking alone, and it is quite certain that more human misery is caused by coffee and tobacco than by whiskey, for the two first are more widely used, and more hidden and insidious in the effect on nerves, heart and other vital organs, and are thus unsuspected until much of the dangerous work is done.

Now, Reader, what is your opinion as to the real use the Creator has for these things? Take a look at the question from this point of view.

There is a law of Nature and of Nature's God that things slowly evolve from lower planes to higher, a sturdy, steady and dignified advance toward more perfect things in both the Physical and Spiritual world. The ponderous tread of evolutionary development is fixed by the Infinite and will not be quickened out of natural law by any of man's methods.

Therefore we see many illustrations showing how nature checks too rapid advance. Illinois raises phenomenal crops of corn for two or three years. If she continued to do so every year her farmers would advance in wealth far beyond those of other sections or countries. So Nature interposes a bar every three or four years and brings on a "bad year."

Here we see the leveling influence at work.

A man is prosperous in his business for a number of years and grows rich. Then Nature sets the "leveling influence" at work on him. Some of his investments lose, he becomes luxurious and lazy. Perhaps it is whiskey, tobacco, coffee, women, gambling, or some other form. The intent and purpose is to level him. Keep him from evolving too far ahead of the masses.

A nation becomes prosperous and great like ancient Rome. If no leveling influence set in she would dominate the world perhaps for all time. But Dame Nature sets her army of "levelers" at work. Luxury, over-eating and drinking, licentiousness, waste and extravagance, indulgences of all kinds, then comes the wreck. Sure, Sure, Sure.

The law of the unit is the law of the mass. Man goes through the same process. Weakness (in childhood), gradual growth of strength, energy, thrift, probity, prosperity, wealth, comfort, ease, relaxation, self-indulgence, luxury, idleness, waste, debauchery, disease, and the wreck follows. The "levelers" are in the bushes along the pathway of every successful man and woman and they bag the majority.

Only now and then can a man stand out against these "levelers" and hold his fortune, fame and health to the end.

So the Creator has use for Whiskey, Tobacco and Coffee to level down the successful ones and those who show signs of being successful, and keep them back in the race, so that the great "field" (the masses) may not be left too far behind.

And yet we must admit that same all wise Creator has placed it in the power of man to stand upright, clothed in the armor of a clean cut steady mind and say unto himself, "I decline to exchange my birthright for a mess of potage."

"I will not deaden my senses, weaken my grip on affairs and keep myself cheap, common and behind in fortune and fame by drugging with whiskey, tobacco or coffee, life is too short. It is hard enough to win the good things, without any sort of handicap, so a man is certainly a 'fool trader' when he trades strength, health, money, and the good things that come with power, for the half-asleep condition of the 'drugger' with the certainty of sickness and disease ahead."

It is a matter each individual must decide for himself. He can be a leader and semi-god if he will, or he can go along through life a drugged clown, a cheap "hewer of wood or carrier of water."

Certain it is that while the Great Father of us all does not seem to "mind" if some of his children are foolish and stupid, he seems to select others (perhaps those he intends for some special work) and allows them to be threshed and castigated most fearfully by these "levelers."

If a man tries flirting with these levelers awhile, and gets a few slaps as a hint, he had better take the hint or a good solid blow will follow.

When a man tries to live upright, clean, thrifty, sober, and undrugged, manifesting as near as he knows what the Creator intends he should, happiness, health and peace seem to come to him. Does it pay?

This article was written to set people thinking, to rouse the "God within" for every highly organized man and woman has times when they feel a something calling from within for them to press to the front and "be about the Father's business," don't mistake it; the spark of the Infinite is there and it pays in every way, health, happiness, peace, and even worldly prosperity, to break off the habits and strip clean for the work cut out for us.

It has been the business of the writer to provide a practical and easy way for people to break away from the coffee habit and be assured of a return to health and all of the good things that brings, provided the abuse has not gone too far, and even then the cases where the body has been rebuilt on a basis of strength and health run into the thousands.

It is an easy and comfortable step to stop coffee instantly by having well-made Postum Food Coffee served rich and hot with good cream, for the color and flavor is there, but none of the caffeine or other nerve-destroying elements of ordinary coffee.

On the contrary the most powerful rebuilding elements furnished by Nature are in Postum and they quickly set about repairing the damage. Seldom is it more than 2 days after the change is made before the old stomach or bowel troubles or complaints of kidneys, heart, head or nerves show unmistakable evidence of getting better and ten days time changes things wonderfully.

Literally millions of brain-working Americans today use Postum, having found the value and common sense in the change.

Wrong Department.

A prominent physician tells this story at the expense of the modern craze for specialization in the medical profession. A poor woman went to a dispensary to ask for aid for her little son, who had had one of his fingers smashed. At the first room where she applied she was told by a curt attendant that the boy could not be treated there.

"Wrong place," he explained, "this is the eye and ear department."

"Vere is der thumb and finger department?" inquired the woman, simply.—Tit-Bits.

Only One King Abandoned.

"Doc," inquired the jocular invalid, "modern physicians have stopped bleeding their patients, haven't they?"

"They have practically discontinued the use of phlebotomy, if that's what you mean," replied the medical man, cautiously.—Houston Chronicle.

Don't forget to vote for the gross earning amendment. Call for the pink ballot.

With wheat over a dollar a bushell, it's rather a difficult matter to convince our farmers that there is anything wrong with our present adminestration.

The tour of Senator Knute Nelson through the northern part of the state will certainly add strength to the party. Knute can always give a voter a good reason why he should vote the republican ticket.

The Democratic National Committee has taken the precaution to issue a double set of campaign buttons—one gold for the east and one silver for the west-and so the party as well as its leader manages to face both ways.

Everybody cheerful. Everybody busy. Business booming. Crops selling for big prices. The nation at peace and on good terms with the whole world. What is the matter? Who want a change? No one but the Democratic office seeker.

The Minneapolis Journal is absolutely corect when it states that there is no danger to be apprehended from the Democrats in the senatoral contest. The Democrats will not have stength enough in the legislature to wad a gun.—Northfield News.

Grover Cleveland made his first and last campaign speach in New York Oct. 21st. He faild to say anything about the reign of the free soup house's during his last administration, but advised the people to vote the good old Democratic ticket, so they can have them open up for business next year

Louis Gonyea, the Republican candidate for Sheriff, of this County, is a man who has spent a large portion of his life in active Police duty, and as an official has had a large amount of experince with crime and Criminals, which makes him particulary adapted for this office. He is a man that the people can trust as being the right man in the right place, and should not fail to put their X opposit his name on November 8th.

Russia's Baltic Fleet may discover that they woke up the wrong man when they fired upon defenseless English sailors, who they mistook for Japanese torpedo boats, sinking them and murdering their crews. If Russian officers can't tell a hostile fleet from a fishing boat that is peacefuly fishing in the waters of their own country, they should be treated by the other powers, as a school boy, that it was not safe to trust with firearms.

PEARL FISHERIES.

How the Gems Are Obtained and Disposed of In Ceylon.

Since Keats told how "the Ceylon diver held his breath and went, all naked, to the hungry shark" many poets have exhausted the resources of their imagination in trying to describe the wonderful pearl fisheries of Ceylon. A few facts about them may be of interest, if only as an antidote to so much poetry.

The pearl fisheries are the property of the government of Ceylon. The divers are paid no wages, but receive one-third of the oysters they bring up, the remaining two-thirds being taken by a government agent and sold at public auction to speculative buyers, who gather from all parts of the orient. The pearl fishery usually lasts from thirty to forty days, but does not take place every year. If it did the oyster banks would soon be ruined. Sometimes several years are allowed to pass by without a fishery.

The diving is done after a primitive fashion, and the stories told about the marvelous length of time the divers will remain under water are quite unfounded. The record is 1 minute 49 seconds.

The auction, which lasts for several days, is one of the most interesting sights to be seen in Asia. The oysters are sold in lots of 1,000, and of course the purchaser is buying "a pig in a poke." There may be no pearls in any of his oysters or the first one he opens may give him a fortune. This risk appeals to the gambling spirit of the orient, and pretty nearly all the races from the Persian gulf to Japan are represented at the sale.

The prices paid usually start low on the first day. Then if the buyers have found pearls in fair quantities bidding is keen, and the prices jump skyward. One year they varied from 15s. 4d. per 1,000 on the first day to £12 17s. 10d. on the second.

It is remarkable that the fisheries are still so profitable, for there are historical records that they were worked there 300 years before the birth of Christ, and it is impossible to say how many years before that date.

PITH AND POINT.

You are not expected to accept all of your invitations.

Quit talking when it is plain the other fellow isn't listening.

We wish we could have as good a time as young people think they are having.

Our punishment used to hang on a nail behind the kitchen door. Where did yours used to hang?

No matter how rich or influential any man becomes, he can never be as independent as a hired girl.

All the old people seem to be looking for the impossible—young people with no foolishness.

Occasionally a man talks of "always waiting to do what's right," as if he thought he had a monopoly on the desire.—Atchison Globe.

Passing of the "Rube."

The "countryman" promises to become extinct in the United States. The "rube" is to follow the mastodon, the Indian and the buffalo. The generation that comes after us will find it hard to understand some of the present day jokes of the "b'gosh," "I swan" and "gol dern" kind. Already quite as many city folk buy gold bricks in the country as country folk do in the city. In fact, the biggest and brightest gold bricks find their market in town. A city bred man is about as apt to tangle himself up in a street car fender as Uncle Si is, and not all the people that blow out the gas come from the tall timber.—Washington Star.

Curious Ways of Crabs.

Certain species of crabs cover themselves with seaweed in order to deceive their foes. One crab was seen by the naturalist Eisig in 1878 to pluck off zoophytes, those plantlike animal colonies which grow on shells and stones, and to fix them on the spines and hairs of its shell. A still deeper romance of defensive tactics is to be found in the case of certain hermit crabs. They live in the castoff shells of whelks and crawl about, house on back. One claw is bigger than the other, and this is an adaptive feature, for when the crab retires into its house the bigger claw is tucked across the mouth of the shell to bar the way against a possible intruder. More curious still is the habit of one species which toils along with a sea anemone fixed to his shell, like Sindbad carrying the Old Man of the Sea. Great care is taken of this anemone. It is fed by the crab, and if the latter has to seek a new shell by reason of his growth he tenderly shifts his tenant off the old abode and places him on the new one.

Dean Hole's Wit.

On one occasion Dean Hole, the well known English clergyman, with Mrs. Hole, landed at Dover, much exhausted, after a rough crossing of the English channel. While waiting for the train the dean pored over the railway regulations. "Ah," he said, addressing the station inspector, "it's one consolation after such a crossing and this tiresome wait that we go back at half price." "I don't understand, sir," was the official's reply. "There is no special reduction." "Oh, yes, there is," said the dean. "I've just been reading all your notices, and you state that you take returned empties at much reduced rate." Once when the dean was playing whist for threepenny points he appeared to be very well provided with threepenny bits. "Ah," his opponent remarked, "have you the offertory with you?" "What, sir," the dean answered, "do you recognize your miserable contributions?"

THE TARIFF NATIONAL.

It Cannot Be Tinkered For Particular Sections.

New England business men are clamoring for reciprocity with Canada, because they think it would be cheaper to bring certain commodities across the border than to import them from more remote sections of our own country. But how would those sections of our own country view it? It may be for our selfish advantage to have cheaper coal and iron and lumber, but how about Pennsylvania and Alabama and Ohio and Michigan? In turn, it might be advantageous to them to import cotton goods from some other country, but should we in Fall River stand for a reduction in the tariff on manufactured cotton fabrics?

If the tariff is to be tinkered with for the benefit of this or that particular section of the country, it might be just as logical to do so for individual states and towns. The resultant hodge podge of tariff legislation, however can be better imagined than depicted. So long as tariffs are to be negotiated as national questions the many must give way in the interests of the few. If the iron and coal industry of Pennsylvania is worth protecting by national legislation, New England must defer her selfish desires for the benefit of Pennsylvania. If the cotton industry is to have the benefit of discriminating duties, other sections must yield for us. It is one of the striking instances of either the beauties of co-operation or the weaknesses of a system which makes the many suffer for the benefit of the few, just as you look at it.

And yet it is a necessary part of our system. If we adopted any system which provided for legislation of one kind for one state and of another for another state it would be but a short time when the very foundations of the government would be imperiled. If the nation is to stand a unit its commercial restrictions and regulations must be national. Any attempt at revision must rest on the most careful investigations as to the relative maximum of good to be derived and the minimum of hardship to result. To successfully keep the tariff constantly adjusted to changing conditions would entail constant study by the wisest of commissions. When the Democratic party can scarcely hold together its own factions, divided on the pettiest issues, we don't believe it is in any position, even remotely, to grapple with so complex a problem as tariff schedules.—Fall River Herald.

THE TARIFF NECESSARY.

Foreigners Are Overtaking Us In Methods of Production.

Free traders cannot deny that wages are much higher in this country than in Europe, but they seek to make it appear that an American workman can do so much more than an Englishman or German that a protective tariff is not needed. As a considerable share of the workmen in this country are foreigners or foreign born that assertion is clearly wrong.

The advantage which American workmen are supposed to possess in labor saving devices is passing away, if it has not passed already, in many industries. The exportation of labor saving machinery has long been a marked feature of the exports, and this machinery is extensively copied in Europe. With similar labor saving devices and longer hours, European workmen can meet American competition in almost any industry. That is why free trade would necessarily mean a reduction in wages to the European standard.

Quite Serious.

The Republican managers should lose no time in denying Governor Vardaman's assertion that President Roosevelt is a boll weevil. If the statement is allowed to go unrefuted the electoral vote of Mississippi may soon be hopelessly lost.—Kansas City Journal.

Easily Understood.

One has only to recall the state of American industry the last time the people gave the tariff rippers a chance and its condition ever since the rippers were driven out of power in disgrace to understand what tariff ripping really is in practice.—Buffalo News.

Our Coast Guards.

There are 9,000 burning lights and signals stretched along the American coasts, forming a perfect link, so that the navigator never need be beyond sight of one of the beacons. One thousand of these are located on the Atlantic coast, 1,500 are scattered along the rivers and inland waterways, 500 on the great lakes and 200 on the Pacific coast. Of the grand total, including lighthouses of different classes, buoys, beacons and danger signals, 3,000 are lighted, giving forth their warnings at nighttime. Of these a score or more throw a beam of 100,000 candle power. To maintain the lighthouse service a corps of over 4,000 men is constantly employed and a fleet of more than fifty vessels. No service in the world exceeds our own in completeness and efficiency.

"Pot Wallopers."

In certain districts of England formerly when an owner parted almost entirely with other rights to a house he would reserve the right of boiling his pot on the fire. This secured to him the right of voting and, what was of more importance, the position of being a freeholder. At Taunton, for example, the voters were called "pot wallopers" because they had the rights to "wallop," or boil, their pots at the fire in their freehold houses. Sometimes when a person parted with a long lease, but not with the freehold of a house, it was expressly stipulated that he should keep the right to boil his pot on the fire.

Had Them All.

A well known writer of humorous prose and verse was talking with a bibliomaniac when the latter said: "By the way, I am collecting first editions of American authors. I want to add your first book to my collection. Have you any copies of the first edition?"

To Tell if a Man Shaves Himself.

"I can tell in a minute simply by looking at a man whether he shaves himself or is shaved by a barber," said the wielder of the razor and brush. "No, it isn't a question of cleanliness nor yet a question of hacking the face. There is no reason why a man who is accustomed to shaving himself shouldn't make as clean a job of it as the average barber. And yet I can spot him every time. See that little lock of hair that grows down the side of the face just in front of the ear? Well, when a man is shaved by a barber, those two locks don't vary in length more than a sixteenth of an inch. The man who shaves himself, on the other hand, is invariably lopsided. He always begins to shave higher up on the left side of the face than on the right side, as a consequence of which one side of the face looks longer than the other. No, I don't know that I can explain this phenomenon. I only know that the condition exists."—Philadelphia Record.

Moon Phases.

The phases of the moon may be explained by the fact that the moon is a dark spherical body which shines only by reflected light. The new moon, popularly so called, is seen only when the sky is sufficiently dark to present a complete outline of the disk.—This illumination is due to the light which comes first from the sun, is reflected to the earth and back to the moon and thence to the earth. What we really see is the earth light shining on the moon.

Where Horsewhips Are Prohibited.

There is a notable law in force in most of the large Russian towns concerning horses that deserves special mention. Among the curious things that arrest the attention on arriving in Moscow is the entire absence of whips among drivers of cabs, carriages and all sorts of vehicles. There is a law prohibiting their use. There is not a single whip in use in Moscow. The excellent condition of the horses attests the benefit of this humane law. Nothing can exceed the beauty of the sleek and well groomed horses used in the carriages of Moscow.

A Monkey Detective.

A monkey brought a criminal to justice at Singapore some time ago. A native with a little boy, a bear and a monkey traveled lately through several villages in the Straits Settlements and made a good sum of money by his animals' tricks. One day he was found with his throat cut, the boy and the bear lying murdered close by, while the monkey had escaped up a tree. The bodies, with the monkey, were being taken to the police station when the monkey suddenly rushed at a man in the crowd, seized his leg and would not let go. The man seemed so alarmed and anxious to get away that the police became suspicious and searched him, with the result of finding part of the money belonging to the murdered native. The balance was discovered at his house.

The Distant Stars.

Speaking roughly, we have reason from the data so far available, to believe that the stars of the Milky Way are situated at a distance between 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 times the distance from the sun. At distances less than this it seems likely that the stars are distributed through space with some approach to uniformity. We may state as a general conclusion indicated by several methods of making the estimate that nearly all the stars which we can see with our telescopes are contained within a sphere not likely to be much more than 200,000,000 times the distance of the sun.

Granting that all the stars we can see are contained within this limit, may there not be any number of stars without the limit which are invisible only because they are too far away to be seen?—Simon Newcomb in Harper's Magazine.

Too Easy Success.

Success in literature early in a writer's career is often a serious misfortune, writes Julius Chambers in the Pittsburg Dispatch. I distinctly recall a conversation with Frank R. Stockton regarding "The Lady or the Tiger?" that illustrates this point. "Never was I so near starvation since I began to write as after the publication of 'The Lady or the Tiger?'" said Mr. Stockton. "For nearly two years everything I offered for sale was sent back with the curt explanation that it did not compare with that story. 'The Lady or the Tiger?' was made a standard by which everything was judged. Prior to its publication I had trouble in selling my matter, and that very story had been offered to every publisher in New York before it was accepted."

Women Speakers.

Women speak best when they retain their seats at table, the very fact that they are standing and facing their audiences having a tendency to give the bravest of women stage fright. Women orators have the advantage over men in knowing that their attire will have much to do with keeping the attention of their audience. A pretty woman in a pretty gown, a fan, a muff, a jewel, will hold the eyes of the women listeners even if they do not care much for the speech.—What to Eat.

An Apt Retort.

In the biography of Dr. Hawtrey, a famous English schoolmaster, there is a description of his unkempt appearance, with a comment which has been greatly quoted. It is said that he was scolding for being late at morning lessons a boy, who replied that he had no time to dress. "But I can dress in time." said the doctor. "Yes," replied the boy, "but I wash."

Easy Politics.

"When you first entered politics," said the young man who is looking for knowledge, "did you set out with the determination to win at any cost?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "I set out with the determination to win at as little expense as possible."—Washington Star.

Mistakes Men Make.

If it be true that a man who never makes mistakes never makes anything at all it is equally true that an orator who never says an indiscreet thing may be confidently reckoned on never to say anything at all worth hearing.—London World.

"Sightseer's Headache."

"Academy" or "sightseer's" headache is one of the numerous ills of modern civilization. According to observations of Mr. Simeon Snell, described in the London Hospital, there is reason to attribute it in part at least to strain on the muscles that turn the eyeballs upward. A lady who found no inconvenience in visiting the theater when she sat in the dress circle always suffered from severe headache when she sat in the orchestra, where she had to look up. The same effect is produced in picture galleries, especially in looking at pictures hung above the line. Cyclists who lean over the handle bars and turn their eyes up to look ahead have the same trouble, and so do compositors and people in many other occupations requiring continued use of the elevator muscles. The eyeballs move from side to side with less strain and discomfort than up and down.

Wakeful?

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

The Glory of the Great.

As the stars are the glory of the sky, so great men are the glory of their country, yea, of the whole earth. The hearts of great men are the stars of earth, and doubtless when one looks down from above our planet these hearts are seen to send forth a silvery light just like the stars of heaven.—Heinrich Heine.

Cold Tea!

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground, after the crowd had left, picked up 319 bottles ranging in capacity from a half pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

BLOOD WILL TELL

A THEORY SUPPORTED BY FRESH, CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE

A Recent Instance Proves That a Woman's Happiness is Largely Dependent on the State of Her Blood.

When the blood is disordered every organ of the body is affected unfavorably and fails to discharge its functions properly. In the case of every woman nature has made special provision for a periodical purification of the blood and so long as this occurs her health and spirits unfailingly reveal the beneficial results. So slight a cause as a cold or a nervous shock may produce a suppression of this vital function and until it is restored she is doomed to misery. The remedy that has proved most prompt and effective in all disorders peculiar to the female sex, is that which brought such great relief to Miss Mattie Griggs, of No. 807 Indiana street, Lawrence, Kansas, concerning which she speaks as follows:

"In the winter of 1902, from some unknown cause, there was a cessation of functions peculiar to my sex for a period of four months. I became very weak and could not get up stairs without help. I had nausea and pain and a constant headache. I was under the care of a physician for three months, but he did not succeed in curing me. Then a lady friend told me about the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which she had used in her family and she induced me to try them. It was in May when I first began to use them and in June I had fully recovered my health, and have since remained perfectly well."

In all cases of delayed development of young girls; in anæmia or weakness due to impoverished blood and showing itself in pallor, lack of ambition, despondency and nervousness; also in the great constitutional disturbances attending the period known as the change of life, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable for women, whose health is always closely dependent on the state of the blood. They are sold by all druggists. A booklet of valuable information, relating to the care of a woman's health at all important periods, and entitled "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free in a sealed envelope to any one who chooses to write for it to the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

VEST HAD SOME DOUBTS.

Thought the Legislature Might Repeal All the Smart Young Man Knew.

Senator Cockrell tells of the case of a young man who once appeared before the commission appointed in Missouri to examine applicants for admission to the bar of that state. It appears, says the New York Herald, that this youthful applicant, who had failed miserably in all that pertained to jurisprudence, civil law, case law, sumptuary law and due process of law, was finally asked by Mr. Vest, for a long time senator from Missouri, whether there remained any questions which the young man would like to have put to him.

"I regret to say," remarked Mr. Vest, "that you have failed to come up to the mark in the branches of law upon which we have examined you. But," added Mr. Vest, in a most kindly spirit, "we will question you further, if you so desire."

"Well, sir," responded the applicant, "I would suggest, if you please, that I be questioned on the statutes."

At this Mr. Vest smiled sadly. "My dear young man," added he, "I do not doubt that you're up on the statutes; but I do doubt that you will succeed in the law. Suppose you should have the utmost familiarity with the statutes, what's to prevent the legislature from repealing all you know?"

Both Got It.

The late sculptor, Bartholdi, was best known in this country by his statue of Liberty, the chief feature of which is its size. Its artistic merits were succinctly summed up by a distinguished foreigner when sailing into New York harbor. Pointing to the gigantic figure, he asked:

"Is that Liberty?"

"Yes," said a bystander.

"Then give me death," said the foreigner, who evidently knew his Patrick Henry.—Boston Herald.

It is asserted that civilization as it advances weakens man's sense of smell, but, perhaps, on the whole, people who live in congested districts ought to be thankful for this. Taken by and large nature generally knows her business pretty well.—Indianapolis News.

A VOICE FROM THE PULPIT.

Rev. Jacob D. Van Doren, of 57 Sixth street, Fond Du Lac, Wis., Presbyterian clergyman, says: "I had attacks of kidney disorders which kept me in the house for days at a time, unable to do anything. What I suffered can hardly be told. Complications set in, the particulars of which I will be pleased to give in a personal interview to any one who requires information. This I can conscientiously say, Doan's Kidney Pills caused a general improvement in my health. They brought great relief by lessening the pain and correcting the action of the kidney secretions."

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

The reason W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes are the greatest sellers in the world is because of their excellent style, easy fitting and superior wearing qualities. If I could show you the difference between the shoes made in my factory and those of other makes and the high-grade leathers used, you would understand why W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes cost more to make, why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater intrinsic value than any other $3.50 shoe on the market to-day, and why the sales for the year ending July 1, 1904, were $6,263,040.00.

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it—take no substitute. Sold by shoe dealers everywhere.

SUPERIOR IN FIT, COMFORT AND WEAR.

"I have worn W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes for the last twelve years with absolute satisfaction. I find them superior in fit, comfort and wear to others costing from $5.00 to $7.00."—B. S. McCUE, Dept. Coll., U. S. Int. Revenue, Richmond, Va.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Fall to Death.

Mr. and Mrs. Scammon of Minneapolis were fatally injured at 1 o'clock in the afternoon by falling to the pavement on the Minnesota street side of the Germania Insurance building in St. Paul, while giving a demonstration of a patent fire escape. Dying and still locked in each other's arms, they were hurried to St. Joseph's hospital in the police ambulance.

The fatal accident was caused by the breaking of a slender rope on which Mr. Scammon desended alone from the eighth floor of the building to the third. Mrs. Scammon, who had remained at a third story window obscure from the view of the crowd watching the experiment, was clasped in her husband's arms with the intention of giving an exhibition of a thrilling rescue.

As Mr. Scammon received his wife into his arms he nodded his head to her as if to ask her if everything was ready for continuance of the descent. The wife gave a quick movement of the head as a return answer, and as she did so the rope gave away at the 8th story window, where the sharp-edged stone had cut into it from the swaying of the weight on the lower end. The man and woman fell to the stone sidewalk sixty feet below.

More Medals.

The Minnesota exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis scored again. The judges got around to the agricultural exhibits, and this is what they gave the state:

Two grand prizes.

Eleven gold medals.

Eighteen silver medals.

Seventeen bronze medals.

The way the Minnesota exhibit at the fair is gathering in the medals it will be not only the bread and butter state, but every other kind of a state. The Minnesota educational exhibit captured nearly all the prizes going. The mining exhibit got its full share, and even the fruit exhibit took prizes away from the famous fruit states.

The Minnesota agricultural exhibit filled a space seventy feet square. A large butter model occupied the center, representing the state's dairy interests. Columns of corn surrounded the exhibit, and an entrance was an archway built of corn. The showing in corn was exceptionally strong.

Found Dead.

Death came to a well known young woman of Crookston very mysteriously. Miss Anna Nelson was the victim, and the peculiar circumstances have been investigated as thoroughly as possible.

She had spent several months in Beltrami, and returned to the city, repairing to the home of A. Vikjord. After spending a pleasant evening with the family, she retired to her room. She did not come down to breakfast, and she did not appear at dinner the family laughingly excused her by saying that she must have been very tired from her long journey. At supper time genuine alarm was felt, and taking down the door, they found her on the bed, cold in death, her face buried in a pillow and her hands clasped around her knees. At the autopsy it was decided that she passed away in a convulsion.

September Receipts.

September receipts of the state institutions, as turned into the state treasury by the board of control, amounted to $36,597.60. The amounts turned in by the various institutions were as follows:

State asylum, Anoka, $12.81; state asylum, Hastings, $195.86; state hospital, Fergus Falls, $10.28; state hospital, Rochester, $366.13; state hospital, St. Peter, $126.95; state school for the blind, Faribault, $51.73; state school for feeble minded, Faribault, $515.90; state training school, Red Wing, $137.82; state reformatory, St. Cloud, $1,099.04; state prison, Stillwater, $7,864.80; state normal school, Duluth, $284.58; state normal school, Mankato, $599.54; state normal school, Moorhead, $245; state normal school, St. Cloud, $351.40; state normal school, Winona, $392.00; state university, Minneapolis, $13,984.41.

Win Highest Prize.

Minnesota women make not only the best butter in the world, but they make all the best dairy butter in the world. For two Minnesota women have won all the prizes in the dairy butter contests at the Louisiana Purchase exposition. Both reside in Owatonna, and they are Mrs. S. M. Holmes, who won the three highest scores, and Mrs. J. H. McRostic, who won the fourth.

News Notes.

Macalester is defeated 16 to 0 by the Minneapolis central high school football team.

Rural free delivery route, No. 2, will be established Nov. 15 at Lake Park, Becker county; population 510 houses 102.

George Hechtl, fourteen years old, of St. Paul, is run down by an automobile and seriously injured.

The floors of the Winona normal school have fallen two inches away from the walls in some places.

A new club has been formed at the university called the Red Stripe club. The membership is small and select but will be increased as the season advances. The entire object of the club is to see the football games in which Minnesota plays away from home. The members have all promised to work or "bum" their way to the games and to pay nothing more than the admission to the grounds, and if possible not even that.

J. W. Rouane, a brakeman on the Duluth & Iron Range road, was struck by the pilot beam of a north-bound train and sustained serious injury.

PITY THE POOR HEATHEN.

Mr. Spinks Was Anxious to Get In His Contribution on Time.

Rev. Mr. Osborne, according to the Newark (N. J.) News, tells this story on one of his parishioners:

Company came to spend Sunday with the Spinks family. Nevertheless, and in spite of a pouring rain, Mr. Spinks prepared for church.

"Surely, you're not going," said Mrs. Spinks.

"Surely, I am," replied Mr. Spinks. "The pastor is booked for his annual missionary sermon and I wouldn't miss being there for anything."

"But it's storming dreadfully."

"Let it storm."

"And your guests—what will they think if you run away and leave them?"

"Let them think what they please. I'm going to church."

"I've never seen you so interested in missions before," said Mrs. Spinks.

"Just between you and me," returned Mr. Spinks, "I don't care a hang for missions. But the annual collection for the heathen will be taken to-day, and if I put a five-dollar bill in the plate it'll be all right. But if I stay away, the pastor will drop into my office some day this week and pull my leg for ten."

"Go, by all means," said his wife.

Business Announcement.

Among the oddities in the smoke room of Clyde Fitch's country house at North Coscob there is a notice of the dissolution of a partnership between two colored barbers. The notice, three feet square, is written in red ink on yellow paper. It occupies a corner between two crossed canoe paddles, and it reads:

"de Dissolution of co-parsnips heretofo resisting Betwix Me and moze Jones in de barber profession au heretofo disolved. pussons Who O must pay to de subscriber. Dem what de firm Os must call on Jones, es de firm is insolved."—N. Y. Sun.

Six Doctors Failed.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 24 (Special).—After suffering from Kidney Disease for three years; after taking treatment from six different doctors without getting relief, Mr. J. O. Laudeman, of this place, found not only relief but a speedy and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Speaking of his cure, Mr. Laudeman says:

"Yes, I suffered from Kidney Trouble for three years and tried six doctors to no good. Then I took just two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they not only cured my kidneys, but gave me better health in general. Of course I recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to others and I know a number now who are using them with good results."

Mr. Laudeman's case is not an exception. Thousands give similar experiences. For there never yet was a case of Kidney Trouble from Backache to Bright's Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills could not cure. They are the only remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease.

Another Strong Man.

The candidate was reading about Atlas supporting the world.

"Quite a stunt," he murmured, "quite a stunt, but still—"

Here he smiled pleasantly—

Officials and merchants do not serve in the army of Japan.

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstruation periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Painful Periods

are quickly and permanently overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The above letter is only one of hundreds of thousands which prove this statement to be a fact. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality,—if it is painful something is wrong. Don't take narcotics to deaden the pain, but remove the cause—perhaps it is caused by irregularity or womb displacements, or the development of a tumor. Whatever it is, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is guaranteed to cure it.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

Details of Another Case.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and carelessness is the cause of most of the sufferings of women. I believe that if we properly understood the laws of health we would all be well, but if the sick women only knew the truth about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they would be saved much suffering and would soon be cured.

"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me completely, and I am now enjoying the best of health, and am most grateful, and only too pleased to endorse such a great remedy."—MISS JENNIE L. EDWARDS, 604 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

The powder house of Abbott & Son, in the suburbs of Marshalltown, Ia., containing tons of powder and dynamite, was blown up, shaking the entire city and blowing out windows and doors for blocks.

S. F. Shew, cashier of the bank at Pleasanton, Ia., which made an assignment recently, has been held to the grand jury for responsibility for the bank's failure.

John C. Heddock, an independent coal mine owner and operator, testifying in New York before the interstate commerce commission in the case of Hearst against the coal carrying roads, said that as a result of discrimination, his company suffered a loss of more than $800,000 in less than eight years.

The triennial general convention of the Episcopal church, which has been in session in Boston since October 5, was ended with a public service in Trinity church. The next convention will be held in Richmond, Va., in 1907.

In a fight with three tramps, Frank Seils, station agent for the Burlington road at Nebraska City Junction, Ia., killed one of his assailants, and was himself slain.

During the absence from home of the parents, three small children of Jesse Evans, a well-to-do farmer living near Coralea, Okla., were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the house.

The long drought in Texas has been broken by heavy rains.

Henry Ehlert, a farmer, was killed, and John Tundeen, an engineer, had both legs broken by the explosion of a threshing engine on the farm of J. H. Hancar near McHenry, N. D.

The Occidental & Oriental steamship Doric has arrived in San Francisco from the orient, bringing 2,747 tons of cargo, the principal items being silks and teas, the value of the first being $1,900,000. The vessel also carried specie to the value of $500,000.

President Roosevelt directed the appointment of Mrs. James Longstreet to be postmistress at Gainesville, Ga. Mrs. Longstreet is the widow of Gen. James Longstreet.

An airship, the invention of Capt. Baldwin, of San Francisco, made an unannounced flight over St. Louis and the world's fair, maneuvering under complete control above the cheering crowds for an hour, crossed the Mississippi river and alighted successfully ten miles from the starting point.

T. J. Chase, treasurer of Meiggs county, O., who said he was robbed of $14,500 on September 9 last, has been indicted for embezzling that amount.

Peter Casteel, aged 22, and his brother, aged 21, committed suicide near Athens, Tenn., by lying down on the track in front of a train, clasped in each other's embrace.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has placed an order for 6,200 cars, 6,000 of which are to replace damaged and worn-out cars on the lines east and west of Pittsburg.

Henry Schwabacher, prominent for many years as a distiller, and one of the wealthiest men in central Illinois, died in Peoria, Ill., aged 75.

Frank J. Marshall, of New York, won the championship of the United States in the chess tournament at St. Louis.

J. Francisco, a cigarmaker of Bloomington, Ill., and four tramps were killed in the wreck of a Wabash freight train at Sadorus, Ill., after having been put off the train three times.

Ed Geers, the veteran driver and trainer, was thrown from a sulky at Billings park, Memphis, Tenn. One leg was broken.

John Severius, a barber of Lewiston, Ill., died at Carthage, Ia., after drinking a quart of bay rum.

The richest cargo ever carried by a steamer on the great lakes passed down the Detroit river on the steamer Northern King. The vessel's load, composed exclusively of copper ingots and slabs, is valued at $850,000.

Dan Patch, with a runner in front, paced a mile at Billings park, Memphis, Tenn., in 1:56 flat, the fastest mile ever paced by a harness horse.

Alexander Kiss, a one-armed, one-legged and one-eyed Hungarian, was hanged at the jail in Newton, N. J., for the murder of his wife by shooting in their home at Franklin, N. J., on August 6 last.

Workmen tearing down a bluff on the Missouri river front in Kansas City, Mo., came upon the skull of a mastodon with seven-foot tusks.

Cornelius Van Cott, postmaster of New York city, died suddenly of heart disease, following a sharp attack of acute nervous indigestion.

William McAvoy, an old-time actor, died at his home in Roxbury, Mass., at the age of 67 years. For several years he played under Edwin Booth.

Thursday was the anniversary of President Roosevelt's birth. He was 46 years old. Throughout the day he was in receipt of messages of congratulation from friends in all parts of the country. He also received many personal callers.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Alden, about 65 years of age, were killed by a Detroit, Toledo & Milwaukee train at Battle Creek, Mich. Their buggy was struck on a railroad crossing.

T. J. Chase, indicted at Pomeroy, O., on the charge of embezzling $14,500 of county funds, furnished $10,000 bond and was released from jail.

Joseph Martin and John Glenn, of Chicago, were killed at Thebes, Ill., by falling 100 feet while at work on an Illinois Central railroad bridge.

A Burlington passenger train struck an oil wagon which was crossing a street in Phillips, Neb. The oil was thrown over the engine and cars, catching fire. The fireman, C. E. Lazear, of Grand Island, was burned to death.

The stock firm of J. Walter Labaree & Co. has closed its offices in New York. The assets probably are between $6,000 and $7,000, with liabilities of $123,000. Labaree & Co. had 70 branch offices, extending all the way from Toronto, Canada, to New Orleans.

James N. Tyner, accused by President Roosevelt of complicity in the postal frauds, issued a scathing letter, questioning the president's good faith.

One man was killed and two badly burned in a fire panic in a Chicago concert hall. The asbestos curtain failed to work, as in the Iroquois horror.

Henry L. Joyce has been appointed receiver for the Knickerbocker Steamboat company, owners of the steamer General Slocum, which burned last summer.

The New York subway system was formally opened. Fully 125,000 persons, it is estimated, crowded the trains, which were given enthusiastic greetings by other thousands gathered at the various stations. The subway cost $35,000,000, and required the services of 10,000 men for four years in its construction. The total length of track laid is 305,000 feet, of which 245,000 feet are under ground.

Mrs. Rae Krauss, on trial in Hartford City, Ind., for the murder of her stepdaughter, Crystal Krauss, confessed and was sent to prison for life.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

The president has accepted the resignation of James F. Cooper, associate justice of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands. Judge Cooper resigns on account of advancing years.

Edward M. Morgan, assistant postmaster in the New York city post office, has been named as the temporary successor of Postmaster Cornelius Van Cott.

Judge Parker's programme and speaking itinerary until election day have been completed. He will speak in three states, New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

The state of Nevada has filed a claim against the United States in the United States court of claims for $470,414 advanced in aid of the federal government during the civil war.

FOREIGN.

Dutch troops have captured Baoehatoe, in Achi, after sharp fighting. The Achinese, the dispatch says, lost 196 killed, and the Dutch captured 20 guns, and had three killed and 11 wounded.

Viceroy Alexieff has published an imperial decree appointing Gen. Kuropatkin commander-in-chief of all the land forces in the east and retaining Alexieff in the post of viceroy.

Field Marshal Oyama reports that the Japanese total casualties were 15,879 officers and men at the battle of Shakha river.

The attack of the Russian Baltic fleet on the British fishing boats was deliberate, according to a dispatch from a correspondent of the London Times in Hull.

Message of the czar to King Edward, expressing regret for the action of the Baltic fleet, allays British ire to some extent, but the crisis is not ended. Russia has been unable to get a report from the commander of the Baltic fleet on the North sea tragedy. The British protest has been received in St. Petersburg and is vigorous in its tone.

Russia and France both decline to accept President Roosevelt's invitation to another peace conference at The Hague. Germany favors the conference.

Russia and Great Britain have been brought to a deadlock by the report of Admiral Rojestvensky, justifying his firing upon the trawlers at Hull on the ground that he was attacked by torpedo boats. The time limit on the British demand for a promise of punishment expired without any answer from Russia beyond an expression that such a pledge cannot be given under pressure.

Rojestvensky arrived at Vigo, Spain, with part of the Baltic fleet. He declared he thought he was attacked by Japanese torpedo boats in the North sea, and that was why the fleet opened fire. He said no fishermen were seen.

Indications point to heavy exports of gold from this country to Paris and Berlin before the year's end. One estimate places the amount at not less than $20,000,000. The new Russian loan is believed to be the basis of the probable outflow.

The Japanese have advanced to the village of Jerdegan, which they captured after a long fight.

A treaty of extradition has been concluded between Belgium and Cuba.

LATER.

Japanese section hands on the Northern Pacific railroad in Montana have been summoned to return to Japan.

Former Governor George R. Nash dropped dead in his bathroom at Columbus, O.

Mrs. Charles W. Cornwell, of Detroit, Mich., was asphyxiated by a defective coal stove.

The steamer Mainlander sank in Puget Sound. No lives were lost.

America will take Persia to task for the murder of an American missionary.

Wm. Peddicord, of Parry, Ia., killed his wife with a club and then shot himself.

An explosion occurred in the mine at Terolo, Colo., and between 40 and 60 miners were killed. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

Betting in New York is six to one on Roosevelt.

Near Prairie du Chien, Wis., masked highwaymen held up Willis Ellis and robbed him of $3,200 in gold.

Three land buyers were held up by a masked woman n[illegible] Auburn, Wis. After searching th[illegible] pockets and taking nothing, she le[illegible]m go.

It's reported that [illegible] opened a desperate general attack on the eastern forts of the Kee-kwan group north of Port Arthur, the morning of Oct. 26, and silenced the Russian batteries. A shell exploded the Russian magazines.

It is announced from London that the crisis threatened in the relations of Great Britain and Russia, because of the North sea incident, has been averted and a satisfactory settlement reached. A proposition to refer the matter to a mixed court of inquiry has been accepted, and the inquiry will be held at The Hague, under the rules of The Hague convention. The appointment arbitrators will be discussed between Ambassador Benckendorff and Lord Lansdowne.

John D. Hernan says transportation tax is too heavy and a burden on the public.

Former Senator Schaumann urges Finns to organize against Russian oppression.

Captain A. T. Mahan, of the U. S. navy, may be called to umpire the trouble between Russia and England.

The Russian losses at Shak-he were 800 officers and 45,000 men.

Nursing his dolls like a little child, James Welsh, of Ansonia, Conn., a dwarf 3 feet 3 inches tall, died at the age of 43 years. He practically was a child all his life.

The little town of Corinth, Ky., is almost wiped out by fire.

A San Francisco man is making an airship for use of Japanese in battle.

Fire destroys much timber near Belvidere, N. J.

Thomas Juarez, 18 years old, is stung to death by hornets near Victoria, Texas. He was gathering pecans and disturbed the nest.

Business reverses led Charles Peterson of Anoka, Minn., to shoot himself through the head, causing fatal injuries.

Comparative quiet prevails at the scene of operations in Manchuria, the combatants apparently being satisfied with their successes in minor engagements; but the weather having again become warm and fine, the belief is general that an advance by the Russians will shortly begin.

A westbound Wisconsin Central passenger train jumped the track near Downing, Wis., and six passengers were severely hurt and a score of others were bruised.

It is now said that the Russian squadron fired on its own torpedo boats and thinking them Japanese.

Takahira, the Japanese minister is operated upon for appendicitis.

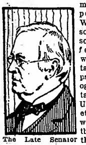
ABOUT THE SENATE

MANY DISTINGUISHED MEN ARE ON ITS ROLLS.

STATESMEN GROWING AGED

Possibility That Younger Blood May Be Brought In to Succeed the Veterans—The Genial Chauncy May Retire.



The Late Senator Hoar.

Washington.—The late Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, left many pleasant memories of his personality in Washington, and some that are not so pleasant to a few bureaucrats whose self-importance could not permit them to recognize the importance even of a United States senator. In his quiet way, Mr. Hoar was the means on more than one occasion of bringing some of these little office holders down to their proper level. Only a little over a year ago, the senator, having business at the navy department, called on a bureau chief of the pompous, indifferent kind. This chief did not raise his head when the senator entered, or respond to the latter's pleasant "good-morning." He went on with his writing, and about ten minutes afterwards raised his head and found the senator seated at an opposite desk engaged in writing.

Simulating surprise, he nonchalantly greeted Mr. Hoar with "How are you senator? Can I do anything for you?"

"No, sir; I only dropped in to write a few letters," replied the senator, in his mildest tone. Then, pressing a button, [illegible] summoned a messenger and sent his card to Secretary Moody. In about ten seconds the secretary came rushing out with hands outstretched, exclaiming:

"Why, the top of the morning to you, senator. You are just the man I want to see." He ushered the senator into his office, where they had more than an hour's conference.

After the senator left, the bureau chief was summoned, and when he came out of Mr. Moody's office he looked like the proverbial "30 cents."

Senator Hoar and Mr. Moody were good friends, although there was great disparity in their ages, and it was Mr. Hoar's expressed wish before he died that the young attorney general should succeed him in the senate. He had always exercised a fatherly care over Mr. Moody from the time the latter entered the house of representatives.

The Veteran Senators.

Senator Hawley.

Senator Hoar's death will make a break in the circle of veteran and venerable statesmen who have long controlled affairs in the upper house of congress. On the 4th of next March two more republicans, approaching Senator Hoar in point of age, will leave that body. Senator Joseph R. Hawley, now almost 78 years of age, will not be a candidate for reelection. On the 4th of March he will have completed four terms of six years each in the senate, besides three terms in the house of representatives. He has been in feeble health for several years, and has not appeared in his seat in the present congress.

The other senator is William Morris Stewart, of Nevada, who is in his seventy-eighth year. His first appearance in the senate antedates that of any other member, as he took his seat February 1, 1865, 40 years ago next February. His service has not been continuous, however, as he was out from 1875 to 1887. There is no probability of his reelection, and he has accepted that as inevitable, and will retire from public life next March. He is a man of unusual vigor for his advanced age, and is as straight to-day as he was when he went to California in 1850, among the first of the argonauts. He is called "Santa Claus" by the pages of the senate on account of his long white beard, which gives him a benevolent and venerable appearance.

Younger men will succeed all three of these senators, and add to the "colts," as the newer and younger element in the senate is termed. The changes, however, will not affect the management of affairs in the senate, as that will still remain in the hands of the older men, who for years have controlled legislation in that body. Senators Aldrich, of Rhode Island; Allison, of Iowa; Platt, of Connecticut; Proctor, of Vermont; Gallinger, of New Hampshire; Foraker, of Ohio; Spooner, of Wisconsin; Burrows, of Michigan, and Lodge, of Massachusetts, will still hold the reins on the majority side and decide its policies.

Possible Senate Changes.

William J. Bryan.

There is a determined effort to make further changes in the senate on the part of democrats, and while it will not mean the displacing of the venerable element, if accomplished, it will bring in younger blood. One of the most interesting of these contests is that of William Jennings Bryan, who is making an effort to come to the senate from Nebraska. His great prominence in the political world excites much interest in his fight for the senate. He is well known in Washington, where he served two terms in congress in the early 90's. At that time he was in the zenith of his powers as an orator, and all his old colleagues have pleasant memories of his eloquence on the floor of the house. Republicans as well as democrats like to hear him talk for the music in his voice, his choice diction and earnest manner. If a democrat should come from Nebraska, there are many who hope it will be Bryan, as his voice in the senate ought to contribute to the interest, if not "gaiety," of that body.

Another noted democrat is making an equally strong fight to break in the senate from Indiana. This is "Smiling Tom" Taggart, the genial democratic national chairman. Mr. Taggart would be a comparatively young man for senatorial honors, but not nearly so young in years as the eloquent and forceful Beveridge, one of the present senators from that state, whose term expires next March, and whom Taggart would like to succeed. A great many would consider it a distinct loss to have the impetuous and fiery orator Beveridge left out of the senate, as he is now a full-fledged leader, and one of the readiest extemporaneous debaters in that body. Mr. Taggart and his friends, however, are doing their level best to secure a legislature that will elect a democrat in place of Beveridge, and they hope that democrat will be the national chairman himself. Curiously enough, they have an idea that Mr. Fairbanks will be elected vice president, and that will make another vacancy from Indiana, which they hope to fill. They believe that the Indiana legislature can be made democratic despite the success of the republican national ticket.

Mr. John T. McGraw, of West Virginia, is making strenuous efforts to elect a democratic legislature in that state, which, in turn, will elect him to succeed the present republican senator, Nathan B. Scott, whose term expires next March.

Depew May Retire.

Senator Depew.

There is a sad rumor that Senator Chauncey M. Depew may be retired from public life next March and a new man from New York be elected to succeed him. There has been a good deal of fun poked at Senator Depew on account of his international reputation as a joker and a humorous after dinner speaker. He came to Washington bearing the Bowery appellation of "Chauncey de Peach." He has kept up his reputation as a charming after dinner speaker, but he has also proven that his merits lie a great deal deeper. He has demonstrated distinct ability on the floor of the senate, and some of the most eloquent addresses and sound arguments made on the great questions that have arisen in the past six years were delivered by him.

Mr. Depew is an unusually well preserved and handsome man. To some extent he has been one of the "show pieces" of the senate. In spite of his 70 years he carries himself with an almost youthful jauntiness, and his dress is always perfect. When about to make a speech in the senate he dresses for the occasion in the regulation black frock coat, buttoned in statesmanlike style about his form. He is the cynosure of all eyes in the gallery. It is not personal pulchritude alone that attracts attention to him, for the meat of his speeches commands a hearing and a careful consideration.

The man talked of as his successor from New York is ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, one of the most famous epigramists in America. He has a close second in Representative Hamilton, of Michigan in the house, but Black's epigrams have a wider circulation and were especially notable in his speech at the republican Chicago convention last June, when he placed President Roosevelt's name in nomination. Mr. Black is a tall, thin gentleman, wears glasses and has rather long hair that clusters about his forehead and face, giving him the appearance of a typical poet.

Promising Future.

"Did your son have any trouble in passing the examination for college?"

"Trouble? Not the least. They told him if he could keep up his present style of interference he'd be on the regular team in less than two weeks."—Chicago Tribune.

MINNESOTA HAPPENINGS.

Short Items Showing What has Happened Throughout Confines of North Star State.

Two Harbors has a murder mystery.

The old school house at Bagley was sold at auction.

Macalester college will erect two modern buildings.

Nov. 21 is named as Twin City day at the St. Louis fair.

The school teachers of Minnesota are more efficient than ever.

The dairymen vote to put up the price of milk 20 per cent.

The Minnesota dairy industry increased 25 per cent during the year.

The state receives more than $300,000 for timber sold at the annual auction.

Nels Orvik was shot and killed in Henry Castle's saloon at Beltrami by the bartender.

The insurance companies put up rates 15 per cent on risks in the business district of St. Paul.

The museum at Hamline university receives one of the finest groups of orang-outangs in the country.

In two 25-minute halves Minnesota broke all football records by defeating Grinnell by a score of 146 to 0.

The state school of agriculture will have a fine list of entries at the international live stock exposition.

S. J. Rasmusson of Starbuck has purchased a controling interest in the First National bank of Perham.

Harold Young, a bystander, is stabbed in the back during a street fight between colored men in St. Paul.

The enrollment of the St. Paul schools increased 1,205 during October. The total enrollment at present is 38,238.

The Phythian lodges of the state are divided into twenty-nine districts and a deputy named to take charge of each division.

William Dieball, late of Hebron, has bought the St. Peter Hotel in Hastings, and will change its name to the Phoenix.

State Auditor Iverson received from Warden Wolfer $25,000 as the October receipts on the state prison twine and hemp account.

Nelson Bros.' independent elevator and grain house burned at Milroy, at a loss of $10,000. Insurance on grain, $3,000; on house, $2,500.

Figures compiled by the state auditor show that there are in Minnesota 110,282 dogs which are valued at $574,332 or a fraction over $5 each.

Thomas Judge of Minneapolis was caught between the bumpers of two freight cars in the Northern Pacific yards and died from his injuries.

Ninety applications for mineral leases on state land were made to the state auditor. The pieces applied for were leased last year, and had expired.

A tramp by the name of Tom Hayes died in a hack which had been summoned to the hospital at Crookston. His relatives live in Ogdensburg, N. Y.

The chain gang at Duluth is on a strike for better food and more of it. Seven of the men declare they will not do another stroke of work until they are properly fed.

Although St. Paul's attitude on the question is still to be learned, it is probable that Nov. 21 will be choosen as "Twin City Day" at the Louisana Purchase exposition.

Gov. Van Sant has issued a requisition for the return of Joseph Guilmette, wanted in Polk county for the Mongenon murder. He is under arrest at Woonsocket, R. I.

Andrew Olson, a miner at the Spruce mine at Eveleth, was killed by a blast in a drift. The dynamite failed to explode within a reasonable time and Olson went to investigate.

The Montrose public school burned. The fire caught on the roof and was caused by overheating the flues, which run from the furnace in the basement to the second story of the building.

Warrants to the amount of $802,242 for school aid were drawn by the state auditor, of which Ramsey county schools will receive $60,130. This is the regular October apportionment.

The House of Hope Presbyterian church at St. Paul will enlarge its missionary work in foreign fields. Dr. Boyle announced that the church will endow a ward in some foreign hospital for the care of the sick heathens.

Karl R. Kipp, former bookkeeper of the First National bank at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was arrested in St. Paul, charged with embezzlement. Kipp had been stopping at a hotel in the guise of a traveling salesman.

A verdict of $1 damages for the loss of a human life was the award of the jury in the case of C. M. Rawitzer, as administrator of the estate of Harry Jacobs, against the St. Paul City Railway company in the district court.

When the jailor at the central station in Duluth went to the cell in which Mary Coleman was confined on a charge of drunkeness, to give her some supper, he found her dead on the cot.

When the practial question of drainage came up in the state senate Mr. Johnson the democratic candidate for governor, voted against the bill to furthur the movement, and thereby went on record against the the policy which he now claims is not an issue.—Plummer Pioneer.

Republicans should vote the ticket straight this year, and solid for the party It is presidental year and any Republican that is in favor of the realection of Roosevelt should not go a little farther down the line and place his X opposit the name of a candidate for office who is doing all he can to defeat him.

With Bob Dunn in the governor's chair the friends of drainage in the northern part of the state can be sure of a friend. While Johnson is on record as being opposed to any appropriations being made for drainage, would undoubtly veto any bill that was passed by the legislature for that purpose. Which one are you owners of swamp land going to vote for?

A Vegetable With a Pedigree.

Of all the plants used for food there is none which has been so long known or has had, so to say, so distinguished a lineage as asparagus. Its record, in fact, reaches back to almost the commencement of authentic history, as it is mentioned by the comic poet Cratinus, who died about 425 B. C., and was a contemporary of though slightly older than Aristophanes.

Among the Romans also the tasty vegetable was held in high esteem. Cato the elder—not the gentleman who was of opinion that Plato reasoned well, but his great-grandfather, who insisted upon the destruction of Carthage and who was born 243 B. C.—wrote a work, which is still extant, "De Re Rustica," and in it he treats at length of the virtues and proper cultivation of asparagus. Pliny also in his "Natural History" (about 60 A. D.) has much to say on the subject. "Of all the productions of your garden," he feelingly observes, "your chief care will be your asparagus," and he devotes several chapters and parts of chapters to its many beneficent qualities and the best modes of raising it.—Chambers' Journal.

Indian Mothers and Dolls.

When an Indian girl dies her mother often substitutes a doll for her lost little one. She fills the empty cradle with feathers, arranged in the form of the child, and carries this around with her wherever she goes, talking to it and caressing it as she would her loving child.

If she does not do this she ties in a tight bundle the toys, clothes and amulets which belonged to her little one and, fastening this to the cradle board, carries it as she had formerly done her child. The Ojibways call these "unlucky dolls," because they represent the dead.

The reason the Indian mother carries her "doll" in this pathetic way is because she thinks that the little dead child is too small to find its way to paradise. By substituting the doll it will help along until the dead baby has grown large enough to make its way to the spirit land alone. At least this is what the sad Indian mother believes.

Flirting in Japan.

A Japanese woman flirts—as far as she knows the meaning of the word—with her sleeves and fan and not with her eyes and smiles. By the different movements of the ends of her kimono sleeves she manages to convey to her admirers all sorts of unspoken messages, and by the opening and shutting of her fan to the right or to the left she can reject or accept the most weighty offers. Her code signalling with her sleeves and fan is quite an item of her social education.

Easy to Be an Expert Pistol Shot.

"Any man with ordinary nerve can become a fair shot with a revolver from the saddle with a few weeks' practice. I believe in a short time a man can become sufficiently expert to make 95 out of 100 shots," said a regular army officer.

"You see, it is all in learning when to shoot. The aiming is a small part of pistol and revolver shooting. The aiming is just like pointing your finger. A man can naturally point his finger at an object accurately. If he can do that he can aim a gun by simply throwing it out in the same way. The reason an unpracticed marksman is no marksman at all is that he stops to aim and gets off the mark or becomes unsteady in pulling the trigger. He must learn his gun, so he will know just the exact instant when it goes off, just how much and how long a pull he must make to snap the trigger. When he learns so that it is second nature to shoot just as he points the gun, he will hit any ordinary mark within reasonable range."—Des Moines Register and Leader.

"Poor Pay, Good Tenant."

"It isn't always the tenant who pays his rent on the first of the month who is most desirable," said a householder the other day. "Your prompt tenant is likely to hold you his debtor for that virtue and feel perfectly free to ask for numerous improvements. My best paying property is leased to a man who is always two or three months behind in his rent. Of course I lose the interest on my money for that time, but that is all. In the three years in which he has rented of me he has not had the nerve to ask me even to paper a room for him. I haven't done it, either. In one instance he had some plumbing done at his own expense when he should have charged it to me. I am constantly afraid that he will get prosperous some day and want to pay me on time. Just as sure as he does I will have to spend several hundred dollars on the house."—New York Tribune.

Artificial Eyes.

The trade in artificial eyes is extensive not only from the number of people who need them, but also from the fact that they only last for about a year in consequence of the action of the secretions of the eyes upon the enamel.

The process of manufacture involves eight distinct operations, which call into play considerable artistic ability and patient skill, and for this female workers seem specially adapted.

The enamel has first to be fused, then the globe is blown and colored, after which the shaping, tempering and polishing have to be attended to. The minutest details, even to the coral veins on the scleratic coat and the broken colored iris, are so faithfully reproduced that the imitation can rarely be detected save in times of great emotion.—London Standard.

A Titled Dandy.

At the court of St. James in 1773 Lord Villiers appeared, according to a writer of that day, in a coat of "pale purple velvet, turned up with lemon color" and "embroidered all over with S's of pearl as big as peas, and in all the spaces little medallions in beaten gold—real solid—in various figures of Cupids and the like." In that day the dandies ranged and powdered and carried nosegays as big as cabbages. Walpole records an occasion in the house of commons when, to hasten the adjournment, some of the exquisites voted against their own opinions, "because the house was very hot and the young members thought it would melt their rouge and wither their nosegays."

Origin of Some Names.

Many religious sects are now known by what were originally nicknames. These epithets, coined in derision, have "appreciated" and grown into honorable epithets. "Methodism" was a nickname originally, an undergraduate nickname, applied to Wesley and his friends because they lived by rule and method. Every one knows what it is now. So people use the word "Quaker" without any contemptuous connotation, and even a word like "ranter" was on the way toward respectability when ranting seemed to fall out of fashion.

Safe From Burglars.

"I'm so glad the boys of your company gave you that handsome revolver," said the militia captain's wife. "We need have no fear now of the burglars infesting this neighborhood."

"That's what!" replied the gallant captain. "I've got it locked up in the office safe where they can't get at it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Three Famous Smokers.

Fabulous things have been said about Grant's smoking propensities. My word of honor that Grant's cigars, over which he meditated and about which so much has been senselessly published, were cast aside, but never relighted, while Sherman and Meade would make the air blue like volcanoes.—National Magazine.

Her Two Degrees.

"It was only two years ago that Mrs. Weddin took her B. A. at college, wasn't it?"

"Yes. Why?"

"She has just taken a higher degree—MA in the school of life."—Philadelphia Press.

Willing to Demonstrate.

"Do you really believe that the proof of the pudding is in the eating?"

"Sure! Give me the pudding and I'll prove it."—San Antonio Express.

Her Intended.

Agnes — Why does Clara speak of George as her intended? Are they engaged? Alice — No, but she intends they shall be.

A Jungle Battle

Desperate Encounter of a Sportsman With an Asiatic Buffalo.

Knocked Down by a Wounded Bull, He Was Repeatedly Gored by the Infuriated Animal.

Mr. W. T. Hornaday, the director of the Bronx zoo, in New York, has had a large experience of hand to hand combats with wild animals, but if he is asked to tell the story of one of them he prefers to recount what happened to an Anglo-Indian friend of his, Mr. Rhodes Morgan, when the latter tracked down a wounded buffalo in an Indian jungle.

"I wasn't there," says Mr. Hornaday, "but this is the story as Morgan tells it: The buffalo suddenly charged out from a dense mass of undergrowth with a snort like a steam engine and sent Morgan flying through the air. He fell on his back and was immediately struck a blow on the ribs that made them spring inward as the top of a hencoop would with a heavy man sitting on it.

THE BUFFALO CHARGED MORGAN.

"Morgan says that he felt his last hour had come. The brute struck him with his head again and again, sometimes on his breast, back and legs, sometimes on his sides, while sometimes he butted the ground only in his blind fury. The blood poured in a stream from the animal's open mouth, and the hot breath from his nostrils sent that blood in sprays all over the prostrate man.

"Morgan, though conscious, lay quite still. Presently the buffalo stopped and looked at him. Imagining that he was dead, he slowly walked away a short distance and stood eying the body malevolently.

"There was a big tree stump near by, and Morgan thought if he could only drag himself behind it he might be safe. He began to draw himself along, bit by bit, but in an instant the bull rushed at him again and struck him several fearful blows.

"'All this time,' said Morgan in telling me the story, 'no fewer than six native beaters had been calmly looking on, and I heard one of them say: "Dear me! The buffalo is killing the sahib!" And another said, "Send for the shikaree to shoot it." (The shikaree was two miles away, with my tiffin basket and spare gun!) But presently one of the beaters uttered the most diabolical yell I ever heard in my life. The bull instantly threw up his head, turned tail and dashed away in terror. If only that beater had yelled at first I might have been saved from being pounded almost to a jelly.'

"You would have thought that Morgan had had enough of that bull, but his bulldog English spirit was aroused. He waited for the shikaree to arrive with the extra gun, his own having been broken by the infuriated animal, and then followed the trail, his natives supporting him.

"They found the buffalo standing in open ground near by, wounded and weak from exhaustion. Morgan fired twice, but he could hardly hold the gun, and the shots went wild. The buffalo fled some distance and then stood still again on another piece of open ground. Morgan got within twenty yards of him, when he charged and received the contents of two barrels. He fell, and a bullet through the heart finished him.

"Morgan sank helplessly to the ground beside the carcass. His natives carried him home, and he was confined to his bed for a fortnight, his whole body being black and blue."

Trade Secret.

Customer—Are these five or six wedding rings all you have in stock? Why, you've got a whole tray full of engagement rings! Jeweler—Yes, sir, and it will take that whole tray full of engagement rings to work off those five or six wedding rings.—Chicago Tribune.

French Soldiers' Handkerchiefs.

The cotton handkerchiefs provided for French soldiers have printed upon them a number of sanitary precepts to be observed on the march and during a campaign and are further decorated with medallions containing pictures of officers of all grades, the different uniforms being so distinctly portrayed that a French private can tell at a glance to what grade any officer he may see belongs.

Well She Might.

An old German historian of Tubingen describes an attack by the French in 1674 during which eighteen persons were killed by the exploding of a mine. A soldier's wife was thrown the distance of an acre. She was not hurt, the chronicler adds quaintly, "but she scolded terribly and was in a very bad humor."

Animal Arithmetic.

A certain Mr. Tinlotleff was the happy possessor of a dog that was able to calculate with precision. One day, having been fed a large platter of chicken bones, he found twenty-six left over when his appetite was satisfied. These he proceeded to bury carefully in different places, as all dogs do. The day following he dug up and ate twenty-five, went to sleep, suddenly woke up, apparently with something on his mind, hesitated a moment, dug up his twenty-sixth bone, ate it and went to sleep, this time soundly.

Birds count well. They usually know the number of eggs they are hatching. Here is something odd: A half tamed nightingale was always given three beetles as a sort of dessert. If he received but two he waited impatiently for the third. If three were given to him he ate them up and flew away without waiting for more.—Revue Rose.

Remedy For Burns.

For a dry burn, carron oil. Shake the bottle, saturate a soft cloth with the mixture and lay over the burn. Then cover closely with cotton batting or flannel to keep out every bit of air and secure the whole with a light bandage. Burns may also be treated by a thick application of any bland oil, vaseline, sweet oil, castor oil, butter, cold cream or any fat not rancid, excepting glycerin, which is too irritating. Soft powders may also be dusted on—flour, laundry or corn starch. For a burn by scald or steam apply a dressing of saturated soda

Remember, that next Tuesday is election day, and it is your duty to go to election and vote.

FOR SALE—Several head of cattle. Will trade for lumber, or any kind of grain.

Careful of Her Nose.

Many interesting stories of courtiers and favorites at the old French court are found in the memoirs of the Marquise de Crequy. She says that on certain solemn occasions kings of France wore ermine linings to their robes, but ermine became scarce, and she writes: "The anointing of Louis XV. was retarded some years for want of this fur for the court mantles, and at the coronation of Louis XIV. they actually used catskin." Superbly elegant was the Duchesse de la Ferte, who generally was carried around under a canopy. The marquise goes into ecstasies concerning this particular duchesse, whose eyes "had the most disdainful expression I ever saw, though they had a slight cast in them." But her supreme elegance can be appreciated when it is known "she never blew her nose for fear of spoiling her Greek contour, but dabbed it at intervals with a small square of cambric."

Benjamin Franklin's Wife.

A very unflattering description of Benjamin Franklin's wife is taken from the diary of Daniel Fisher, who was Franklin's secretary for a short time. "She sat on the floor at a neighbor's. She assumed the airs of extraordinary freedom and great humility, lamented heavily the misfortunes of those who are unhappily infected with a too tender or benevolent disposition, said she believed all the world claimed the privilege of troubling her pappy—so she usually calls Mr. Franklin—with their calamities and distress, giving us a general history of many such wretches and their impertinent applications." He mentions "the turbulence and jealousy and pride of her disposition" and the violence of her invectives. Pointing to Franklin's son one day, she exclaimed, "There goes the greatest villain upon earth!"

Books In Series.

While it is certainly a pretty sight to see a long row of books in a neat and uniform binding, like soldiers on parade, there is a distinct loss of individuality. As you glance over your books upon their shelves it is pleasant to recognize them from their outward dress. They keep themselves better in mind if each one is not exactly like its neighbors. You are even likely to forget what you have if you cannot know them from across the room.

We often go to the bookcase looking simply for "something to read," and then it is an advantage to know each book at the first glance. Of course this does not apply so strongly to the works of a single author. These belong in a uniform, and you know what is among them.—St. Nicholas.

The world is satisfied with words. Few appreciate the things beneath.—Pascal

ODD BURIAL CUSTOMS.

Some Strange Observances Among Australian Tribes.

There are some queer customs observed by the native Australians, their modes of disposing of the dead being noticeable and varied. When a mother loses a favorite child she carries the dead body about with her in a box or casing of bark until decomposition forces her to dispose of it either by burial or fire.

In the case of some prominent person of the tribe dying his nearest relatives cut off his hands and keep them as sacred remembrances, only parting with them after the odor from the dead members has become unendurable. Then they are thrown into a stream, hidden in a hollow tree or burned.

Women are held in such contempt among the Australian tribes that often they receive no burial at all, and it is a rare thing to see one mourned for by family and friends. But at the funeral of a man or boy the lamentations are loud and long, the female mourners being the most demonstrative.

With some of the tribes the practice of throwing the bodies of the dead over the branches of trees and leaving them for nature to dispose of is observed.

SLUGGISH RIVERS.

The Volga Falls Only About Three Inches Per Mile.

Considering its length the Volga is the most sluggish river. In 2,325 miles it falls only 665 feet, or slightly over three inches per mile, while at one point about the middle of its course the bed is fully fifty feet below sea level. Thus all the water to that height above the bottom must be still, save when stirred by floods.

The Volga also is singular among great rivers in having no mountainous course. It rises among marshes and lakes, and is so sluggish even then that a dam has been erected, which makes it navigable from its sixty-fifth mile onward. Almost within the historic period it must have been an offshoot from the Caspian, which then stretched far into the interior of Russia, drying up into a series of river connected lakes. The Volga has taken the place of these, along with many of their characteristics, including a general sluggishness.

The Scheldt is proverbially a slow river and is practically lost in a maze of canals, but its fall from source to sea is about fourteen inches in its total length of 249 miles.

Soldier's Sense of Humor.

A high naval official, now dead, often cited as an example of ghastly humor an incident that befell a young woman during the civil war.

"She was good and kind," he would say, "and during the war she visited the hospitals daily, distributing fruits and flowers and tracts.

"One morning on her rounds a young soldier, immediately after she had passed him, set up a loud laugh.

"She turned and looked at him in surprise. His seemed a pitiful case. Nothing of him but his face was visible on the little white bed, and this young face was sadly thin and pale. Nevertheless he laughed like one possessed. His mirth resounded through the gruesome room.

"The visitor returned to him.

"'Will you tell me what amuses you?' she said.

"'Why, ma'am,' said he, 'here you have given me a tract on the sin of dancing when I've got both legs shot off.'"—Baltimore Herald.

"Sightseer's Headache."

"Academy" or "sightseer's" headache is one of the numerous ills of modern civilization. According to observations of Mr. Simeon Snell, described in the London Hospital, there is reason to attribute it in part at least to strain on the muscles that turn the eyeballs upward. A lady who found no inconvenience in visiting the theater when she sat in the dress circle always suffered from severe headache when she sat in the orchestra, where she had to look up. The same effect is produced in picture galleries, especially in looking at pictures hung above the line. Cyclists who lean over the handle bars and turn their eyes up to look ahead have the same trouble, and so do compositors and people in many other occupations requiring continued use of the elevator muscles. The eyeballs move from side to side with less strain and discomfort than up and down.

Wakeful?

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

The Glory of the Great.

As the stars are the glory of the sky, so great men are the glory of their country, yea, of the whole earth. The hearts of great men are the stars of earth; and doubtless when one looks down from above our planet these hearts are seen to send forth a silvery light just like the stars of heaven.—Heinrich Heine.

Cold Tea?

MRS. WEBER TELLS HOW SHE WAS HELPED WHEN DOCTORS FAILED.

She Let Her Trouble Become Chronic Because She Hesitated to Consult Her Physician—Particulars of a Remarkable Case.

The natural reluctance which every woman feels to consult a physician regarding troubles peculiar to her sex caused Mrs. C. Weber, of No. 7085 South Front street, Columbus, Ohio, to let her illness run on until it became chronic, and even the excellent doctor whom she employed could give her no relief that was permanent. She gives the following details of an interesting case:

"I felt the trouble a long time before I went to our doctor, perhaps a year or more. When I did consult him he told me I had female trouble. I felt sharp pains through my stomach and could not walk across the room without suffering agonies which I cannot describe. My head ached so that it fairly thumped and at times it seemed that I would go crazy. My stomach became so weak that it would retain only the lightest food. Week after week I took the doctor's medicine, but I continued to feel worse and worse. On several occasions I was confined to my bed for a week at a time. My weight decreased to 102 pounds and I seemed a confirmed invalid.

"One day I read of a case similar to mine that had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and, although I did not have much confidence, I began taking the pills, having already discontinued my doctor's treatment. While I was taking the second box I began to feel a little better and the improvement continued until I was cured. In a few months I had recovered my health and strength and weighed 132 pounds. I owe everything to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

No discovery of modern times has proved such a blessing to women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore the strength and health in the exhausted patient when every effort of the physician proves unavailing. These pills are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had from all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

NOTES ABOUT WOMEN.

Colorado and Wyoming have women filling the office of state superintendent of public instruction.

In Boston, where women vote on school questions, there is a seat for every child and full time instruction.

Colorado has elected ten women to her state legislature since 1895. Idaho has had three women in the house of representatives, and Utah one woman in the senate and three in the house.

When a member of the Colorado legislature, Miss Evangeline Heartz secured the passage of the "Frog-Blocking Bill" for the protection of railroad employes. For this she was rewarded with a card engrossed with "The Thanks of 5,000 Railroad Men."

Miss Ella Meredith, of Colorado, in reply to the question whether women in her state neglected their homes to seek for political offices, said: "They do not any more than they neglect their homes to seek office in club or church societies. Sometimes they take office to earn bread for those dependent upon them. More women neglect their homes and children to play cards and attend social functions than to do political work."

The earl of Halsbury has completed the ninth anniversary of his third appointment as lord chancellor. He is nearly 80 years of age.

Sir Hugh Gilzean-Reid has accepted an invitation to conduct the journalists' parliament at St. Louis this year. He was a personal friend of the late Queen Victoria and was knighted in 1893.

The German emperor speaks several languages fluently and he is displeased because so little attention is paid to modern languages in German high schools. He thinks that Russian and even Chinese and Japanese should be taught in the upper classes.

Princess Henry of Battenberg has considerable skill in the almost obsolete art of illuminating. Among Queen Victoria's favorite volumes were a copy of Thomas a Kempis' "Imitation" and a superb autograph album, both of which were illuminated by her daughter.

The empress of Russia is a strong believer in female suffrage, women's clubs, the higher education of women and in her right to enter any and all professions. She holds that almost all of the great reforms of the world have been brought about by women, and that they are just becoming conscious of their power and possibilities.

The duchess of Marlborough, formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt, has gained the reputation of being the most reckless of all England's automobile drivers. Her chauffeur has, in the past year, been before some English magistrate any number of times, but she will employ no chauffeur, she recently declared, who will not drive at a high rate of speed.

ODDITIES FROM ABROAD.

Disapproving of a certain tax, the inhabitants of Herrera, Spain, seized the collector and hanged him.

At a recent concert in Warsaw, the hall was suddenly invaded by spiders, which, attracted by the sound of a violin, came from cracks and crannies in the building. The other lovers of music left.

A Russian news correspondent in Manchuria telegraphed to his wife on the anniversary of the wedding day: "Dearest Maria, I kiss you devotedly." It was duly delivered after the censor had marked it: "Allowed. Senior Lieutenant B—."

What the Baby Needed.

"I suffered from nervousness and headache until one day about a year ago it suddenly occurred to me what a great coffee drinker I was and I thought may be this might have something to do with my trouble, so I shifted to tea for awhile but was not better, if anything worse.

"At that time I had a baby four months old that we had to feed on the bottle, until an old lady friend told me to try Postum Food Coffee. Three months ago I commenced using Postum, leaving off the tea and coffee, and not only have my headaches and nervous troubles entirely disappeared but since then I have been giving plenty of nurse for my baby and have a large, healthy child now.

"I have no desire to drink anything but Postum and know it has benefited my children, and I hope all who have children will try Postum and find out for themselves what a really wonderful food drink it is." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Both tea and coffee contain quantities of a poisonous drug called Caffeine that directly affects the heart, kidneys, stomach and nerves. Postum is made from cereals only, scientifically blended to get the coffee flavor. Ten days trial of Postum in place of tea or coffee will show a health secret worth more than a gold mine. There's a reason.

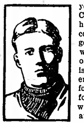
SPORTS AND ATHLETICS



Arthur Curtis.

The most interesting announcement issued from the Wisconsin football camp at Madison this year is that Arthur Curtis is serving his last year of coach for the Badgers and that he will quit at the end of the season. It is said that the veteran star tackle of former Wisconsin football teams has wearied of the game and its troubles in an effort to duplicate the work of Phil King and bring out a championship Cardinal team. It is known that there has been trouble in the Wisconsin camp, due largely to a friction between Coaches Curtis and Cochems, the former halfback and end, brother of the Cochems who first made the name famous in Badger football circles and who afterward went east to try for one of the big teams as a line man. Apparently the entire fault lies with the authorities, who appointed Cochems to coach the backs, giving him the impression that as a coach he was Curtis' equal in the management of the team. This has apparently hurt Wisconsin and Curtis, too. There cannot be two masters of one team without bitter, team-destroying friction, the critics argue. So the alumni system has not been given a fair test and the opponents of the system and men favoring the securing of another eastern coach are again active. Curtis has not been given credit for the work he has done in Wisconsin. In inner Badger circles the talk was that he was a splendid man to develop a team. On the field he was not as yet the general who knew what to tell his team between halves in the effort to turn the tide. This was due more than anything else, it is thought, to inexperience and a little worry at his first big venture. Another season and this would have passed off. Naturally following Phil King, older players would criticise and make the work awkward. The advent of a rival in the coaching circles only complicated the problem for the young coach and tied his hands in a way that is regretted by friends of the Badgers. It was believed that Cochems had the better mind for directing play after Curtis had developed his team. Curtis developed a strong team last year. There was a drive to the work of his backs that was wearing and eventually irresistible. That Wisconsin was not a championship team was due to the fact that it was not well balanced all over—it lacked, for instance, a punt catcher—an up-to-date backfield man, finished in every detail, with a love of the back-field excitement which enables him to handle punts, make his tackles, run back the kicks, dodge ends and so on. With such a man in the back field Curtis' last year's team, with its usual Badger fighting spirit, it is thought, would have been invincible. With all the internal friction, coaches like Yost of Michigan and Williams of Minnesota anticipate a fierce struggle with Wisconsin this season.

Robert Holcomb.

The automobile season for 1904 is practically ended, as few events of any importance remain to be contested. The last track race of importance in the north was the Brighton Beach meet on October 22. Road record-breaking trials seem to be over with for the season. Although several ambitious aspirants for honors in this line have announced their intention of going after the Chicago-New York record recently established by Bert Holcomb, of Chicago, up to the time of this writing no attempt has been made, and they have evidently decided to postpone their trials. Holcomb's mark of 58 hours and 45 minutes for a 1,000 mile journey with a 30-35 horsepower machine marks the best road performance ever credited to any machine in America and establishes a record which will be hard to reduce. Any reductions which are made in the future will probably be counted minutes, not hours. The great Vanderbilt cup race is over and was a success. America made a better showing than many expected. A French car was first, a German machine second, and Herbert Lytle drove his small powered car into third position. Not only the cars counted in the big road race, but the quality of the drivers as well, and as the first man to finish, Heath, was an American, it comes pretty close to being an even break. According to all reports, the big race was well managed from start to finish. Even with all the precautions which were taken, however, it is a miracle that no spectators were killed, as people lined the entire 30 miles of the circuit, many times overrunning the road and only giving way at the approach of some machine.

E. R. Thomas has received from Europe his new specially built 90 horsepower racing car, which, according to report, is the fastest automobile in the world. In a trial over a good stretch of unfrequented road on Long Island, with Edward Hawley at the wheel, it held the speedometer down to a 100 mile an hour pace. The car's first public appearance was at the Brighton Beach track's automobile meet, when it was to be sent against the existing world's track records, held by Kiser, Basle, Oldfield and Sartori. Hawley was among the leaders in the Vanderbilt cup race.

HIS NAME IN GOOD BOOK.

Indiana Man Had Been Heard Of Even in the Wilds of Colorado.

"Because my name is Lord, I frequently have not a few funny experiences," said J. G. Lord, of Muncie, Ind., according to the Louisville Herald. "One of the most amusing incidents I ever had by reason of my name happened while I was driving from town to town in Colorado. While on the road one day, driving very slowly, for I had plenty of time, I chanced to notice by the roadside a young fellow about 16 years old, dressed in as ragged a fashion as anyone you could ever conceive of. He had on a pair of his father's worn-out trousers, which were cut off at the bottom, and which extended far up on his body, almost to his shoulders. More as a matter of personal amusement than for any other reason, I asked him how far it was to the next town.

"'Bout six miles, I reckon,' he replied.

"I reined up my horse.

"'Do you have any fun out here?' I asked.

"'Yep; heap.'

"'What is your name?' I asked him.

"'Willie,' he replied; 'Willie Hawks.'

"I started to drive on, but he called after me, asking me to stop.

"'Say, mister,' he asked, 'and what mout your name be?'

"'Lord,' I answered; 'Mr. Lord.'

"And then he grinned. He grinned all the way to the armholes of his father's pants.

"'Why'd you smile?' I asked. 'Have you ever heard of me?'

"'Sure; I've heard pop read of yer in that good book; but I never saw yer afore.'

"And he continued to grin as I drove on."

Cured Her Rheumatism.

Deep Valley, Pa., Oct. 31 (Special).—There is deep interest in Green county over the cure of the little daughter of I. N. Whipkey of Rheumatism. She was a great sufferer for five or six years and nothing seemed to do her any good till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. She began to improve almost at once and now she is cured and can run and play as other children do. Mr. Whipkey says:

"I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my daughter; they saved her from being a cripple perhaps for life."

Blot on California.

They were discussing the charms of the California climate.

"I never knew but two persons who could resist the wiles of that delightful land," one of the company said, "and they were a mother and daughter from the Hub. They came to Pasadena while we were there, and they stayed just two days. One of us chanced to express surprise at their brief sojourn, and the older woman explained:

"'It is beautiful here, of course. We realize that. But, after all, it is so far from Boston!'

"And they went that very day."—N. Y. Sun.

Tenth Season of the California Limited.

Ten years ago this fall the Santa Fe started its California Limited train on the initial run across the continent. Many improvements have been made in that busy decade. To-day's engines and coaches are much heavier than those of 1894. Millions of dollars have been spent on the track alone—some of it for oil-sprinkled (dustless) roadbed and oil-burning (smokeless) engines. The time is faster, too.

Daily service of the California Limited will be resumed Sunday, November 13, for the tenth season, superseding the present semi-weekly schedule. This is now an all-the-year-'round train, between Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, running through Southwest land of enchantment. The time, Chicago to Los Angeles, is about 68 hours, which is fast speed for the 2,265 miles traversed, considering that several mountain ranges are crossed.

The letters of Miss Merkley, whose picture is printed above, and Miss Claussen, prove beyond question that thousands of cases of inflammation of the ovaries and womb are annually cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gradual loss of strength and nerve force told me something was radically wrong with me. I had severe shooting pains throught the pelvic organs, cramps and extreme irritation compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor said that I had ovarian trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation. I strongly objected to this and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found that my judgment was correct, and that all the good things said about this medicine were true, and day by day I felt less pain and increased appetite. The ulceration soon healed, and the other complications disappeared and in eleven weeks I was once more strong and vigorous and perfectly well.

"My heartiest thanks are sent to you for the great good you have done me."—Sincerely yours, MISS MARGARET MERKLEY, 275 Third St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Claussen Saved from a Surgical Operation.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It seems to me that all the endorsements that I have read of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound do not express one-half of the virtue the great medicine really possesses. I know that it saved my life and I want to give the credit where it belongs. I suffered with ovarian trouble for five years, had three operations and spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines but this did not cure me after all.

"However, what doctors and medicines failed to do, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Twenty bottles restored me to perfect health and I feel sure that had I known of its value before, and let the doctors alone, I would have been spared all the pain and expense that fruitless operations cost me. If the women who are suffering, and the doctors do not help them, will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they will not be disappointed with the results."—MISS CLARA M. Western Canada's Magnificent Crops

FARMS WESTERN CANADA FREE

Western Canada's Wheat Crop this year will be 60,000,000 bushels, and wheat at present is worth $1.00 a bushel.

The oat and barley crop will also yield abundantly.

Splendid prices for all kinds of grain, cattle and other farm produce for the growing of which the climate is unsurpassed.

About 150,000 Americans have settled in Western Canada during the past three years.

Thousands of free Homesteads of 100 acres each still available in the best agricultural districts.

It has been said that the United States will be forced to import wheat within a very few years. Secure a farm in Canada and become one of those who will help produce it.

ROUND ABOUT THE WORLD

Casualties and Fires, Personal and Political Notes, Business Failures and Resumptions, Weather Record.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

William Henry Elder, Roman Catholic archbishop of Cincinnati, is dead.

Baldwin's airship made the most successful flight ever accomplished, circling at the will of its operator 2,000 feet above the world's fair at St. Louis and returning to the starting point.

Eight hundred hoisting engineers in the mines of the Illinois Operators' association went on strike, making 50,000 miners idle in 255 mines.

Col. A. M. Fingg who, until a few weeks ago was editor of the Duluth News-Tribune, committed suicide in Duluth, Minn., by drowning. Despondency over continued ill health was the cause.

The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business October 31, 1904, the public debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $986,787,652, which is an increase for the month of $4,404,715.

Secretary Hay and Ambassador Jusserand signed a treaty providing for the settlement by arbitration of any possible dispute between the United States and France. It is drawn on the lines of the Anglo-French arbitration treaty.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bleck, aged 75 and 74 years, respectively, died in Milwaukee, Wis., from inhaling gas which escaped from a stove.

Dr. N. M. Smith, chairman of the county central committee, was shot and killed at Washington, Kan., by S. H. Bonar, a farmer. They quarreled over a bill.

George Rooke, 62 years old, who at one time claimed to be middleweight champion pugilist of the world, is dead in a Newark (N. J.) hospital.

Two bandits raided the bank at Cody, Wyo., and killed the cashier, but got no cash. "Buffalo Bill" hurries from Omaha to lead in the pursuit of the murderers.

Emanuel Friend, a well-known criminal lawyer of New York, is dead.

The Baldwin air ship made its second successful flight at the world's fair, alighting on the exact spot chosen.

A large majority of the Illinois coal mines are closed because of the strike of the hoisting engineers.

In the future all children, 14 years of age and under, will be admitted free to the world's fair in St. Louis, providing there are not over five in one party, accompanied by an adult paying the regular admission fee.

Mrs. Herman Trepanier and her son Francis were drowned in a well on their farm near Oconto, Wis.

A reservoir of the municipal water works, located near the center of Winston Salem, N. C., broke, causing the loss of nine lives and the injury of four persons.

The estimates of the war department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, aggregate $103,686,780.

The explosion of over a ton of dynamite under the Bond street bridge in Mount Vernon, N. Y., shook the city and the surrounding country within a radius of five miles, killed at least one person and injured nearly 40 others.

Prices of all grades of coal have been advanced 35 cents a ton in Pittsburg as a result of the increased demand for coal and the strike of engineers in Illinois, which has practically closed all the mines in that state.

The airship designed and built by Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin, of San Francisco, escaped near the world's fair, after two unsuccessful long-distance tests, and soared away, disappearing in the dark

The airship of Capt. T. S. Baldwin, which suddenly slipped away as it was being towed in from the country to the aeronautic concourse, was found 16 miles west of St. Louis. It was but slightly damaged.

Mistaking a can of lye for one of cream, Ed. Benjamin, aged 75, drank of the poison at Burke, Idaho, and died in terrible agony.

Jacob Grover, a farmer, killed Thompson Layton, husband of Grover's divorced wife, during a family quarrel at Burlington, Ia.

A quarrel over a receipt for the payment of a board bill resulted in the killing of Hayden Y. Loring, manager of the Loring hotel, near the exposition grounds, St. Louis, by Norman M. Vaughan, manager of the Elks' Publishing company.

In a riot between students and the police at Boston, Mass, 25 persons were hurt.

The fact that President Roosevelt was thrown from his horse about a week ago and lay unconscious in the road for some time until he recovered his senses, has become public in Washington.

Dr. L. A. Gehhard, a dentist, was killed in his office in New Ulm, Minn. There is no clew to the murderer.

Terribly cut and bruised about the head, the dead body of Alma Steinway, a telephone operator, aged 18 years, was found in a vacant lot near the Spring Grove cemetery at Winton Place, a suburb of Cincinnati. There is no clew to her murderer.

The bodies of nine of the ten miners who were killed at the Auchincloss colliery in Nanticoke, Pa., have been removed from the sump at the foot of the shaft. All were horribly crushed and mangled.

A cotton compress company in Oklahoma City, Okla., has contracted to furnish $60,000 worth of cotton to a firm of Japanese for immediate shipment to Nagasaki.

The Illinois board of pardons refused to grant a parole in the case of the Danville lynchers and announced its purpose to keep them in prison for the maximum time.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Survivors of the General Slocum disaster have sent a letter of thanks to the president for the interest he has manifested in the disaster and for his prompt action in dismissing from the government service those upon whom, in a measure, the responsibility rested.

The president has issued the Thanksgiving day proclamation, setting aside Thursday, November 24, to be observed as a day of festival and thanksgiving by all the people of the United States, at home and abroad."

Eva Booth has been named as commander of the Salvation Army in the United States.

During the month of October the general land office at Washington issued 10,000 land patents, the largest number ever issued during any one month.

Senator Fairbanks during his Indiana tour denied a rumor that he would remain in the senate if the democrats carried the state legislature.

FOREIGN.

Kruger, of the Transvaal republic, who died in July last, were removed from the cemetery at The Hague and taken to Rotterdam for conveyance to South Africa.

Gen. C. C. Mason, a distinguished British officer who served 30 years in India with the Madras army, died at his home near Greenfields, Cal., aged 80 years.

The cone of the crater of Mount Vesuvius, which formed during the late eruption, fell into the crater with a tremendous roar. There immediately issued explosions, followed by the emission of an immense black column, which fell in the form of ashes over the surrounding country within a radius of 25 miles.

The Royal Academy of Music, in London, has awarded the Ross scholarship to Emile Henry Medolus, of Youngstown, O., for flute playing.

Imperial headquarters in Tokio issued a report of the seven-day attack on Port Arthur, showing that great breaches have been made in important forts and the trenches taken by storm.

Departure of the Russian fleet from Vigo and alarmist reports from Gibraltar caused a war scare in Great Britain, but it develops the British fleet had no orders to stop them sailing. Russia detaches four subordinate officers from Rojestvensky's ships and guaranteed before they sailed that none will repeat North sea affair. The officers detached will testify before the court of inquiry.

The French arbitration treaty with the United States, just concluded, will be followed by a treaty with Italy.

The state department received a cablegram from the American embassy at St. Petersburg which warrants it in the assumption that the Russian government will soon agree to recognize passports of American Jews traveling in Russia.

Nine shipwrecked sailors from an English vessel were massacred by islanders off the Arabian coast.

The Philippine commission has granted the right of eminent domain in the islands to railroad companies holding charters.

The liberals swept Canada and Sir Wilfrid Laurier was sustained, Borden, the conservative leader, being overwhelmingly crushed in his own province, Nova Scotia.

The ancient ecclesiastical cope which was stolen from the cathedral of Ascoli, Italy, two years ago, and later purchased by J. P. Morgan, has been presented to the Italian government by Mr. Morgan.

Russia and Britain have agreed to ask the United States and France to appoint naval officers on the court that is to investigate the North sea affair.

The coroner's jury at Hull, England, found that George Henry Smith and William Leggett, of the Gamecock fleet, were killed by shots fired without warning or provocation from Russian warships.

The German government is in full sympathy with the proposal of the United States for a treaty of arbitration between the United States and Germany and there seems no doubt that a treaty will be arranged.

LATER.

The liberals carry Canada by good majorities.

The 3-year-old daughter of Durham Leneh, of Macomb, Ill., fell into a 10-gallon jar of water and was drowned.

It is rumored that Melville W. Fuller, chief justice of the U. S. supreme court, may resign the day after the inauguration of the president.

Six exquisite vases, valued at $15,000, were stolen from John S. Melcher of New York.

The French steamer Gironde was sunk by collision in the Mediterranean sea, and 100 lost their lives.

Fire at Tipton, Ga., destroys $250,000 worth of property.

The Cody bank robbers have escaped. Members of the posse sent out who have returned say the timber in which the outlaws took refuge has been thoroughly beaten and no trace of the men found. The pursuit has not been abandoned, however.

Over 5,500,000 tons of freight were carried over the Soo canals in October, over a million more than last year. Over 9,000,000 bu. of grain were carried down.

St. Petersburg thinks Japs have abandoned attempt to capture Port Arthur.

President Roosevelt issued a statement to the American people in reply to Parker's charges of blackmail.

A special dispatch from Mukden says the Japanese are using dogs to locate the positions of the Russian sentinels.

WASHINGTON LETTER

GOSSIP OF MEN AND EVENTS AT THE CAPITAL.

EX-CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS

The Washington Records of Gen. "Joe" Wheeler and Col. Mosby—Postmaster General Wynne Is a "Good Fellow."

Gen. Joe Wheeler.

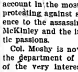
Washington.—Gen. "Joe" Wheeler is still full of the war spirit, and would like to be where he could hear the roar of cannon and witness the crash of armies. Just now he is longing to go to the orient and witness the contest between the Russians and the Japanese. The old fighter, who rose to the command of all the cavalry in the confederate service, who lived in the saddle, and who was one of the first to seek service in the Spanish-American war, takes more interest in the science of war and the movements of armies than in any other subject. There was a time when the general had a taste for politics. He represented an Alabama district in congress for many years, and on his side of the house he was always in the forefront when a scrimmage was on.

The old congressmen who were here in the fifty-first congress, when the celebrated "Reed rules" were adopted, and the most turbulent scenes that have been witnessed since the war were enacted, will never forget Gen. Wheeler's part in that fight of the minority to prevent the majority from adopting a new set of rules. His seat was well down in the front on the democratic side, but he was seldom to be found in it. His piping little voice could be heard from any quarter of the chamber demanding recognition. When his appeal was disregarded he was liable to mount on top of the desks, run to the row immediately in front of the speaker and cry, "Mr. Speakah, Mr. Speakah!" in excited tones. He was one of the characters in the house up to the time of the Spanish war, when his old friend, President McKinley, appointed him a major general of volunteers. He was so pleased that he never could thank the president sufficiently and was one of the very first to get into a blue uniform, delighted to show his loyalty to the government and eager for fighting.

He was afterwards appointed in the regular army, and two or three years ago put on the retired list, but his martial spirit is still dominant. He declared the other day that it was only a question of expense that deterred him from going to the front in Manchuria. He has discovered that the railroad fare alone from Paris to Mukden is $300.

Col. Mosby's Career.

Another ex-confederate soldier, the celebrated guerilla, Col. John S. Mosby, has come into considerable notice recently by his indignant protest against the violent language of Congressman Heflin, of Alabama. This democratic congressman, in talking on the race issue, declared that if a Czolgosz had thrown a bomb under the table at which President Roosevelt and Booker T. Washington sat no great harm would have been done. Col. Mosby called his fellow southerner to account in the most emphatic manner, protesting against such indecent reference to the assassination of President McKinley and the inciting of anarchistic passions.



Col. John S. Mosby.

Col. Mosby is now in the employ of the department of justice, and is one of the very interesting characters in Washington. He is 72 years of age, but looks the part of the character he played in the terrible war of the '60s. His sharp, high-bred features suggest the eagle, and are those of an ideal cavalry leader. He is about medium height, with hair a little scanty, but bristling and pure white. His grim mouth and set jaw reveal a determination seldom equalled. He lost one eye during the war, but the other is as bright and piercing as when he headed his raiders in their forays along the union line.

Recently he has received his old cavalry hat, which he lost when shot down and seriously wounded in the last year of the war. It was sent to him by a lady in New York, who explained that it had been given her by her father, Lieut. Con. Cole, who commanded the Thirteenth New York cavalry when it came so near capturing the famous guerilla. Col. Mosby was delighted to receive the relic, and proposes to give the hat to the National museum. There it will be placed with the last coat he wore in the war, and which he loaned to the museum 20 years ago. He said he purchased the coat just a month before hostilities closed. The hat is a gray, broad-brimmed kind, common in the southwest, the brim turned up at one side and decorated with an ostrich plume.

Wynns's Democratic Ways.

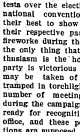
Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne, who is now modestly bearing the honors the president conferred upon him a short time ago in recognition of his merit, is one of the most democratic officials of the cabinet. There is a good deal of the Bohemian in his make-up, his long service in the ranks of newspaper men having inoculated him with the free and easy manners of their kind. When he was appointed first assistant postmaster general, some of his staid old statesmen friends hinted that the dignity of the position would compel him to break his associations with "the boys." He could not see it that way, and among his old associates he is still "Bob" Wynne, and just as genial and accessible as when he was one of the leading spirits on newspaper row.

Robert J. Wynne.

It seemed to do him good to throw off the dignity of his position and mingle with the crowd in a dairy lunch room, eating his sandwich or piece of pie where his elbows were joggled by the humble department clerk, the business man, the contractor and others of the busy, common every-day hustlers. Now that he is postmaster general he has been compelled to yield a little to the official amenities, and takes his lunch in his office. He cannot keep away from the old haunts on newspaper row, however, and this habit of mingling with the people he likes, and who like him, is not at all objectionable to his chief, President Roosevelt, who himself would be glad to patronize a dairy lunch room if the proprieties would permit. The day Wynne was appointed he drove around town until he found his old mentor, Gen. Henry V. Boynton, the dean of the corps of Washington correspondents, and carried him with him to the department, in order that his old friend might witness him taking the oath. It was hard to tell who was the more pleased, Gen. Boynton or his "boy."

Campaign Excitement.

Once every four years the District of Columbia undergoes a little political excitement. This is in a presidential campaign. This excitement is but a mild reflex of what is going on in the rest of the country, but it is a good deal for the district, where the residents of voting age are classed under the law with criminals, idiots and women. They are not given the right to vote. The office holders as a rule maintain a voting residence in the states they come from, and have the right of franchise. The bona fide residents of the district, however, can only show their political preferences by a little shouting, some red fire and stump speaking.



Making Stump Speeches.

Political organizations are maintained which get into quadrennial contests over the election of delegates to national conventions, and then do their best to show their loyalty to their respective parties by political fireworks during the campaign. About the only thing that inspires their enthusiasm is the hope that if their party is victorious some cognizance may be taken of the miles they tramped in torchlight parades and the number of meetings they attended during the campaign. They are always ready for recognition in the way of office, and these political demonstrations are supposed to give them some title to it. Both democrats and republicans have organized clubs this year, and have strung their banners across the wide streets of the capital city. It is probable that they have contributed their little mite to the campaign funds of the two parties, but their efforts in arousing interest and enthusiasm in the District of Columbia have not been highly successful. The national managers of both parties quietly smile at these efforts, and, while they do nothing to discourage them, it cannot be said that they lend much encouragement.

ODD FACTS FOR FARM FOLK.

Tokay and Syrian Grapes Grown in Northern Idaho—All Grains Are Over Weight When Properly Grown by Irrigation—White Flax Seed—Corn Wheat in Place of Corn.

It is a big surprise to World's Fair visitors to find that tokay grapes grow in the United States as far north as Duluth, Minn. The particular place where this may be done is Lewiston, Idaho, on the banks of the Snake river. Whatever is done along the Snake river in the matter of agriculture and horticulture must be done with irrigation, however.

The remarkable things done under irrigation are portrayed by a number of states. Colorado has a relief map of the Arkansas valley. Utah shows a diorama of one of her irrigated valleys. California exhibits her products from lands worth a thousand dollars an acre. Oregon displays her beautiful fruits and grains from irrigated districts, while Idaho, her next door neighbor, won twenty gold medals on her agricultural showing.

The tokay grapes from Lewiston are only one of 62 varieties now successfully grown at that far northern point where the climate is almost as mild as Italy, for the tokay cannot flourish where the winters are cold. Along with the tokay is a fine sweet grape from Syria, in which every grape and fruit grower will be interested. The name is Hunisa, or Antab late, from Antab. It is large, very dark, and a fine keeper, the last being its most important quality. After traveling over 1,500 miles to the World's Fair it opened up in as fine condition as the tokay, and made a good show. These grapes are from the first vine of this variety fruited in America.

Another fact not well known is that grains grown by irrigation in the dry atmosphere of the western slope of the Rocky mountains are much heavier than those grown in the east, and the yield is far greater. In the Idaho exhibit of the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair are many examples of irrigation results. A sack of oats was received at the exhibit a few days ago which was graded by one of the machines in the building and tested as to weight. It was found that the third, or poorest grade, weighed 38 pounds to the bushel, while the standard of weight for oats is only 32 pounds to the bushel. The yield is 100 to 110 bushels to the acre, and Idaho oats ordinarily weigh 42 to 46 pounds to the bushel. An acre of irrigated land yields about three times as much as an acre in a humid climate. Wheat in southern Idaho is 62 to 64 pounds to the bushel, the standard being 60 pounds, and the yield 50 to 70 bushels to the acre. A bundle of alfalfa hay, second crop of 1904, brought from southern Idaho, is as tall as a man, a six-footer. Five to seven tons to the acre are grown each season, it being cut usually three times.

All over southern Idaho, which for the most part is a vast desert, are oases that have been made fruitful by irrigation. The liberal provisions of the Cary Act of Congress have made possible the reclamation of these lands, the state taking over the lands and disposing of them to settlers at 50 cents an acre. The water right is an extra cost, in some cases as low as $25 an acre for a perpetual right, the first one or two crops often paying the entire cost of a fine property. Only a few days ago the state land board of Idaho threw open to settlement 100,000 acres of land under one canal at Twin Falls, on the south side of Snake river. It is in Cassia county, one of the counties that touch the Nevada border. In this instance the total cost per acre is $25.50, and under the liberal terms of the Cary Act entry may be made through another person. The payment is in easy installments.

Idaho has the honor of showing in her agricultural display something that very few farmers have ever seen, namely, white flax seed. This variety of flax originated in Idaho, and is said to possess great commercial possibilities, because it is richer in oil and produces a grade of very light colored oil that is far more desirable for white paint than the darker grade.

Idaho is trying to do what other mountain states are attempting, that is, to supply the home market with fruits, vegetables, meats, grains and dairy products. The mountains contain hundreds of mining camps and settlements where everything now produced finds ready market, while the demand increases with each new mining district opened.

Corn is about the only thing that does not grow well in the irrigated deserts of southern Idaho, because the summer nights are cool, but a kind of grain is raised called corn wheat that takes the place of corn, and produces over 100 bushels to the acre. It is worth any farmer's time to take a good look at the odd things in the Idaho display, where there are 47 varieties of wheat, 41 varieties of oats, 32 varieties of barley, and 34 varieties of grasses, to say nothing of vegetables, beans, peas, honey and other things worth having.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Value of Cow Manure.

For the last five years the Ohio experiment station has been investigating the value of cow manure as a fertilizer in the production of corn, wheat and clover grown in rotation, says Hoard's Dairyman. The experiments showed that for the five year average there was an increase of two bushels of corn, two-thirds of a bushel of wheat and about sixty pounds of clover hay for each ton of manure when the manure was taken from an ordinary open barnyard. The station figured that the total increase thus obtained amounted to $1.50 where corn is valued at 33 1-3 cents per bushel, wheat at 66 2-3 cents per bushel, clover at 33 1-3 cents per 100 pounds and corn stover at $3 per ton and straw at $2 per ton.

Measuring Hay In a Stack or Maw.

To find the number of cubic feet in a square stack multiply the length by the breadth in feet and the result by the height to the eaves in feet, added to one-third the height of the roof, says American Cultivator. The number of cubic feet should be divided by the number of cubic feet in one ton of the hay. The following example will make the problem clear: To find the weight of a stack of heavy hay 20 feet long by 12 feet wide, 8 feet high to the eaves and 8 feet high from eaves to the peak multiply 12 by 20, which gives 240. Now multiply this by 9 (8 added to one-third of 3), which gives 2,160. Divide this by 350, which gives 6.17 tons in the stack.

Mice Injure Trees.

In new localities and in old sections where there is any rubbish in the orchard mice frequently girdle fruit trees near the ground and in this way destroy them. This can generally be prevented by making a small mound of earth around each tree. This should be about twelve inches high and as steep as the soil can be piled. This is the cheapest method, and any one can mound up a lot of trees in a very short time. The trunks may also be protected with wood veneer or wire netting with a very small mesh. This, however, is more expensive than mounding up a tree and is probably no more effective.—American Agriculturist.

Winter Exercise For Sows.

Sows carrying much flesh, made while confined in small pens, will prove at best unsatisfactory breeders, says American Agriculturist. Exercise is easily secured in summer by the use of pasture, but the winters are so severe in the north that it requires some ingenuity to gain the desired end. Turning the sows into sheltered yards is a good plan, and if litter from the stable is thrown in the yard exercise will be gained while working this over in search of waste grains. If exercise can be secured in no other way the sows should be driven for some time each day by the herdsman along a lane or roadway or about the yard.

Keep Harness In Repair.

It costs quite a sum to keep horses properly harnessed and equipped for work, says American Cultivator. But if more attention were paid to keeping the harnesses in good repair or condition they would last longer, be easier for the horses and better to handle. They should be well oiled once a year. This will keep them soft and pliable and lengthen their durability. There are now preparations made especially for the purpose, and any farmer should be able to do the work himself and thus save some outlay.

Winter Care of Hens.

As winter approaches the flock should be provided with a comfortable house. It need not be expensive, but the flock must have it and plenty of good food. Corn, oats and wheat are good winter foods for hens. Give sheaf oats and let the fowls scratch. The finest thing in winter is a potato mash. I take the very small potatoes and boil them, mashing with some meal or ground feed. The potato peelings may be fed in the same way.—American Agriculturist.

Blinders on Horses.

In proportion to size no one thing has done the horse as much injury as blinders. They have injured and sometimes crippled or killed the horse's owner or some of his family. The horse is a nervous, excitable beast, and when he hears but cannot see or can only see indistinctly the object he naturally becomes frightened and may do serious harm. A horse that habitually wears blinders rarely becomes safe for family use.

The Tent Caterpillar.

This pest frequently does much damage. This can be prevented, as few insects are as easily destroyed as this one. Cut off the egg masses during winter and spray with paris green when the worms appear in the spring. This will effectually prevent the ravages of this pest. Migratory worms may be kept from ascending trees by surrounding the trunk with bands of cotton batting.

Starting a Row.

Nell (pining for pleasant words)—Oh, George, I cannot understand it. Why do you lavish this wealth of love on me when there are so many girls more beautiful and more worthy than I am?

George—I'm sure I don't know.

He Was a Mild Mannered Man, but When He Drew His Gun He Meant Business—Had a Good Pistol.

"It is very fatiguin' to me," said the Kentucky colonel to a representative of the Chicago Inter Ocean, "to heah all this talk goin' the roun's about Dave Colson.

"I knew Dave Colson—knew him pussonally. Why, he was one of the finest fellars you evah laid eyes on and the mos' mild mannahd man. Time in time out I have sat there at Chamberlin's, at Washington, laughin' and talkin' and chinnin' with Dave Colson. I nevah saw Dave Colson shoot at anybody what hadn't begun to shoot at him fust, and that's mo' than you can say of mos' Kentuckians.

HE SHOT THE WHOLE POSSE OF THEM.

"You remembah, don't you, the shootin' of the Gaillgers at Harrodsburg, Ky., when you was a little gurl? Well, Dave Colson's careah was somethin' like that man's what did the shootin'. All the shootin' he done was fo'ced upon him.

"Harrodsburg is a pretty lively town in the shootin' line, I know. It's customa'y for the women and children to drop flat on the flo' when the shootin' begins there and stay there till they quit, not darin' to go neah a windah.

"You know, then, how the whole trouble of the Gaillger shootin' come about. The Gaillgers got that man up in a room, won all his money away from him, then beat him ovah the haid with a hoss pistol.

"The man—I forget his name—was laid up two or three weeks from the blows. Then, as soon as he recovahd—he was a lame man at that—he stood up in front of his barroom and shot the whole posse of them as they come out of the Protect house across the street. Cleaned out the whole endurin' fam'ly.

"Yes, you're right there, he did spah one—the youngest son. I remembah now, as he come out to see what the shootin' was all about and saw his father and two brothers layin' on the ground, shot through the heart, the lame man he says to him, says he:

"'I ain't got nothin' agin you. Go on back in.'

"And the young fellah he went on back in and saved his life.

"Now, I call that shootin' under strong provocation. What right had them there Gaillgers to beat a po' lame man ovah the head with a hoss pistol? None at all.

"It was the same way with Dave Colson—the same way exactly.

"He was a membah of the legislature in his own state. Then he was sent to congress. He threw up his position in congress to go to Cuba in the Spanish-American wah. He was made lieutenant in that wah at a little post called Anniston, in Alabama.

"Naw, at the same time there was a young man at Anniston servin' in the army as a private, I think, named Scott. He was a nephew of Bradley, who was gov'nor of Kentucky.

"This young fellah thought he would run rough shod ovah Dave Colson, and he couldn't do nathin' with him on account of his bein' a nephew of the gov'nor of Kentucky. That was where he was mistaken. You can't run roughshod ovah any Kentuckian.

"Young Scott made every sort of trouble he could for Dave Colson. There wa'n't a mo' insubordinate young man at that post than he was—doin' it out of pure devilment, just to see how much Dave [illegible] would stan'.

"After awhile they all got together in a barroom down there at Anniston and Scott began to insult Dave Colson to his face, he and some frien's of his. They was too many for Colson that time, just as the Gaillgers was too many for the man that afterward shot them.

"These young fellahs shot Dave in the right ahm, the pistol ahm, and they paralyzed it slightly. Then they hit him on the temple, givin' him the blow that finally ended in his insanity and suicide.

"Well, Colson, he was laid up for about three weeks with this blow on his head and his bad ahm. Then when he got up there was somethin' doin'.

"But by that time his company had broke up an' he wa'n't lieutenant no longah. So he went to Frankfort, Ky.

"As it happened, young Scott went there, too, and for the second time they met in a cafe or barroom or somethin'. There was some hot words and the fight commenced.

"As I tole you befo', Dave's ahm was slightly disfiggered by that pistol shot of young Scott's down at Anniston, but he done the bes' he could, and that wa'n't half bad, s' fur's shootin' goes, even for a Kentuckian.

"It's about the worst thing that could happen a Kentuckian to have his pistol ahm paralyzed, but, as I say, Colson, he done the bes' he could undah the circumstances.

"Well, Scott, he began to shoot first, s' fur's I kin get the right of it; then Colson, he lit in, and what he done was good and plenty.

"Scott, he was a big giant of a fellah, like a bahn do' to shoot at—nevah no feah of not hittin' him long 's yo're sight was good. So what does he do but grab up a perfect stranger an' hol' him out in front of him same 's if he'd bin a shield.

"I suppose it is what the stranger got for bein' around. It's always the outsiders, the disinterested pahsons, get the worst of it in these free for all fights.

"But to resume, as I say, Scott grabbed this stranger by the neck and held him up in front of him to ward off the shots. These strangers standin' promiscuously about get held up in mo' ways than one. Yes, you're right about that.

"Well, Dave Colson didn't do a thing but shoot plum through the stranger—his name was found out at the inquest to be Demaree, I believe—and into that fellah Scott.

"That was a mighty good pistol Dave had that time. I've often tried to find out the make of it, but couldn't.

"Then you see perfectly well that the stranger wa'n't no good no longah for a shield. He was dead as a do'nail. So Scott he dropped him and ran.

"It was about time, because Colson had done got up his dander good and fine. He shot him as he ran down the steps. Then he shot another fellah, a stranger, too, since I come to think of it, in the back in such a way that if some special providence hadn't had an eye on him he'd 'a' dropped dead there and then. But he didn't. Aftah some months in the hospital, I believe, they say he got well. It was a miracle.

"And that wa'n't all. He shot another man in the calf of the leg all by mistake—they was standin' round appa'ently thick as flies in the summer time lookin' on—and this fellah didn't do nothin' but drop dead in his tracks, and it wa'n't the shot either. It was heart trouble or somethin'.

"And what business did a man with heart trouble so bad he couldn't stan' a little scratch in the calf of the leg have standin' idlin' about in a Kentucky barroom, where a fight was liable to occur mos' any minute?

"I believe he disabled or killed five or six that whirl, Dave did, but that was all the shootin' he done, and didn't he have provocation for doin' that? You've lived in Kentucky long enough to be a good judge.

HE SHOT PLUM THROUGH THE STRANGER.

"Aftah that they let Dave Colson alone. He'd killed 'em all off, you say? There wasn't nobody lef' to molest him? Well, maybe you're right, and that did have somethin' to do with it.

"But the saddest part of it all is this, that the fust blow the young fellah Scott gave to Dave was the cause of his death. It's what brought on his insanity, as I said befo'.

"I was sorry to heah how he shot himse'f in the he'd, fust shootin' his hoss. It was a sad thing to heah about. It was a sort of pity, too, s' long's he was 'boun' and determined to shoot himse'f, he didn't think to spah the hoss.

"He was a mighty good man. Dave was, one of the best and mildest mannahed men you evah saw in your life, meetin' him socially."

Breaking Up Hardpan.

The use of a subsoil plow is frequently of much assistance in breaking up hardpan. This in connection with cultivation at different depths each year will be of great service. In an irrigated country water should be allowed to run along the bottom of the furrow, and after it has stood for some hours the subsoil plow can be used with much effect.

Beef Meal For Pigs.

Beef meal in a ration for pigs has a great influence on the strength of bone. Pigs fed this ration have much longer, firmer bone than those fed largely on corn.

Old Tea Leaves.

Let them gather for a few days, then soak in water in a tin pail for half an hour, strain through a sieve and use liquor for cleaning varnished paint. It makes it look like new. But do not use on unvarnished paint. It cleans windows, mirrors and oilcloth, and the leaves squeezed dry are desirable to scatter over a carpet before sweeping.

In Using Gasoline.

Gasoline is most efficacious as a cleansing agent when it is warmed by being set into a vessel of hot water which has, of course, been removed from the stove. It is useful also to soap the article to be cleansed, using the gasoline just as if it were water.

To Freshen Gilt.

The white of an egg applied with a small camel's hairbrush will remove fly traces and soil from gilt frames. The water in which onions have been boiled if rubbed over the frames will remove dust and specks and brighten the gilding wonderfully.

Eggs and Meat.

A dozen eggs are worth in nutriment the value of a pound and a half of meat, so it is wise to use eggs at all seasons, packing down to salt a supply for that season in early winter when their prices become fabulous.

For Chapped Hands.

For chapped hands sweet oil and glycerin in equal quantities is excellent. Wash the hands thoroughly in warm water and dry before applying.

Duplicates.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Cleaning Tinware.

Do not spend hours scouring the tins in the pantry, but put them on to boil in strong borax water. They will come out bright as when new and then require only a thorough washing and drying. Agate ware, iron kettles, dripping pans, spiders, etc., can be made like new by putting them on to boil in lye water. Do not touch the water with the fingers, but scoop out the articles with a wooden spoon and put at once into a tub of clear water to wash away the lye. From this water put each article into a tub of hot soapsuds and wash thoroughly, using a little sand soap on any obstinate spots. Do not leave too long in the lye water, but work quickly.

About the House.

Common whiting mixed with ammonia makes excellent silver polish.

Kerosene brightens brass ornaments and keeps them from tarnishing.

Use a knife to break an egg. The contents of the egg are more easily handled.

Hang up the clothes brushes and the whisk brooms. It needs but a few cents invested in nails and screw eyes.

Lamp wicks are not expensive. It is poor economy to strain the eyes and spend every morning filling lamps when time and eyes can be spared by throwing away the short, blackened wick.

Vegetables as Medicine.

If you are wakeful eat lettuce.

For affections of the skin and for yellow skin eat onions. Onions are also good for colds, coughs and scrofula.

For a torpid liver eat freely of asparagus.

For malaria and general breakdown eat cranberries.

If nervous and irritable eat plenty of celery.

For constipation eat fruits—ripe and healthy fruits. Fresh fruits are good, so are figs and dates. Raisins are beneficial.

Oyster Stuffing.

A delicious oyster stuffing is made by taking two scant teacupfuls of stale breadcrumbs, one-half pint of oysters drained and cut in half. Season with salt, pepper, celery salt, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of sweet cream to moisten the crumbs and one well beaten egg. Mix and fill the fowl or chicken. Garnish the bird before carving with fried oysters and parsley.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

The Glory of the Great.

As the stars are the glory of the sky, so great men are the glory of their country, yea, of the whole earth. The hearts of great men are the stars of earth; and doubtless when one looks down from above our planet these hearts are seen to send forth a silvery light just like the stars of heaven.—Heinrich Heine.

Cold Tea?

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground, after the crowd had left, picked up 219 bottles ranging in capacity from a half pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

W. J. Hill, of Concord, N. C., Justice of the Peace, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I used them for disordered kidneys and backache, from which I had experienced a great deal of trouble and pain. The kidney secretions were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The Pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My health generally is improved a great deal."

BITS ABOUT JAPAN.

Last year Japan imported foodstuffs exceeding over $52,000,000 in value.

The Japanese government is in the market for a number of locomotives.

The Japanese Marine association will form a volunteer fleet of auxiliary cruisers.

Japan has established her up-to-date system of education in Formosa, with much success.

The rice crop prospect in Japan is good. It is nearly 43,000,000 bushels in excess of the average crop of 200,000,000 bushels.

In Japan every dishonored check or note is publicly gazetted, consequently very few are dishonored; in Tokio, for instance, with its 1,500,000 population, only 46 a month during the year ended May last.

Canada is pushing for sales in Japan. Consuls are being appointed with authority to pay for early statistical information. Sample rooms will be attached to the consulates. Japanese products will be exhibited in commercial museums in Canada.

Mrs. Mary E. Meserve, of Salisbury, Mass., was cured of Anæmia, a disease in which there is an actual deficiency of the blood, by the use of

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People

She says: "The first symptom was an unusual paleness. Later the blood seemed to have all left my body. I had shortness of breath and fluttering of the heart; was depressed, morose and peevish. I suffered for two years. Physicians did me little good but I am now a well woman because I took twelve boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These pills really make new blood and have cured obstinate cases of rheumatism, scrofula and erysipelas. They are especially useful to growing girls.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Fire at University.

A fire of mysterious origin did damage to the laboratories in the Mechanic Arts building of the university to the amount of $6,000. The blaze was discovered at 8:40 in the evening and an alarm was immediately turned in. By the time the department had reached the scene the flames had spread with great rapidity through the basement rooms and were burning fiercely.

Strenuous work for an hour extinguished the blaze, which was confined entirely to the basement rooms. These rooms were badly gutted and a great deal of valuable apparatus used in physical and chemical laboratory work was entirely destroyed by the fire and the intense heat resulting therefrom.

In a Tight Place.

To save himself from being crushed to death by a Great Northern freight train, James L. Farrell of Austin leaped from the railroad bridge over the Mississipi at St. Cloud, falling fifty feet to bank of the river below. Both of his wrists were broken, his arm dislocated, a rib fractured and his face and scalp cut and torn. He was conscious when picked up, and as soon as his injuries were attended to, left the hospital.

Farrell and William Connolly, also of Austin, had cars of movables in the train and were going to Gray Eagle. The freight stopped upon the bridge and Farrell left his car to go to the car of his friend. He had not accomplished this when the train started and left him the alternative of dying on the bridge or jumping for his life to the ground below.

Narrow Escape.

James Kennedy and his wife had a narrow escape during the collapse of their home at Lyton place and Park avenue, St. Paul. Mr. Kennedy had his house moved from the top of a sand hill to the street level, and for a couple of days it had rested on piles.

When the jack screws were removed the posts sank into the earth. The house careened to an angle of thirty degrees and split in the center. Mr. Kennedy was on the outside of the house and barely escaped being hit by falling boards. Mrs. Kennedy was inside the cottage, and the plaster and other debris fell on her head. She was painfully bruised. Mr. Kennedy estimates the damage to the house and contents at $200.

Nearly Finished.

John Lafarge of New York has nearly finished the first of four large lunettes, each thirteen by twenty-seven feet, for the supreme court room of the new Minnesota state capitol.

Mr. Lafarge's subjects naturally concern law. The painted lunette is entitled, "The Moral and Divine Law," and shows Moses receiving the ten commandments on Mount Sinai. He kneels with bowed head on the shoulder of a great mountain, in the midst of fire and smoke. Joshua, standing at a respectful distance, warns back the unseen throngs of Israelites, Aaron kneels with face covered.

School Buildings.

According to reports to the state superintendent of public instruction, the total value of school buildings in the state is $18,567,603. The value of seats and desks is $373,467. The total number of school buildings is 8,001.

During the year ending July 31, 1904, there were 290 new school buildings erected, valued at $1,072,848. There were fifteen log schoolhouses built, five of them in Beltrami county.

The estimated value of 67 school buildings in Hennepin county is $2,670,000.

Will is Valid

The supreme court in its decision by Chief Justice Start upholds the will of Fanny S. Wilder, St. Paul, bequeathing practically the entire Wilder estate of $3,000,000 to public charity works. The will provides that the estate shall be administered by three trustees.

The heirs of the estate endeavored to break the will, claiming that, under the laws of Minnesota, an estate could not be left in trust. The supreme court holds that the present will is not a gift in trust, but is an absolute gift to the corporation, which is provided for to administer the estate.

News Notes.

David Arnold, a driver for the Hamm Brewing company of St. Paul, dropped dead in a saloon on Seventh street W. St. Paul.

One man was injured, and the guests of the West hotel, Minneapolis, were thrown into a panic by fire which did $700 damage in the drying room of the laundry in the basement.

Joseph Libral, employed in the construction of the German Luthern church at Glencoe, fell from a scaffolding, and was fatally injured.

The Jerome bridge at Crookston seems likely to be held up for a time, as there is a dispute over the terms of the contract.

Dec. 28 is the date announced for the sailing of the new Great Northern steamship Minnesota, according to a circular issued by the company.

Some of the country merchants are complaining in regard to the rural routes, believing that the mail order houses receive too much of the business.

A burglar alarm frightened away burglars who entered the Browning-King clothing store in Minneapolis. So hasty was their exit that not an article was taken.

A new corn picking machine was within the past few days tested on the farm of D. McConochie, near Pilot Mound, in Fillmore county, and worked in a most satisfactory manner.

Allie Pulford, seventeen years old and a bellboy at the West hotel, Minneapolis, was arrested on a charge of taking from S. J. Mayer, a traveling man from New York, a diamond pin valued at $500.

Several sales of lumber have been made the past few days. The Virginia Lumber company some days ago placed with eastern buyers 10,000,000 feet of Norway, and this is now being shipped from Duluth.

While out with a Hallowe'en party at Hutchinson Fred Micka, aged 18, received a bad wound from a 32-caliber revolver, accidentally fired by another young man, the bullet passing through the calf of his leg.

The Crookston Business Men's union is considering the advisability of starting a creamery there. Creameries have been successful elsewhere, and there is no reason why one could not be made to pay there.

Confined to his bed by an illness which prevented him from working to earn a living for his wife and six children, Ben Arnold of St. Charles, in the western part of this county, shot himself in the head with a revolver.

The unusual scarcity of robberies, hold-ups and midnight assaults occuring in this city during the month of October is partially explained by the police records, which show that 712 arrests were made by the police force during that month.

Depositors of the defunct Merchants' bank of Duluth, which failed more than a year ago, have filed a petition with the clerk of the federal court here asking that Hanson E. Smith, president, and James W. Smith, cashier of the bank, be adjudged bankrupts.

The complete returns of registration for Minneapolis and Hennepin county show that the registration this year is a record breaker. The total registration for the county is 52,439, and of this number the city is credited with 47,302.

The Minnesota hen has stepped proudly to the front at St. Louis and gobbled 61 per cent of the poultry prizes awarded. Out of forty-three birds competing in the poultry prize, Minnesota won twenty-six prizes, the largest percentage of winnings by any state.

State Auditor Iverson yesterday received a draft for $6,625 from the federal government, as the quarterly installment of aid for the Soldiers' home. The usual amount received is about $4,000. The addition sum is in payment of a claim that has been held up from last year.

With impaired intellect, a foundling dismissed from an English charitable institution to make his way throgh life as best he could, William Hine, aged 19, was intercepted by Immigration Inspector Dean of Duluth and deported to Canada.

James Ewin, colored, 25 years old, was found dead in his bed at 723 Washington avenue south, Minneapolis. Coroner U. G. Williams was summoned and pronounced death due to heart failure.

Minnesota has what is called a Retail Dealers' Coal association. It costs $10 to get into it and $5 a year afterwards to maintain good standing. A Belle Plaine merchant some time ago intended to deal in coal and paid the entrance fee into the association. Recently he tried to buy coal and was informed that he had defaulted on his yearly payment of $5.

TOOK BOY'S SUGGESTION.

Plowboy Came Out of the Field and Told Railroaders How to Start Stalled Engine.

A traveling man relates that while riding on the new orient line between Harper and Anthony a few days ago, one of the side rods of the engine broke, and the other side stopped on a "dead center," so that when the repair was made it was impossible to start again. According to the Kansas City Star he says:

"The engineer, the conductor and all the passengers took turns going over the thing and trying to devise a way to make it run. Finally a boy came out of the field where he had been plowing to see what was going on. He crawled through the wire fence and sat down on the bank and fanned himself with his straw hat. 'If you'd back that last car up the grade an' let 'er come down gerchunk, that 'ud start 'er,' he finally suggested, deliberately.

"The railroad men sniffed contemptuously, but the passengers sided with the boy. Finally the conductor gave orders that the rear car be uncoupled. No less than 50 passengers caught hold and pushed the car up the grade. Once at the top the car was let go. The loose coach gained momentum as it came down hill, and in spite of the engineer's admonition to 'let her come down easy,' the emergency battering ram crashed into the train with a tremendous thump. The engine was bumped off 'center' all right."

ASKED A PERSONAL FAVOR.

Lawyer Wanted Judge to Relieve Him of a Somewhat Dangerous Duty.

One of the most picturesque figures of the New York bar was the late Thomas Nolan, a lawyer, whose witty retorts furnished subjects for merriment at many a lawyers' gathering. Now, Nolan was at one time counsel for a poor widow who was suing a construction company for the death of her husband, relates Success. The case had been placed upon the "day calendar," but had been frequently postponed, and Mrs. Moriarity, by the time she had made her fifth call, was in an exceedingly disturbed frame of mind, consequently the tones of Nolan's rich brogue were more than usually fervid as he fought against the sixth adjournment.

"I am sorry," said Justice Dugro, "but your opponent has shown me good cause for the adjournment, Mr. Nolan, and the case will therefore go over until to-morrow."

"Very well, sor," said the barrister, sweetly, "but might I ask wan personal favor of this coort?"

"Certainly, sir, with pleasure."

"Will your honor kindly sthep down to my office and just tell Mrs. Moriarity that you have adjourned the case?"

Cream, Ark., Nov. 7 (Special).—After eighteen months' suffering from Epilepsy, Backache and Kidney Complaint, Mr. W. H. Smith, of this place, is a well man again and those who have watched his return to health unhesitatingly give all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills. In an interview regarding his cure, Mr. Smith says:

"I had been low for eighteen months with my back and kidneys and also Epilepsy. I had taken everything I knew of and nothing seemed to do me any good till a friend of mine got me to send for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I find that they are the greatest medicine in the world, for now I am able to work and am in fact as stout and strong as before I took sick."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys cleanse the blood of all impurities. Pure blood means good health.

A southern newspaper complains that "there is always a bar at the mouth of the Mississippi." If it will help our contemporary to bear his lot with greater fortitude, we will demonstrate to him that there are many bars at the head of the Mississippi.—St. Paul Globe.

Santa Fe Engines at World's Fair.

All the world loves a locomotive. There is something lifelike about the iron monster that whisks us at a mile a minute pace across the country. It seems to be a person, not a thing. The crowds who have been recently watching the test of Santa Fe engine No. 507 (a Baldwin of 175 tons weight) in Machinery Hall, World's Fair grounds, St. Louis, will testify to fascination unexplainable. Not merely the size, nor the wheels going around, nor the throbbing steam—but all these and more. The engineer at the throttle and the fireman at the furnace door share the general admiration.

The test showed conclusively that the prairie type used by the Santa Fe in hauling its fastest passenger flyers represents the best achievement of modern engine building.

Some men are so anxious to avoid doing wrong that they neglect to do right.—The Commoner.

Miss Rose Hennessy, well known as a poetess and elocutionist, of Lexington, Ky., tells how she was cured of uterine inflammation and ovaritis by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been so blessedly helped through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it but just to acknowledge it, hoping that it may help some other woman suffering as I did.

"For years I enjoyed the best of health and thought that I would always do so. I attended parties and receptions thinly clad, and would be suddenly chilled, but I did not think of the results. I caught a bad cold eighteen months ago while menstruating, and this caused inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse. My attention was called to your Vegetable Compound and the wonderful cures it had performed, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me. Within one month I felt much better, and at the close of the second I was entirely well.

"I have advised a number of my lady friends to use it, and all express themselves as well satisfied with the results as I was."—MISS ROSE NORA HENNESSY, 410 S. Broadway, Lexington, Ky.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove beyond a question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble and at once, by removing the cause, and restoring the organs to a normal and healthy condition.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—About two years ago I consulted a physician about my health which had become so wretched that I was no longer able to be about. I had severe backache, bearing-down pains, pains across the abdomen, was very nervous and irritable, and this trouble grew worse each month. The physician prescribed for me, but I soon discovered that he was unable to help me, and I then decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and soon found that it was doing me good. My appetite was returning, the pains disappearing, and the general benefits were well marked.

"You cannot realize how pleased I was, and after taking the medicine for only three months, I found that I was completely cured of my trouble, and have been well and hearty ever since, and no more fear the monthly period, as it now passes without pain to me. Yours very truly, MISS PEARL ACKERS, 327 North Summer St., Nashville, Tenn."

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying it "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Her advice is free and helpful. Write to-day. Delay may be fatal.

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

The reason W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes are the greatest sellers in the world is because of their excellent style, easy fitting and superior wearing qualities. If I could show you the difference between the shoes made in my factory and those of other makes and the high-grade leathers used, you would understand why W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes cost more to make, why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater intrinsic value than any other $3.50 shoe on the market to-day, and why the sales for the year ending July 1, 1904, were $6,2[illegible],040.00.

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it—take no substitute. Sold by shoe dealers everywhere.

SUPERIOR IN FIT, COMFORT AND WEAR.

"I have worn W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes for the last twelve years with absolute satisfaction. I find them superior in fit, comfort and wear to others costing from $5.00 to $7.00."—B. G. McCUE, Dept. Coll., U. S. Int. Revenue, Richmond, Va.

The cars were left behind and the train went on with the other coaches. This is one of the worst places on the river division, as the track runs on the river bank and makes a sharp turn.

The STRANGERS' THANKSGIVING

By ELIZABETH FERGUSON SEAT

Mrs. Harmon went about her Thanksgiving preparations with a heavy heart; for the first time within her recollection the relatives, each and severally, had sent regrets. By reason of illness, company, sudden journeys, not one of the large connection could be present. With a sigh she had turned to those two perennial guests, the minister and the school teacher; but they, too, had other plans. It was a dreadful disappointment; the Thanksgiving dinner and the houseful of guests were the very crowning episode of her yearly labors. Her husband and three sons felt her distress, but rather in a reflected way, for no matter whether guests came or went, they would be present, and their interest in the success of the great dinner was as vital as it had ever been. They had helped to feed the two pampered turkeys and gather in the stores of fruits and vegetables, and they looked forward to the realization of their anticipations with lively interest. The day dawned clear and cold, and Mrs. Harmon began her final preparations for the event. The lack of guests, or even the anticipation of any, disturbed her so greatly that she appealed to her sons. Dick and John and Benjamin watched her spread the icing upon a fruit cake sympathetically.

"Tell you, mother, what'll we do," declared Dick, mischievously, "we'll go down to where our line joins the big road, and we'll just invite whoever passes, along, providing we like his looks."

His mother looked doubtful. "Well, not too many, you know, Dick; and do it in the right way. I don't suppose that anybody'll come, or even pass by, for that matter. That 'big road' is a pretty lonesome one, especially so late in the season."

The boys departed upon their novel mission in high glee, but presently Dick sent Benjamin back to inquire how long they were to keep the invitation open. Satisfied that all their offers of good cheer would be honored up to the blowing of the big dinner horn, they hurried down the frosty lane in high spirits. The road made a sharp turn in front of the lane, and that they might not be taken unawares, Dick posted John, who was too shy to address any stranger, where he might watch in one direction for the faintest tokens of the approach of anyone, and he and Benjamin located themselves upon a fallen log on the opposite side of the road to keep an eye out in the other direction.

THE TWO STRANGERS STARED AT EACH OTHER.

The boys waited in silence for a few minutes, but no one appeared. Benjamin grew restless. "I can't sit so still and proper. I guess I'll run over there in the woods and pick a pocketful of those nuts. They're shellbarks, and the squirrels are working for their lives." But just as he started, John made signs of distress, and Dick, as master of ceremonies, came up very properly, and hastily began to rehearse a little speech which he had prepared as they came along. A young man, riding a gray pony, trotted down the highway. As he approached the curve in the road the three boys stood up, and were so evidently waiting for him that he stopped his horse in great astonishment and stared at them quite as earnestly as they were staring at him. Gravely and politely Dick described the state of affairs at his home, and asked the young man to lend the sauce of his presence to their feast.

The stranger gazed at the three boys mutely for an instant, and then a twinkle crept into the corners of his eyes, and he took out his watch. "Eleven o'clock," he exclaimed, gravely. "Are you sure it's not too late?"

"Oh, no," cried Benjamin, hopefully, "the horn hasn't blowed, and mother said 'twouldn't be too late till after that."

"Show him the way, Ben," commanded the big brother, solemnly, "and be sure to feed the pony."

The young man's merry countenance was instantly saddened. "No, they won't miss me. You needn't be afraid."

As the guest disappeared down the lane, following the guidance of the nimble Benjamin, the two boys turned hopefully to the highway. If only another traveler as desirable were abroad and willing to be feasted, the day would be a triumph after all. But travelers did not seem to be journeying, and the minutes lagged dreadfully. From the position of the sun and the state of his appetite John knew that it was almost 12, and instead of watching the highway he kept his wistful gaze fastened upon his elder brother, who was employed in whittling unknown species of animals from a piece of soft pine. So a surrey, drawn by a handsome pair of bays, was upon them before they were aware of its approach. The boys sprang to their feet and shouted just as it was dashing past. The driver drew up with difficulty, and the only occupant, an old gentleman, with white hair and a very wrinkled face, looked out to see what was wanted. Rather incoherently, and in some confusion, Dick told his story and gave his invitation, omitting to state the presence of the other stranger. The driver of the surrey, which was from a livery stable in a small town ten miles away, looked displeased, and prepared to drive on, but the old gentleman said: "I shall miss the New York train anyway, as it lacks but ten minutes to 12, and I consider it a privilege to eat Thanksgiving dinner with such hospitable people. If the young men will get into the carriage and indicate the way we will accept their kindness and that of their good mother with many thanks."

As the surrey dashed up to his residence, Mr. Harmon was stepping upon the front porch with the big horn in his hand. He dropped it in astonishment and hastily summoned his wife. The boys scrambled out and the old gentleman followed. As he was about to introduce himself, the young man, with Benjamin, appeared at the end of the porch. The two strangers stared at each other. The younger one grew very pale while the other grew very red. Then, while the whole Harmon family were staring with all their might, the younger man rushed forward and cried: "Father, won't you forgive me?"

Mrs. Harmon sat down upon the doorstep and cried, the boys shrank back to the very corner of the porch, the other father leaned against a pillar and waited, for this proud father was taking a long time to open his heart. But at last he did it; he sighed, and a host of the hard, fine wrinkles vanished from his face as he said: "My son!" and held out his arms.

The Harmons crowded forward; even the driver pressed nearer. The very air grew fragrant with Thanksgiving. Then forgetful of the great dinner, everybody waited while the old gentleman explained. It was the old story. His son and he had quarreled, and the young man had gone west to make his fortune. That was two years ago, and there was a white-haired old lady far away in New York who cried every day for a boy that never came, but who was coming at last, for after dinner they would drive over to the station, and in a couple of days there would be another Thanksgiving, and this old lady would be at the feast.

Then Mr. Harmon blew the horn, notwithstanding everybody was on the spot, and Mrs. Harmon announced dinner. It was the most thankful feast that she had ever served, though, for the first time in her career as a housekeeper, she had to share the credit for it, for Dick insisted that at least half the glory was his.—Young People.

Jimmy Britt and the Stage.

Britt's monologue stunt was a failure, and if what Harry Pollock says about him is true it is not surprising, for a man to make a success in a monologue turn must at least be able to talk fairly good English. "Yuse" and "deso" and "me and yuse fellers" will hardly do before the footlights. The patrons of vaudeville houses, even in Frisco, would not stand for that kind of stuff, so it would seem that all there is left for the "notive son" to do is to get into harness again and do a stunt in the roped arena.

Interesting Football Figures.

Football shutouts have been more frequent this season than ever before. For instance, on a recent day, when the forty-five leading teams in the entire country played, only two of the losing teams succeeded in scoring at all. One college scored 6 points and the other 4.

The winning teams—thirty-one—scored a total of almost 1,000 points. The highest scores were, as usual, made by western elevens. Seventy-five points are a mere nothing in some of the games in the west among the minor colleges.

Rare Ornithological Curios.

The catalogue of the Musaeum Tradescantianum, or Tradescant's museum, published in England in the year 1656, makes mention of many rare ornithological curios owned or left on deposit in that institution. Among the dozens listed three are especially interesting—viz, "two feathers from the tayle of a phoenix," "Easter eggs laid by a mayle barnyarde fowle" and "the claw of the bird roc, who, as authors report, is able to trusse an elephant."

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Built New York's Subway.

John B. McDonald, the man who built the underground railroad in New York, which has just been put in operation, is probably the largest contractor in the world. He began his career as an excavator of cellars, but soon engaged in railroad building and similar work. He built the tunnel by which the Hudson River railroad enters New York city and also the tunnel under the city of Baltimore which connects the lines of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. He also built 400 miles of the Canadian Pacific railway and did $18,000,000 worth of work on the harbor of San Francisco.

JOHN B. M'DONALD.

The contract for the building of the New York subway was signed by Mr. McDonald Feb. 1, 1900, with a time limit of four and one-half years. But labor and other troubles delayed the work. The contract price was $35,000,000, but newly projected work increased that by $5,000,000. An army of 10,000 men has been employed in the great undertaking, which will not be fully completed for several months.

Mr. McDonald is a native of Ireland and is sixty years old.

What He Wanted Reproduced.

John S. Sargent, while he was painting the portrait of James Whitcomb Riley in Philadelphia, narrated some of the vicissitudes of a portrait painter's life.

"Once, I remember," he said, "I did a half length of a rich Londoner. The man was a coarse, high colored type. He made a rather good subject. When the portrait was done he stood off and studied it very closely.

"'Well?' said I.

"'Well,' said he, 'it is excellent. Only,' he added, 'you have left out one very essential feature.'

"'Excuse me, but,' I faltered, 'I thought you wouldn't care to have the —er—er—wort reproduced.'

"'Hang it!' he said. 'I'm talking about the diamond pin, not the wart.'" —Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Think It Over.

Brander Matthews was at the phone the other day bidding goodby to a friend who was to sail the next day for Europe, says the New York Times.

"I sail tomorrow on the Celtic," came over the wire, the steamship's name being pronounced "Keltic."

"You'd better pronounce that 'Seltic,'" replied the professor of belles lettres. "If you don't you'll be having hard seas all the way over."

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later,—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. When Republican politicians depart from Republican principles and adopt rule or ruin metods, Republican voters quickly depart from Republican politicians.—Midway News.

Good Republicas bowed twice in submission in the last campaign. Once to the will of the minority, in the state convention, and again to the majority, on Nov. 8th.

The talk of some of the Republican leaders, that it must be a Skandinavian to defeat Johnson in 1906, is nonsence. If the politicians will please allow the Republican voters of the state of Minnesota to nominate their candidate for governor, they will elect him, and it don't make any difference where he was born.

Over in Beltrami county the only safe way to do is to make sure work of your man if you want to kill All their murders go free, but one unfortunate only wounded his man, who lived to appear aginst him, and the poor marksman ha was sent down to Stillwater for a term of years. The moral is quite plain.—Thirteen Towns.

Since the ruling that the lands on the Red Lake Reservation can be taken at any time, instead of haveing to wait for certain dates and buy it at auction, has had the affect to cause the people to look the land over and buy when suited. There will be enough of the lands sold this fall so that the Towns will be organized next spring and the building of bridges and the improvement of roads commence, and in a fiew years these eleven Townships will be the richest, and best part of Red Lake county.

An Ambassador's Wife.

Lady Durand, wife of Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, British ambassador at Washington, who is just now in the public eye because of the strained relations between Great Britain and Russia, is one of the most popular members of the diplomatic corps at the national capital. She is not only a charming hostess, but is very clever with her pen.

Lady Durand belongs to one of England's most ancient families, being the daughter of Teignmouth Sandys, of Cornwall, whose family has lived on the same estate at St. Kerern for nearly 500 years. She married Sir Henry in 1875 and lived in India for the fifteen years her husband was connected with the Bengal service. They have two children, a son and a daughter. The son is a cavalry officer in the British army.

LADY DURAND.

Wilton Lackaye's Wit.

Ethel Barrymore is responsible for the following story illustrating Wilton Lackaye's sardonic wit: "One day Lackaye said he had made a dramatization of Hugo's 'Les Miserables,' and somebody said he'd never get a New York manager to produce it. 'Produce it!' sneered Lackaye. 'Why, you'll never get a New York manager to pronounce it.'"

First Mention of Football.

It is believed that "The History of London," by William Fitzstephen, written about the year 1175, makes the first historic mention of this game in England, although it seems certain that it was introduced into Great Britain in early times by the Romans.

Cowboy Was a Girl

Evelyn Barclay of Los Angeles and Her Wild Life.

Dressed in Boy's Clothes, She Roamed Over Mexico and Central America—Broke Bronchos Like Cowboy.

Wild and untamed, like the creatures of the plains, is the roving, adventurous spirit of the pretty sixteen-year-old girl who calls herself Evelyn Barclay and whom others have known by the names of Evelyn Munson and Bessie Hicks. Charged with grand larceny, and held to answer for the crime before the superior court, the girl sat in the matron's ward in the city prison of San Francisco recently, chafing at the restraint to which she was subjected and longing to be at large.

SHE RODE THE RANGES WITH THE MEN.

Hers has been a free and unconventional existence, a life among men in which she played the part of a man, and now she finds her woman's weaknesses have brought her to a prison cell. She took $380 from Frank Carlson, and her arrest followed. Before Judge Cabaniss she frankly admitted the charge against her and told of the causes that prompted her to the deed. The extreme youth of the girl is in her favor.

The outward semblance of Evelyn Barclay belies the warring, untamable elements of her nature. Dainty and graceful, with an unmistakable air of refinement, the girl seems strangely out of place in her prison surroundings. She speaks of her past wild career with an air of penitence. She has won the sympathies of her guardians at the prison, and all express the hope that she may be allowed to go free to forget her past.

The story of Evelyn Barclay's life reads like a chapter from a romance of the west. For three months, dressed in boy's attire, she rode the ranges of Arizona, herding cattle and breaking horses, living with the men, who never guessed her sex, and enduring hardships that it would seem only men could endure. Through Mexico and Central America she journeyed, always in the guise of a boy. Last July she returned to her home in Los Angeles.

With a tinge of sadness in her voice she told the story of her varied and strangely romantic career.

"I was born in New York and when but a little tot was adopted by Judge H. A. Barclay of Los Angeles. I never knew who my parents were, but was led to believe that my father was a Dr. Hicks. I grew up in the family of Judge Barclay, finished high school in Los Angeles and attended the normal school for one year.

"Last November, on account of trouble that I had with the family, I decided to leave. With a girl friend named Jessie Penrod I dressed as a boy, and we went in search of adventure. We made our way to Phenix, Ariz., by riding the blind baggage on the trains. The trainmen were kind to us and gave us things to eat. Both of us had our hair cut short, and not once during our trip was our identity even suspected. At Phenix, Ariz., we met a man who wanted a couple of cowboys. He did not want to take us, as he thought we were too young, but I assured him that I could ride, and he finally took us to his ranch.

"For three months we herded cattle on the ranges, and in the evenings I broke bronchos for my employer, as I have fairly lived in the saddle during my life. Jessie soon learned to ride, and we got along very well. In the meantime our people had been searching for us, and one day I had the pleasure of hearing one of the cowboys relate to me how two young girls who were masquerading as boys were being searched for throughout the country. It was a jolly life and we had lots of fun.

"When we had about $300 we returned to Los Angeles. I went home dressed as a boy and my father locked me in a room after having barred the windows. I cut my way out with a penknife and made my way to the house of my friend, Jessie Penrod. It was then that we decided to leave on a second trip."

The story of her experiences when she left home a second time the girl relates in a diary which she kept. She tells of her experiences as a cabin boy on a coasting steamer and of her subsequent life while breaking horses in Mexico.

"It seemed that fate drove me to do these things," she said. "I have been taught a great lesson and I have profited by it. I have never done a wrong thing in my life until this last affair. I came up here penniless from San Jose and was driven to do it through sheer desperation. It was no trouble for me to act as a boy. I simply acted as I would have liked a young man to act toward me. I do not want to be sent to a reform school, as it would do me no good. I wish I could be given a chance to begin life over again."

FIERCE BATTLE WITH A LION

An Englishman's Necky Deed to Test the Courage of the King of Beasts.

An Englishman had one day set out into the wilds on a shooting expedition. He was alone but for his Zulu servant, Job, who followed behind and carried a cowhide shield and a handful of assagais in his right hand.

As they walked along the Zulu espied a huge lion lying on the top of a stony ridge. Both men stopped. In a low voice the Englishman explained to Job what he intended to do. He had heard that if a lion is approached boldly he will turn tail and bolt.

This was what he intended to test. Having given Job certain directions, the Englishman began to climb up the ridge.

Step by step he ascended. The lion slowly raised itself on all fours and lashed its tail from right to left. So far there was nothing to fear. But suddenly the long tufted tail ceased its sidelong swing. At first slowly, then quicker, it lashed up and down. The long yellow mane grew more erect, and, with an ominous growl, the lion crouched, ready to spring at him.

In an instant the Englishman had brought his rifle to the shoulder and sent a bullet tearing through the yellow body. An angry roar of pain followed. A long body, with tail outstretched and paws extended, rushed through the air. A dull thud, and the Englishman was rolling down the slope.

Bruised, but otherwise unhurt, he sat up. Not twenty yards away he saw the Zulu bounding toward the lion, armed only with two assagais, and guarding his body with the cowhide shield.

"Back! Go back!" his master called. But the Zulu, shouting loudly, made straight for the enraged animal.

Quick as a flash Job thrust one of his assagais into the lion's side. Snarling furiously, the brute sprang at him and bore him to the ground.

HE SENT A BULLET TEARING THROUGH THE BODY.

But now the Englishman had advanced to the rescue. His rifle lay useless, with a large dent in the barrel. But drawing his hunting knife he rushed at the lion and with a rapid stroke severed the tendons of one of its hind legs.

Again the wounded animal turned on him and, seizing him in its paws, hurled him right over its head. Then, with another savage growl, it crawled toward the helpless Zulu.

Once more the Englishman returned to the attack. This time he succeeded in cutting the other tendon. The lion roared loudly, but its back legs were useless.

With a cry of triumph the Zulu sprang to his feet and hurled his assagai deep in the animal's heart.

Although both men bore many wounds from their life struggle with the lion, they did not return without bringing back with them the lion's skin, which now hangs on the wall as a tribute to their bravery.

THE JAPS AND THE MULE.

Rice Growers of Nippon Are Not Anxious to Employ the Hybrid in Their Work.

"So the Japanese rice growers are not willing to tackle that interesting native institution, the American mule, without the aid of home folk," said an observant man, according to the New Orleans Times Democrat, "and I can see where they are right about the matter. The American mule is a long-eared, quick-heeled, supple-jointed mystery, and no man, no matter how wise he may be, can do anything with him unless he have special training. As a matter of fact, the white men in America is sadly deficient when it comes to a working knowledge of the mule. Up to the present writing the American negro is the only living person who can claim anything like mastery when it comes to the mule. Somehow there is something in the nature of the black man and the mule which makes it easier for them to get along. Just what it is I do not know. But even the black man will have his ups and downs now and then with the mule, and I have seen some very interesting instances of this kind, one of the most amusing being that of an extremely hard skulled negro who never wanted a better weapon than his head in any sort of conflict with man or beast.

"One day he fell out with his mule. Ordinarily, they get along well enough together. But in some way the mule on the day in question made the negro mad and the fight began. In the first place, the negro broke his water jug over the mule's head. This did not faze the animal. Grabbing the mule by the ears and taking a good, firm grip, the black man landed with vigor between the mule's ears, using his head as a weapon. The blow was a knockout blow all right, but the trouble was that it knocked the negro out also. Both mule and negro fell to the ground like dead. In a short while both were fairly good friends again. The Japs are right. They will need special training on the mule proposition and no mistake, and the negro is about the best men they can get to do the training."

Curious Scotch Custom.

Natives of the northeast coast of Scotland observe a curious custom at funerals. After the burial service the coffin is carried outside the house and placed upon the two chairs on which it had rested within doors. As soon as the pallbearers lift up their burden and begin their journey to the graveyard these chairs are at once thrown sharply on their backs. In this position they are kept until the interment has taken place, when they are taken indoors again. Any attempt to place the chairs on their legs or to take them in before the proper time is at once frustrated by the relatives of the deed.—Chicago Daily News.

GIRL AND WOMAN

CARE NEEDED AT THE CHANGE FROM ONE TO THE OTHER.

Many a Life Spent in Suffering Because Troubles Were Allowed to Develop At This Time.

Every mother of a growing girl should remember that there will come a time when her daughter will be a girl no longer but will share with her the blessings of womanhood. Unless nourishment keeps pace with growth the foundations of a life of suffering are laid at that time. Mrs. John MacKinney, of No. 478 Thirteenth street, Detroit, Mich., writes a timely word. She says:

"I did not get proper care at the first critical time in my life and for seventeen years I suffered as a result. I had dizzy spells, felt a constant fear that something dreadful was about to happen and was afraid to go out alone. My breathing was very short and I had palpitation of the heart so badly that I could not go up stairs nor walk even moderately fast. I was so nervous that I could not sit still. At different times for years I was under the care of the best physicians in Detroit and I tried a number of advertised medicines. Nothing helped me until, on the advice of a neighbor, I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I felt relieved before the first box was finished and I kept on taking them until I was cured.

"Last winter my little girl had rheumatism and I gave her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she got well right away. My niece was thought to be going into consumption and, upon my advice, she tried the pills. They cured her cough and she is now well and strong. My entire family are enthusiastic over Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and we cannot say enough in their praise."

These pills effect such cures because they go to the root of the disease. Other remedies act on the symptoms—these marvelous vegetable pills remove the cause of the trouble. They have proved themselves to be an unfailing specific for all diseases arising from impure blood and weakened nerves—two fruitful causes of nearly all the ills to which humankind is heir. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct, from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

MINNESOTA POLITICS.

JOHNSON IS ELECTED GOVERNOR BY SAFE MAJORITY.

All Other Republican Nominees are Elected by Safe Figures. All Congressmen Republican.

John A. Johnson's plurality over R. C. Dunn for governor of Minnesota will be not far from 10,000.

Belated returns have somewhat reduced his lead, but the figures as given in table today will not be materially reduced.

Hennepin county complete except eight city precincts, gives Dunn 13,407, and Johnson 22,292, a plurality of 8,885 for Johnson. This lead in Hennepin is much larger than looked for, and larger than the first returns indicated. The early figures from the outside counties have been scaled down somewhat in favor of Dunn, as returns have come in from the back districts. As a rule, these precincts show more of a tendency to vote the ticket straight. These changes in the outside counties are retrieved by the improved showing for Johnson in Hennepin.

JOHN A. JOHNSON.

R. C. Dunn and James A. Martin, his manager, have conceded Johnson's election. The Pioneer Press concedes the state to Johnson by 4,600.

The remainder of the republican state ticket is elected by varying majorities, including Ray W. Jones and the supreme court justices.

The next Minnesota house will consist of 107 republicans and twelve democrats. The Roosevelt wave swept away several democrats who had strong hopes of election, and the republicans have the strongest hold on the legislature that they have held in recent years.

Three of the democrats elected are from St. Paul and two from Minneapolis.

The senate will be as before, fifty-two republicans and eleven democrats. There was one election, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of A. F. Ferris, republican senator from the forty-eighth district. John T. Frater, republican was elected.

The legislature will therefore stand 159 republicans and twenty-two democrats on joint ballot, and it will take eighty votes to control the republican caucus.

Out of 119 house members sixty-three served in the last house, and eight others were in the 1901 legislature. There are forty-eight new members.

The following tables shows the latest returns on governor. Where only one figure is given, it is the plurality:

In the remaining districts the republican candidates ran pretty well with their ticket and were elected by good safe pluralities.

The vote in Hennepin, so far as congress is concerned, was not obtainable last night, except scattering precincts, but it is certain that Fletcher is elected over Kohler by a safe plurality.

Dunn held his own well in the Democratic districts, but strong republican districts were carried by Johnson, two to one, particularly in Hennepin county.

Minnesota will be represented in congress during the next two years by a solid republican delegation, the returns received during the night indicating that the republican candidates had been successful in every district in the state. In three of the districts, the fourth, seventh and ninth, there were no democratic candidates, and Congressmen Stevens, Volsted and Steenerson had things all their own way.

The only district in which there was a hot contest was the sixth, but the indications are that Congressman Buckman has been re-elected over Van Dyke by a plurality in the neighborhood of 2,500.

McCleary's strength in the second was more than "Jones of Rock" could overcome, but the hard campaign made by Jones showed results in many localities, where McCleary failed to get his party vote.

WHAT HE GOT THEM WITH

No Ailments in the Crowd, But the Fakir Had Something That Sold Quickly.

"Gentlemen," began the fakir as he arranged numerous bottles on a little table at a downtown street corner and prepared for business, "has anyone in this crowd got a toothache?"

No one answered, relates the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Has anyone an earache or a headache?"

Not a man had anything to say.

"Very well, then; but are you troubled with insomnia? Are you low spirited, and do you find yourself thinking of suicide?"

The appeal was like the other—in vain. The crowd elbowed each other, but no one advanced.

"Very well, gentlemen; very well. Now, is there anyone here who indulges in intoxicants and wishes to conceal the fact from the women folks? If so, I guarantee that one drop of this marvelous preparation placed on the tongue will instantly remove the odor of any—"

There was a mad rush from all directions, and for the next five minutes he gave change and passed out the bottles with both hands.

RIGHT ON HER DIGNITY.

American Heiress Had Inherited Just as Easy Money as Anybody.

"I understand," said the dignified English matron, "that your father made his money in—in trade."

"What do you mean?" asked the American heiress.

"That he amassed his wealth by buying and selling commodities that the common people needed."

"He did nothing of the sort!" retorted the angry heiress, relates Judge. "I want you to understand that papa did not work a lick for a cent of his. He made it every bit by skinning people with watered stocks. I guess that's just as easy money as the kind that you inherit, isn't it?"

An Honest Opinion.

Mineral, Idaho, Nov. 14th (Special).—That a sure cure has been discovered for those sciatic pains that make so many lives miserable, is the firm opinion of Mr. D. S. Colson, a well-known resident of this place, and he does not hesitate to say that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills. The reason Mr. Colson is so firm in his opinion is that he had those terrible pains and is cured. Speaking of the matter he says:

"I am only too happy to say Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me lots of good. I had awful pains in my hip so I could hardly walk. Dodd's Kidney Pills stopped it entirely. I think they are a grand medicine."

All Sciatic and Rheumatic pains are caused by Uric Acid in the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys and healthy kidneys strain all the Uric Acid out of the blood. With the cause removed there can be no Rheumatism or Sciatica.

Piso's Cure for Consumption is an infallible medicine for coughs and colds.—N. W. Samuel, Ocean Grove, N. J., Feb. 17, 1900.

Vast numbers of men mistake partisanship for patriotism.

Mrs. L. C. Glover, Vice Pres. Milwaukee, Wis., Business Woman's Association, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I was married for several years and no children blessed my home. The doctor said I had a complication of female troubles and I could not have any children unless I could be cured. He tried to cure me, but after experimenting for several months, my husband became disgusted, and one night when we noticed a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of similar trouble through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, he went out and bought a bottle for me. I used your medicine for three and one half months, improving steadily in health, and in twenty-two months a child came. I cannot fully express the joy and thankfulness that is in my heart. Our home is a different place now, as we have something to live for, and all the credit is due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours very sincerely, MRS. L. C. GLOVER, 614 Grove St., Milwaukee, Wis." Vice President, Milwaukee Business Woman's Ass'n.

Women should not fail to profit by the experience of these two women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

An Indiana Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: It is a pleasure for me to write and tell what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was sick for three years with change of life, and my physician thought a cancerous condition of the womb. During these three years I suffered untold agony.

"I cannot find words in which to express my bad feelings. I did not expect to ever see another well day. I read some of the testimonials recomending your medicine and decided to write to you and give your treatment a trial.

"Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to sleep. I have taken now six bottles and am so well I can do all kinds of work."—MRS. LIZZIE HINKLE, Salem, Ind.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. Address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free and always helpful.

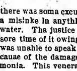
WASHINGTON LETTER

SOME TIMELY GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

A JOKE ON JUSTICE HARLAN

Used Ammonia as a Mouth Wash—Giant of the Supreme Court—Why the Diplomats Like Expositions.



WASHINGTON.—When Associate Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court, burned his mouth with ammonia the other day, which he had mistaken for a mouth wash, he laughed and said the joke was on him. Being a Kentuckian, he said, there was some excuse if he should make a mistake in anything that looked like water. The justice really had a pretty sore time of it owing to his mistake and was unable to speak for a day or two because of the damage done by the ammonia. This venerable jurist is probably the most conspicuous member of the highest tribunal in the world. On the 10th of December he will have served 27 years on the supreme bench, which is 11 more than the chief justice has served, while all the other members hold commissions of more recent date.

Justice Harlan is an enthusiastic golf player, and frequently walks from his residence to his favorite golf links, a distance of five miles, before breakfast. He regards this out-door sport as one of the most healthful that can be indulged in, and is an advocate of players going bare headed. This advice he gives to those who own a good suit of hair. As for himself, he says he neglected to follow the prescription when young, and his head is as destitute of hair, almost, as a shining billiard ball. "It stands to reason," said the judge, the other day, "that open air and sunshine direct upon the head should stimulate a growth of hair. They are necessary to vegetation of any sort, and I do not see why they would not be strengthening to the hair. I rather like the custom I have noticed recently of young men going bareheaded out of doors when riding, rowing or indulging in any other sport."

Justice Harlan is the giant of the supreme court. He is two inches over six feet, with shoulders a yard across, a tremendous trunk and great pillars of legs. His face is florid, with a dome of a forehead. His eyes are small and deeply set beneath his shaggy eyebrows. His face is clean shaven, and he always dresses, when on the street, in a black frock coat, and usually wears a soft, black, broad-brimmed hat.

A Remarkable Character Gone.

THERE died in Washington a few days ago a remarkable character, who lived in a remarkable way, in a remarkable house in the heart of one of the negro settlements of the city. The gentleman was Dr. Leroy Taylor, a man of the highest culture and education, who was prominent in the most refined circles in this city and well known in a dozen countries abroad. Eight years ago he lost his wife, to whom he was devoted, and after her death gave up his residence on fashionable Massachusetts avenue, and many of his acquaintances thought he had left the city. He had, however, secured a large but comfortable building situated in an alley in a negro settlement, which he fitted up with every article of luxury and comfort indoors, but the exterior of which was ugly and forbidding. On the side of the building he painted the word's "Taylor's Warehouse."

The windows and doors of this queer structure were covered with iron doors, and inside every precaution was taken to make the house burglar proof. Both outer and inner doors were double, each had a separate lock and key, and an expert cracksman might have spent a week before he penetrated to the innermost room. Inside the house the most elegant furniture abounded, and there Dr. Taylor had accumulated one of the most wonderful and interesting libraries in the country. One feature of the collection was nearly every known work on occultism, of which he was a devoted student, but never acknowledged himself a believer.

Dr. Taylor was a sportsman as well as a scientist, and he had collected many trophies of the chase from all parts of the world. In this retreat, save for the society of a few friends who enjoyed his library and visited him in the evenings, this man of culture and scientific attainments spent the last eight years of his life as a hermit. He left a fortune, of which 130 houses in Washington were a part.

Panama in the Campaign.

THE new republic of Panama has played a considerable part in the campaign just ended, and is attracting no little attention throughout the world. It has been rather grandiloquently termed "the youngest member in the galaxy of nations." It is interesting to note some of the data regarding this country. It looks rather insignificant on the map, but has the area of the state of Maine and the population of the District of Columbia. Its people are nearly all colored or mestizo. There are 40,000 Jamaicans in the republic, who are black in color and owe allegiance to Great Britain. There are also 2,000 Chinamen in the population.

This brand new republic is of course principally celebrated for the strip of land that is to be utilized in the construction of the great interoceanic canal. Consul General Gudger says that outside of this canal strip the interior of Panama is "practically in the same state in which it was when Columbus discovered the new world." The work of constructing a canal that has been conducted by the French Canal company in the past has been marked with a high record of mortality. It is said that every cross tie in the Panama railroad represents a life lost in the construction of that transportation line. Under Uncle Sam's regime, however, sanitary conditions are to be bettered and mortality will be reduced lower than in any of the tropical countries. Still there are natural conditions to encounter that can hardly be overcome. For instance, the rainfall in Colon is from 152 to 155 inches annually, an average of about 125 inches, which is three times as much as the normal rainfall in New York. With a modern system of drainage and strict sanitary regulations it is hoped to overcome these adverse conditions to some extent.

The Diplomats Like Expositions.

THE great Louisiana Purchase exposition was scarcely opened before the most vigorous preparations began for another international exhibition—the Lewis and Clarke exposition at Portland, Ore. Some people think the world's fair idea has been carried too far, but there is one class who welcome these big shows as a great aid in their work and a means of education. This class embraces nearly all the European diplomats who are assigned to posts in this country. They all make a point of visiting the big expositions held in America, as by so doing they become better acquainted with America generally, the extent of its territory and the infinite variety of its industries.

All the successful diplomats who come to Washington adapt themselves to American ways and take every opportunity of studying American institutions. When Baron Sternberg, the present German ambassador, was secretary of the embassy, he caused some little criticism because of his persistent mingling with Americans. At the Metropolitan club, to which nearly all the diplomats are admitted, it had been the custom for the foreigners to dine together. There was a sort of diplomatic club within the club itself. Sternberg did not take to this custom, and it was his habit to dine every evening with a number of Americans, prominent in various fields and he evinced a deep interest in what they had to say about their business.

"Sternberg, don't you know it's a rather radical departure for a diplomat to seek the society of Americans instead of that of his fellow diplomats?" inquired one of his associates one day.

"I am in this country to meet and know Americans, not foreigners," was the sharp reply of the German secretary, and he continued to dine with his American friends. It was his knowledge of American life, customs and politics as much as anything else that secured for Sternberg the place of ambassador. Emperor William, who is a man of progressive ideas, appreciated the fact that his representative's usefulness would be greatly enhanced by his familiarity with American ways and his acquaintanceship among prominent Americans.

The advantage of this American knowledge is appreciated by most of the European governments, and their representatives are instructed to travel through the country, observe its resources and enterprises, and for this reason most of them make journeys to such places as the St. Louis exposition, and are preparing to cross the continent to visit the Lewis and Clarke world's fair when it is opened.

Tough Case.

"Don't you think that the world is getting better?"

"Yes," answered the misanthrope. "It's convalescent, but it's a long way from a cure."—Washington Star.

The Democratic party in Red Lake county are liable to get a set-back in the next campaign, when the 11 Towns on the Red Lake Reservation get a turn at the bat.

There is an opportunity for light from the spiritual world: Robert G. Engersoll once said he would becom a Christian when Missouria went Republican. Will not some medium communicate with the Colnel and learn what he thinks of the result.

The Bemidji Pioneer still loyely champion the cause of Robert Dunn, the wofully defeated for governor and cites the fact that Mr. Dunn carried his home town of Princeton almost unanimously. Home endorsement is gratifying to be sure, and the Pioneer point is well taken though in the fact of the general frost adminestered to "Honest Bob" it looses much of its significance.—Crookston Journal.

Editing a newspaper is a nice thing. If we publish jokes people say we are ratle-brained. If we don't we are an old fossil. If we publish original matter, they say we don't give them enough selections. If we give them selections, they say we are to lazy to write. If we don't go to church, we are heathens; if we do we are a hyprocrite. If we remain in the office, we ought to go out and hustle for locals. If we go out we are not attending to business. If we ware old clothes, they laugh at us. If we ware good clothes they say we have a pull. Now what are we to do? Just as likely as not some one will say we stole this atiem from our exchanges—and so we did.

THE LAND OF PROMIS.

The newly opened Red Lake Reservation, begins to look more like an old settled country than a piece of wild land thrown open to settlement last July. A large number of the building that are being put up are by no means claim shanties, but good substacial farm residences, built with the entention of making a home of them. Next season will see fertile praire's dotted with teams turning over the land and preparing it for the next seasons crop. There is the best of water on all parts of the Reservation, which can be obtained by digging wells, from 12 to 24 feet.

The Railways are beginning to take an active interes in the country and are sending their cruiser's through the country taking levels and looking over the best route for a Road, two of them making their head quaters at the residence of George Singer on sec. 17 Town 152, for the last week

An Italian Game.

A traveler describes a game which is popular with the children of Italy. It is very like one played by American children. In Italy the game is called counting the eggs and is thus played: The children sit in a row on the grass with every pair of brown feet well in sight. The mother counts her eggs—that is, the children's feet—and then says: "Now, there are sixteen eggs. Be sure you don't eat any while I go to church." In her absence the children tuck up a certain number of feet under their frocks and say, "What a long time mother is at church!" She comes home, counts the eggs and says: "Why, how is this? I left sixteen, and now there are only ten." The children answer that a woman came while she was gone and offered four chickens for the six eggs, and they took her offer. "Where are the eggs?" asks the mother. "Down in the field," they reply. The mother goes to seek them, and no sooner is her back turned than all her children jump and dance about, shouting, "We've eaten them ourselves!" whereupon the mother has to catch them all and whip them. The last one caught has to be the mother the next time.

If the world would only give a man credit while he is doing things there would be more incentive to those who hustle.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Severed Windpipe

Strange Freak of a Stray Bullet In a Georgia Town.

It Struck a Little Girl, Though Intended For a Tramp. Her Life Saved by Clever Surgeons.

With her windpipe severed by a pistol bullet, little Nellie Thompson, the eight-year-old daughter of D. F. Thompson of Howell's Station, has lived for three months and will now recover, says the Atlanta Constitution. Her life was saved by means of a silver tube, which was inserted in her throat, and now the tube has been removed, and she will soon be as well as ever.

The case is one which has attracted the attention of nearly every physician in the city and is a great triumph of modern surgery. But a few years ago the little girl as soon as she was shot would have been given up to die. But a very short time ago such a wound would have at once been pronounced fatal. But when physicians saw little Nellie Thompson with her windpipe cut half in two and beheld her lying on a bed gasping for breath they quickly opened the throat below the wound and inserted a tube, which gave her relief and allowed her to breathe easily.

ONE OF THE BULLETS STRUCK THE CHILD IN THE THROAT.

The child is now at the Baptist infirmary and appears to have suffered very little from the wound. She will of course be marked for life, but this may be hidden by her dress.

The shooting of the little girl and her recovery makes a very remarkable story.

On July 3 of this year the child was standing in front of her father's home, watching a train passing by. Her father was at his work in a factory, and her mother was attending to household duties. When the train came opposite the house a man fired a pistol twice, and one of the bullets struck the child in the throat, cutting the windpipe in two and then passing into her shoulder. The mother ran to the child's assistance, and neighbors summoned a physician. It was seen that the child could live but a few hours, as she was slowly but surely gasping her life away.

The physicians who were called in to see her inserted the silver tube in the child's throat. The operation was a complete success, and the little girl was brought to the city and placed in the Baptist infirmary so she could be more closely watched.

The little girl was shot by J. F. McKinsey, a flagman on the Southern railroad. He was arrested the next day at his home. He admitted doing the shooting, but said he had no idea of firing in the direction of the child.

"I shot at tramps," he said, "and no one could regret more than I do that a bullet hit an innocent little girl. The railroad has been bothered a great deal of late by tramps, and I fired in the air to frighten two that I had seen trying to get on the train."

McKinsey gave bond, and his case is still pending in the state courts.

A damage suit for several thousand dollars has been entered against the railroad company by the child's father.

Little Nellie suffered a great deal at first, but the pain gradually went away after the wound began to heal. When the tube was inserted the windpipe was carefully stitched together, and it has been reuniting during the past three months. The physicians did not wish to take any risk, and they waited until they felt sure the windpipe had healed before they removed the silver tube.

The child will be kept in the infirmary until taken back to her home in the country.

The SPORTING WORLD

A Brilliant New Jockey.

Jockey Willie Davis is the latest phenomenon in the turf world.

This little boy invaded the east recently, his ability as a rider unheralded and unsung. But he has won more races for the number of mounts received than any of the crack jockeys and is now the popular favorite among New York race goers.

Davis can ride at less than ninety pounds. He has fine hands, a nice seat in the saddle and displays excellent judgment while piloting his horse in a race. In the estimation of Tod Sloane, the one time premier rider, Davis is the greatest jockey in the east. He displays rare patience while riding and never hustles or hurries his horses until they have settled down to their best stride.

JOCKEY WILLIE DAVIS.

His services were offered to Newton Bennington for $7,000, but since his great display of form the figure has jumped to $12,000. Davis has completely overshadowed Jockey Hildebrand, the former favorite, in the estimation of all turfmen.

It was reported recently in New York that Sydney Paget had made Davis an offer of a big salary to ride for him next season.

Conflicting Golf Tournaments.

The point raised recently by the directors of the Glen View club as to the functions of the Western Golf association in preventing the clashing of tournament dates among the clubs composing it is well taken. When a club goes to the expense of running a tournament it should be given a clear field, and, while the W. G. A. cannot exercise its jurisdiction over a purely club tournament, it can use its influence to prevent any clashing of fixtures, such as occurred recently when the Glen View fall tournament and the men's championship at Washington Park club were played simultaneously.

Chicago is particularly favored in the number of its clubs and in the matter of open tournaments. These latter are invariably an expense to the clubs giving them, and unless these outlays of money and time are rewarded by good patronage the clubs are likely to discontinue them or at least confine the dates strictly to the summer season when the boys are home from school and eager to compete.

The spring and fall tournaments are intended largely for the benefit of the veterans, and it is up to them to encourage the clubs to continue them.

Bottle Holder For Baby.

An inventor has introduced a bottle holding device which precludes the possibility of the bottle slipping from the baby's mouth accidentally. This device consists of a simple clamping arrangement mounted on a curved rod. At the opposite end of this rod is a flat head, which is inserted in a slotted support and is capable of adjustment. It is intended that the slotted support shall be fixed on the carriage in such a position that the bottle will be within easy reach of the child's mouth. Another holder can be attached to the crib and still another to a block to be placed on the floor when the child is lying there. In short, everywhere the baby is placed one of these bottle holders may be installed.

A mistake by hunters, sometimes is all right, when tbey mistake a timber wolf for a deer, as happened to Hans Johnson and F. C, Paulson on Monday last. Tyey were hunting deer in the woods east of bere and agreed to aeperate; Johnson to stay at a certin place aud shoot and Paulson to go around to an other place and drive. Paulson had not been gone long when a full grown timber wolf jumped across the trail, which Hans mistook for a deer and shot dead. When Paulson, whohadheard the shot came up expecting to find a deer he only found a large timber wolf, that will not go deer hunting this winter.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Tree Game is Fun.

You boys and girls can have lots of fun, some evening playing the following game from the Normal Instructor.

The grown folks in your family will enjoy it just as much as you will. Some of the questions are not very easy to answer either:

What is the most level tree? Plane.

Which is the brightest colored tree? Redwood.

Which tree suggests thoughts of the ocean? Beech.

What tree would we prefer on a very cold day? Fir.

What tree contains a domestic animal? Mahogany.

What tree might very properly wear a glove? Palm.

What tree is a pronoun? Yew.

Which is the most melancholy tree? Blue gum.

Which tree is a tale teller? Peach.

Which tree is an insect? Locust.

Which is the dandy among trees? Spruce.

Which tree is an invalid? Pine.

What tree never is barefooted? Sandalwood.

Which tree can best remember numbers? Date.

Which tree has passed through fire? Ash.

Which is the most ancient tree? Eldar.

Papa's Way of Spelling.

I'm having such a dreadful time
At learning how to spell!
You see, I'm just a little girl
And can't do very well.
I've been to school for two months now,
And so some words I know,
For teacher writes it on the board
And says "g-o" spells "go."

I've learned that "r-a-t" spells "rat"
And "h-e-n" spells "hen;"
That Rover is a "d-o-g"
And "B-e-n" is "Ben."
My teacher says she thinks that I
Am doing very well,
But papa spells a different way
And says: "Sh! Don't you tell!"

You see, my names are Alice May,
And my last name is Hall,
And yesterday I spelled them out
At school before them all.
My teacher said, "That's nicely done!"
And so at home last night
I spelled them out for my papa
And thought I had them right.

But papa said: "You're wrong, my pet,
For 'A-l-i-c-e'
Spells 'darling,' dear, and 'M-a-y'
Spells 'sweetheart'--don't you see?"
I told him what my teacher said,
But he declared, "Oh, no!
That's not the way your papa spells.
Your teacher doesn't know."

My papa wouldn't tell me wrong
Or say what isn't true,
And yet my teacher says that she
Spells just the way I do!
I'm 'fraid I'll never learn to spell,
No matter how I try,
If "darling" 's "A-l-i-c-e"
And "sweetheart" 's "M-a-y!"
—St. Nicholas.

Woman's Cruelty to Woman.

Another illustration of how mean a woman can be was given the other night when a young lady was calling on an elderly spinster who dresses and acts with unbecoming youthfulness. The spinster showed her visitor a beautiful handmade lace collar and said proudly, "This is over fifty years old."

"It is beautiful!" purred the girl. "Did you make it, dear?"—New York

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been obsolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. D., 697 North Pine St., Natchez, Miss.

THE PILLS THAT CURE RHEUMATISM

Mrs. Henry Story, of No. 532 Muskingdum Ave., Zanesville, Ohio, says: "My husband suffered from rheumatism so that he could hardly stand. His back hurt and he had such pain in his left arm that he could not rest night or day. The doctor did him no good and it was not until he tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that he was helped. Six boxes cured him completely and he has not had an ache or a pain since. We think the pills are the best medicine in the world."

Hats for gentlemen are now worn larger. They must be a size larger than formerly, so as to come down farther on the back of the head of the wearer. That is the latest authorized dispensation. On the whole, it is better than the old style of wearing a head too big for one's hat, as the saying goes. It dispenses with the implied swelling.—Boston Herald.

Good News for All.

Bradford, Tenn., Nov. 21 (Special)—Scientific research shows Kidney Trouble to be the father of so many diseases that news of a discovery of a sure cure for it cannot fail to be welcomed all over the country. And according to Mr. J. A. Davis of this place just such a cure is found in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Davis says:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed them. They have done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I had Kidney Trouble very bad and after taking a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I am completely cured. I cannot praise them too much."

Kidney Complaint develops into Bright's Disease, Dropsy, Diabetes, Rheumatism, and other painful and fatal diseases. The safeguard is to cure your kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills when they show the first symptom of disease.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Remarkable Coincidence Which Would Have Made a Bad Case for Innocent Man.

"Several years ago I took a late train from Boston to New York," said a man in business in Kansas City, according to the Star. "In the morning I was awakened earlier than usual by the porter, who said that a robbery had been committed on the sleeper during the night and that all the passengers would have to get up. Some one had taken six $100 bills from the clothing of a gentleman who occupied a berth in the middle of the car. Every section had been taken before he left Boston, and as the train had been almost constantly in motion it seemed certain that the person who had committed the theft was still on the car. The porter said no one had been aboard but the passengers and that none of them had left. It was proposed to search everybody. A man who had a berth directly opposite from the one who had been robbed objected. He told his name and said anyone might easily find that he was a man of good reputation. In the meantime some officers boarded the car and after a little sweating got the money from the colored porter, who was the guilty one. Then the passenger who had refused to be searched asked the officers to examine his pockets. This seemed strange, but he insisted. In an inside pocket they found six $100 bills. It was merely a coincidence that he should have the same amount of money as the other passenger had lost, and in exactly the same denominations, but he knew that under the circumstances he could hardly establish his innocence. How was that for a case of circumstantial evidence?

WITH DUKES AND THINGS.

Newcomer in Society Who Got Mixed Up with Persons of Title.

Mrs. Porkdollars has not as yet got over the novelty of riches. At the same time she is not inclined to admit this, and it is her great desire, relates London Answers, that the society with which she is now entitled to mix by virtue of her husband's wealth shall think she was born in the purple.

Recently she was at a big dinner party, and as she was being piloted from drawing-room to dining-room, she noticed a marble bust on one of the pillars in the hall.

"Do you know who that is?" she inquired of her cavalier.

"That is Marcus Aurelius," was the answer.

"Oh, is it, now?" ejaculated the lady. "But can you tell me," she added promptly, "whether it is the present markis or the late markis? I do get so mixed up with your dukes and things!"

WHY.

Snuggle down and listen,
Listen, Locks-o'-gold;
Snuggle down and listen,
Listen, Three-year-old;
Know what makes your eyelids weigh
Down this way at close of day,
Makes you tired out with play?
Were you never told?

Dearie, don't you know it,
Know it, Locks-o'-gold?
Dearie, don't you know it,
Know it, Three-year-old?
Know why slumber seals your eyes,
Know why darkness veils the skies,
Why the wild birds hush their cries?
Were you never told?

Dearie, now you're sleepy,
I believe I know;
Dearie, now you're sleepy,
I believe it's so
You will snuggle down and lie
In my heart and arms, that's why;
Still and happy, bye-o-bye,
Bye-o-baby-lo.

Daytimes you are running,
Running, Three-year-old;
Daytimes you are running,
Oh, my Locks-o'-gold,
Like a sunbeam here and there,
I can't catch you anywhere,
Till—you're sleeping, I declare!
Bless you! Locks-o'-gold.

In Days After

By JOHN L. MEYER

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

THE waves on old Lake Konowa rolled on and on, and over and over, in a sort of disconsolate melody. Bits of silver flashed up among the undulations close to shore, while far out golden and red hues intermingled unceasingly and formed a great patch of trembling brilliancy on the waters as the sun, languidly going to rest among the hills in the west, kissed them good-night.

A man and a woman sat side by side on a huge, flat boulder in the sands of the beach. But a moment before, deep in earnest deliberation, they had wandered to this spot, as on many nights before during the summer which was now waning, since coming to the lake and its peaceful, though populous, vicinity.

He had come to rest from a long and severe grind over a barrister's desk, and she was resting and trying to escape—how she wanted to escape, too!—from what people called a career. They both were successful people as the world says such things. But, sometimes the world does not know and cannot understand!

The man and woman met here, on the banks of this restful lake. It was not the first time they had met.

He, in the prime and strength of full-grown manhood, with earnestness and mastery ever written upon his massive face, was pleading a case as he sat there.

She, of the career and great beauty, she, who was usually the center of a large circle of admirers whom she despised—she was listening. It seemed then as if she were crestfallen; or even as if her very soul had just been somewhat bruised. Over her refined and delicate features glowed a soft, faint flush, and the deep thought written upon her countenance now and then, interposed by weary and careworn smiles, deterred not from her charms.

"We were boys and girls together," he began for perhaps the fourth, or fifth, or perhaps the sixth time that evening. He did not remember, or think to remember how many times.

"And we were sweethearts once—yes, sweethearts," he added, with just a trifle of a smile, and in tones that were caressingly tender. "Perhaps for the sake of the old—for the sake of our former affections, I should say, you will come to me now. Will you not? I have asked you again and again, Nellie, but will you not answer," he pleaded. "I want you for my wife. I would have you come to my lonely housings, and make cheer and comfort in them, where now is loneliness and gloom. I am plain and blunt with you. And, as you say, I know full well I cannot give you that which she and the little baby took with them to the grave over there in the old churchyard; down there where we two used to chase fireflies on such evenings as these—"

"I loved that little girl with all the fire of youth," he continued after a sigh, "until—we are not always youths and maidens. And, then, poor thing, she died, and the baby died, and—."

He stopped abruptly. The big, calm lawyer, whom people called a man of iron, who had often stood relentlessly against the pity of wretchedness, of poverty, of crime and of misery, was indeed deeply moved.

"You need not explain," she said quickly, "for I understand you. I have always and will always understand you, Mr. Lloyd."

"I wish you would call me Harry again, as you used to," he requested, tenderly, and then looked as if he wished he had not made the request. "Why should you not?" he added.

"I have never admired anyone more than you, let me tell you," she said. "And let me tell you that you made a woman of me when you left me—were taken from me by the little woman whose memory will always live with you—and with me. True, I am tired and I'm weary of all this 'career,' and, to be frank, I have wished many times through all these years that it could have been different between us. Can you believe me?"

"But now," she went on, without waiting for a reply, "I am a woman, and not a young—"

She hesitated and carefully watched him.

"You are more beautiful than ever," he interposed, earnestly, gazing admiringly toward her. For a moment there was a gleam of pride and satisfaction in her dark, soft eyes. Then she quickly resumed the thread of her words.

"Though I am far beyond those days and past all the babbling of youthful love and its circling dreams, I am not unmoved by what you offer me. I know too, that you can make of me a wife of excellent circumstances and position. I would like to get away from many things. I want no sentiment. Yet, although I admire you above all men, I hardly believe that I can become your wife."

Whatever she really thought may have been carefully hidden away.

He seemed to doubt the meaning of her words somewhat, but said nothing.

"What is lacking?" he asked, briefly.

"I can't—I can't quite tell you," she said. There was a tremble, almost a sob in her voice.

"It is rather a cold-blooded way to have," he said, impulsively, "but, Nellie, I love you, earnestly and truly and with the love of a mature, earnest manhood. I know now. It is beyond and above all that which has been in the past."

She was visibly surprised; for through all his pleadings that evening and since she had met him at Lake Konowa, he had not told her such words. Instantly her mind was in a turmoil. She saw before her not only the man she had once loved, but the man she loved now with all her heart and her great, responsive soul.

And yet, now there seemed to be a "but." She could not understand her irresolution.

Both were still for a long time. The shadows of evening fell rapidly and soon extended themselves over all the great expanse of water, and into the thickets and gullies along the shore. From far across the lake gleamed many cottage lights, like so many great stars of night. Nothing but the solemn "swish," "swish" of the waves broke the stillness, and even this was unnoticed by the man and the woman. Both were thinking, thinking.

Suddenly they were aroused from their reveries by the splash of oars but a short distance out, and then voices, sounding sweet and clear in the still autumn evening, could be heard singing, "Home, Sweet Home."

The man muttered something to himself as his absent gaze lingeringly sought for the source of the song. It was now too dark to distinguish objects on the lake; except, perhaps, a moving bit of a shadow from which it seemed, came the voices and the rhythmatic noise of the dipping oars.

"What were you saying, Harry," she asked hastily, yet softly.

This was the first time since they had been youth and maiden that she had called him "Harry." It had always been "Mr. Lloyd." A happy smile succeeded his stern, almost sorrowful mien, but was followed in a moment by the former look of contemplation, almost hard. She did not note the expressions, though eagerly looking toward him. His face was not now averted, but the deep shadows of evening served him as a mask.

"I was saying—nothing," he answered quickly.

"Please, don't let's be sad," she pleaded. "Even good friends must part, you know," she added, as if trying to make light of it all.

"Friends!" he said, turning to look out into the darkness on the lake.

Something akin to a fear, to insecurity oppressed her mind. "Once we were young—foolish, just little boys and girls," she said, just above a whisper. "Then you became a man, and I was—"

"Don't, Nellie," he said, rather absently. She did not answer. It seemed to her as if she were a girl again; and she could not now shake from her the return of the old, warm love for the man. She tried and tried. Even the memory and the dim picture of the little mounds in the old churchyard, and all these meant and had meant, which recalled with an effort and for a purpose, did not aid her.

The crisis had passed. She could have thrown herself into those arms and rested there indefinitely.

Then she sobbed. The man heard it not, for her sobs were well suppressed. And presently the man did hear them.

Far out in the blackness there was a single, dim spot of light for him. In this he saw, half-hidden in the twilight of a yesterday, a slight eminence in a churchyard. And, there, to the left of the path, bordered with grasses and flowers, were two mounds—a tiny one and another a bit longer.

"I am sorry, Nellie," he said tenderly, "that I have hurt you. Forgive me." The man had decided.

The woman had yet to know. Both saw by memory's eye the mounds in the churchyard and the picture of "Home, Sweet Home." But the thoughts encompassing the visions differed now. To him the memory of former years, when he had the baby and its mother, suddenly had become so dear and precious that he would never again tarnish them. Then, too, he had the woman's answer—as he saw the answer.

To her the vision of the past, with only one single incident—she could now call it an "incident"—to interrupt all the sweetness of it, was but the foundation for a happy, long future.

"Let us go back," he said, resolutely, and arose to go.

The woman's eyes suddenly filled with a look suggestive of the eyes of a frightened doe. Helplessly, forlornly, she looked at the man, but could see nothing. It was so dark everywhere. Then, in the flash of a moment, she understood. She had been dashed from an almost incredible height. But she reached the level easily—her former level. She came to his side and together they wandered slowly, without a word, to the cottages beyond the beach.

The waves out on the lake continued restlessly in their melody: "Swish-swish, swish-swish."

In Alabama, all children between the ages of 13 and 16 years shall not work more than eight hours during the night.

Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequalled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpe.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."—MISS FANNIE KUMPE, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900.)

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, nervous prostration, and all forms of woman's special ills.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.50 SHOES

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

The reason W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes are the greatest sellers in the world is because of their excellent style, easy fitting and superior wearing qualities. If I could show you the difference between the shoes made in my factory and those of other makes and the high-grade leathers used, you would understand why W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes cost more to make, why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater intrinsic value than any other $3.50 shoe on the market to-day, and why the sales for the year ending July 1, 1904, were $6,263,040.00.

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it—take no substitute. Sold by shoe dealers everywhere.

SUPERIOR IN FIT, COMFORT AND WEAR.

"I have worn W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes for the last twelve years with absolute satisfaction. I find them superior in fit, comfort and wear to others costing from $5.00 to $7.00."—B. S. McCUE, Dept. Coll., U. S. Int. Revenue, Richmond, Va.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS

DOMESTIC.

One by one the powers are lining up in hearty support of President Roosevelt's suggestion that another session of The Hague tribunal be convened to complete the work outlined by the first peace congress.

The barn and dog kennels at Hickory Valley, Tenn., have been destroyed. Six dogs, among them several Avent hounds, which had taken many premiums in the United States and Canada, were burned.

At Wartrace, Tenn., a passenger train struck a buggy containing three occupants. Miss Sadie Waite, aged 16, was instantly killed, and her brother, aged 12, was so badly mangled that he cannot recover.

Three children of Thomas Moran, living near Wayne, Neb., set fire to a barn in which they were at play. One was burned to death and the other two are in a serious condition.

Keen frost and heavy snow squalls are reported from all parts of the United Kingdom.

Rear Admiral John Russell Bartlett, U. S. N., retired, of Providence, R. I., died at the Marine hospital, St. Louis, from pneumonia.

Judge Kavanagh, of Chicago, passing on the habeas corpus application of union pickets, holds the railroad and warehouse act valid and says labor thugs may be punished under it.

The home of E. E. Thomas, prominent reformer of Omaha, was wrecked by a bomb, and leading organizations offer rewards aggregating $7,500 for the miscreant.

Nan Patterson nearly collapsed when skeletons were used in her trial in New York to illustrate the course of the bullet with which she is alleged to have killed Bookmaker Young.

Six men are under arrest as the result of a murder and other violence in connection with the Cincinnati and Kentucky molders' strike, and a warrant has been issued for J. F. Valentine, national president of the union.

The new United States cruiser Pennsylvania, on her official trip, averaged 22.43 knots an hour. Her contract called for 22 knots. This shows the Pennsylvania to be the fastest warship of her class in the American navy.

Prompted by jealousy, Frank Seylor, a negro farm hand, at Philadelphia shot and killed Henry Henderson, aged 23 years, and when he was overtaken by George Henderson, Henry's uncle, fatally shot him also.

The Janney Manufacturing company, capitalized at $125,000, and one of the largest manufacturing enterprises of Ottumwa, Ia., has passed into the hands of a receiver.

Sehren Profit, a prominent citizen of Moreland, Ky., was assassinated by unknown men while hauling water.

One person was killed and two others were so severely burned that their lives are despaired of in a fire in a house in Chicago caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

Samuel E. Glosser, an insane patient at Dunning, Ill., was strangled and beaten to death in a struggle with two attendants and another patient. Both of the attendants have been arrested.

Guy Loomis was injured and his servant killed in New York when an electric car wrecked his automobile.

Joseph F. Valentine, president of the Iron Molders' Union of North America, was arrested in Cleveland in connection with the alleged dynamite plot against shops in Cincinnati and Kentucky.

The board appointed to select a naval training station on the Great Lakes has unanimously recommended that the Lake Bluff site, 30 miles north of Chicago, be selected. The president has approved the selection.

The rowboat of William Briggs, the night ferryman between Port Huron, Mich., and Sarnia, Ont., was upset near the Sarnia dock, and four men were drowned.

Miss Nellie Stover, of St. Paul, Minn., laughed so heartily at a story told by one of a party of friends at her home that she dislocated her jaw.

Milt Shaw, a prominent lawyer of Hickman, Ky., shot and killed his uncle, Robert Buck. The dead man, it is claimed, went to Shaw's house with the intention of murdering him.

The grand jury at Towanda, Pa., found true bills against Mrs. Sophia Merritt, the mother, and Charles, Bigler, Alanson and Nancy Johnson, her children, charging them with the murder of Maggie Johnson, wife of Bigler Johnson, and her ten-year-old niece, Annie Benjamin.

By the explosion of the boilers in a cotton gin, in the town of Walters, a suburb of Vicksburg, Miss., two lives were lost and five persons injured.

A monument to the memory of President William McKinley was unveiled at the main entrance of Golden Gate park, San Francisco.

Fire destroyed the old Hill building in Minneapolis, Minn., owned by President J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern railroad, and occupied by three firms, incurring a total loss of $90,000.

Clifford Darling shot and killed his wife and then attempted suicide by poisoning at Pierceville, Md.

A number of men blew up and practically destroyed the building of the Southern Maryland savings bank at La Plata, Md. They secured $3,000 in cash.

Chicago won its final football contest of the year, defeating Wisconsin in one of the most sensational gridiron battles of the season by a score of 18 to 11.

Major Delmar, the world's champion trotting gelding, with an unpaced trotting record of 2:01 1-4, and a paced trotting record of 1:59 3-4, was sold at the Old Glory sale at the Madison Square Garden, New York, for $15,000.

James Wallace, who is alleged to have embezzled $30,000 from Edward M. Breitung, a banker of Marquette, Mich., was arrested in Liverpool, and nearly $25,000 of the amount is recovered.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Nebraska's official count of votes for president was finished Tuesday. President Roosevelt's plurality is 85,648.

Judge Holdom, of Chicago, decided that the use of voting machines in Illinois is constitutional.

Postmaster Coyne, of Chicago, says he expects to celebrate the Fourth of July in the new federal building.

The official canvass of the popular vote in Missouri shows Roosevelt's official plurality to be 25,600.

WASHINGTON LETTER

AFTER-ELECTION GOSSIP OF THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

THE NOTED SPELLBINDER

Politicians of International Reputation on Stump—Campaign Strenuosity—Telling the President How They Did It.

WASHINGTON.—Noted spellbinders who went up and down through the country during the presidential campaign just past, are comparing notes of their experiences and the work they have performed is being reviewed by the leaders of the parties. There have been some notable examples of endurance and effective campaign work, but the palm for strenuous campaigning lies between Mr. Fairbanks and Speaker Cannon. Mr. Fairbanks has his reward, and that for "Uncle Joe" is for the future to determine. The speaker's enthusiastic friends are discussing him as a possible candidate for the presidency in 1908, and base their claims upon the popularity he has achieved in his extended speaking tour.

The vigorous, spry and genial Illinois statesman is 68 years of age, but he has made a record during the past three months of which a youngster of 50 might be proud. Col. Casson, in charge of the speakers' bureau at congressional committee headquarters, finds that the spellbinders who worked under his direction made a total of 173 speeches, but of this number "Uncle Joe" made 74, or more than one-third of the total. In his private car, the "Iolanthe," which he entered on September 15, the husky speaker traveled over 11,000 miles. He spoke in over 40 congressional districts in the states of Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island. He made as high as eight speeches in a day and averaged about five hours' vigorous platform talking each day.

The admirers of Mr. Cannon claim that a man who can go through a performance like that will not be an old man four years hence. They also claim that no public speaker has had a more enthusiastic reception or demonstrated greater personal popularity than he has. His audiences have been of every character from the gathering of college professors and students to a meeting of the horny-handed workingmen in railroad shops and mining towns. He was a prime favorite among them all.

Taft as a Speaker.

ANOTHER popular platform talker, whose friends believe he is of presidential size, is big, burly "Bill" Taft, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary of war. Mr. Taft did not have the most catching topic to discuss, as he devoted most of his time to a discussion of the Philippine question, which involves dreary statistics and prosaic recitation of history and facts. He was able, however, to prove his geniality and natural democracy in mingling with the crowds, and no man has a happier faculty of making friends than he. He possesses that rare gift, which made the late James G. Blaine and the late William McKinley so popular, and that is the ability to recollect faces and names. Wherever he went he was sure to meet men to whom he had been introduced months and years before, and in every instance was able to recognize them and call their names.

Then Secretary Taft is one of the best hand-shakers in the world, and when he would grasp a chance acquaintance by the hand, call him by name and give him a cordial greeting, accompanied by his hearty and infectious laugh, it is safe to say he made an advocate of his nomination for the presidency four years hence. In the Philippines Judge Taft demonstrated his faculty of making friends by his hand-shake and genial greeting. The little brown men fairly worshipped this big six-footer and 300-pound American. The secretary entered into this campaign with great willingness and vigor. He is a firm believer in the Roosevelt administration and policy and, although not as gifted in oratory as many other of the stump speakers, he has an emphatic and convincing way of presenting facts. He is not much of a story-teller on the stump, but in private and small gatherings he can tell a joke with good effect, and is a most entertaining raconteur. He is on the list of those who may be boomed for the presidency in 1908.

The Patriots Coming.

Vote for Teddy.

PATRIOTS are now flocking to Washington to tell the president how much they did in the past campaign. This is the usual order of things, and Mr. Roosevelt is bearing up under it. The mixed conditions in the various states which at some stages of the campaign contributed no little doubt to the outcome have given these saviors of their country the excuse for claiming credit for the election. They are not a disinterested lot by any means, and the recitation of their political exploits is generally preliminary to a suggestion that they might be able to do great good for their country in some position that has a comfortable salary attached to it.

The president is able to treat all these suggestions with the utmost complacency. He has not a single political promise to redeem. Whatever of political work was performed, except by members of congress and members of the cabinet, was paid for, and there are no services that need to be requited with political office. The president's resolve that his administration should be unmortgaged by any pledges or promises included those of a political character as well as those involving any favor in the administration of laws or influence in future legislation. Mr. Roosevelt will be entirely unhampered in carrying out his ideals and bettering the public service.

It is understood that he has in contemplation a reformation in some of the branches of the public service, particularly the consular service. He has had investigations made and has himself given much attention to the personnel of our consular representatives, and is convinced that many changes can be made for the better, and he will probably reorganize the whole service by getting rid of dead timber and putting in intelligent, capable and active men who understand the responsibilities and duties of such an office. He appreciates that the development of American interests abroad lies largely in the hands of our consular officers, and it is his aim to build up the system so that it will be second to none in the world.

Voting in the House.

THE big membership of the house of representatives has compelled a renewed agitation of the question of voting in that body. The time wasted in calling the roll of 386 names is a serious consideration. Two roll calls on every question where the yeas and nays are demanded are necessary for a complete record. Members fail to hear their names on the first roll call, so they are given an opportunity to respond on the second. Then there are usually a number who find that even after the second roll call their names are not recorded and they demand that their vote be received. This all occupies much time and it is seldom that a roll call of the house can be completed within 30 minutes.

Various methods have been discussed of recording the votes without a member answering verbally to his name. It has been suggested that an electrical voting machine be adopted by which the votes can be recorded silently and quickly. All the member has to do is to press an electrical button at his desk and his vote of "aye" or "no" is registered. It is claimed that such an arrangement would avoid mistakes, make a more accurate record and save time which is regarded as valuable in the house.

In the senate no such innovation is likely to be countenanced. The upper body of the national legislature is extremely conservative and dislikes to forsake any of its traditions or habits. It has been called a body without rules because there is nothing in its code of government that restricts debate or that can force a vote on any question.

Wouldn't Fry.

Mrs. Grouch—If I should die you would never get another wife who would look after you as I have done.

MAD DOG THAT SPREAD TERROR

It Bit Several Persons and Numerous Animals and Led Pursuers a Chase.

A mad dog recently created a reign of terror in South St. Louis. Before it was killed it bit a woman and a little boy, two calves, a cow, several other dogs and a number of chickens.

The dog was killed only after a chase which threw the vicinity into a panic. Charles Strumpp, who killed the dog, narrowly escaped being bitten. The dog was rushing on him. One barrel of his shotgun missed fire. The dog was almost against the muzzle of the weapon when Mr. Strumpp fired the other barrel, killing the animal.

The dog, which was named Prince, belonged to Michael Simon. It began to act strangely and attacked the eight-year-old son of Adolf Jaeggi.

The dog sprang upon him and sank its teeth into the child's left arm near the elbow. The child ran screaming into the house, and word quickly spread that the dog was mad. Search was made for the dog during the day, but it was not found.

The next morning Mrs. Simon found Prince under the front porch. She attempted to fasten him to the railing of the porch with a chain. As she seized him the dog fastened his fangs in her arm. She held on and dragged him from under the porch. As she worked with her free hand the dog's teeth sank deeper and deeper into her arm, but she held him fast until she had attached the chain to his collar.

The dog had become frantic with the taste of blood and struggled at the chain until he freed himself.

He dashed into the vacant lot south of the house and bit a calf. The frightened calf bellowed with pain when the dog attacked it. A group of children on the corner saw Prince coming, and they ran screaming into a store.

By this time men were hurrying to the scene armed with rifles and shotguns and revolvers. Others carried large stones. The men and boys followed his tracks through the field, and every time the dog was sighted between cornstalks and willows which grow along the creek bank he was fired at.

On the north side of the bridge the dog ran into the yard of Mrs. Anna Morgan. He bit a calf which was tied in the back yard and ran on to the Iron Mountain railroad bridge. He crossed the bridge and ran around the Provident Chemical works and returned to the east bank of the Des Peres river.

The dog had distanced his pursuers, who were on the west bank of the river. When he appeared opposite he gave them the target they had waited for, and as he swerved to the left along the creek bank many shots were fired. Buckshot and rifle balls tore up the earth all around him, but he kept on to a point a hundred yards west of the Luxemburg bridge. Here for an instant he was hidden from view in the willows.

Again he appeared, running in the opposite direction, and again the bombardment began. Bullets rained all about him, but none struck him.

MEN HURRIED TO THE SCENE ARMED WITH SHOTGUNS.

Near the Gravois creek bridge the water is but a few inches deep, and when he reached this point the dog jumped from stone to stone across the river.

On the neck of land between the river and the creek he disappeared in the willows.

Charles Strumpp was standing, with his shotgun in his hands, on the west bank of the creek when the dog appeared on the other side.

Strumpp hastily cocked his gun. The dog started across the rocky bottom of the creek through the shallow water. Strumpp aimed and pulled the trigger. The gun missed fire, and Strumpp frantically raised the hammer of the other barrel and again pulled the trigger.

The gun exploded almost in the dog's face, and the animal staggered and fell at Strumpp's feet.

Dr. Horace Julian, who attended Mrs. Simon and the Jaeggi boys, thinks they will recover. Both wounds, however, are dangerous.

The animals which were bitten have been isolated to await developments.

OLD TIME BASEBALL.

IT WAS NOT SCIENTIFIC, AND FEW RULES WERE OBSERVED.

The Batter Was Known as the Paddleman, and the Pitcher's Object Was to Throw a Ball That Could Be Hit—"Bringing in the Side."

Time will not turn back in its flight, but the mind can travel back to the days before baseball or at least to the days before baseball was so well known and before it had become so scientific. There were ball games in those days in town and country, and the country ball game was an event. There were no clubs. The country boy of those days was not gregarious. He preferred flocking by himself and remaining independent. On Sunday afternoons the neighborhood boys met on some well cropped pasture, and, whether ten or forty, every one was to take part in the game. Self appointed leaders divided the boys into two companies by alternately picking one until the supply was exhausted. The bat, which was no round stick, such as is now used, but a stout paddle with a blade two inches thick and four inches wide with a convenient handle dressed on to it, was the chosen arbiter. One of the leaders spat on the side of this bat, which was honestly called "the paddle," and asked the leader of the opposition forces, "Wet or dry?" The paddle was then sent whirling up in the air, and when it came down whichever side won went to the bat, while the others scattered over the field.

The ball was not what would be called a "National league ball" nowadays, but it served every purpose. It was usually made on the spot by some boy offering up his woolen socks as an oblation, and these were raveled and wound round a bullet, a handful of strips cut from a rubber overshoe, a piece of cork or almost anything or nothing, when anything was not available. The winding of this ball was an art, and whoever could excel in this art was looked upon as a superior being. The ball must be a perfect sphere and the threads as regularly laid as the wire on the helix of a magnetic armature. When the winding was complete the surface of the ball was thoroughly sewed with a large needle and thread to prevent it from unwinding when a thread was cut. The diamond was not arbitrarily marked off as now. Sometimes there were four bases and sometimes six or seven. They were not equidistant, but were marked by any fortuitous rock or shrub or depression in the ground where the steers were wont to bellow and paw up the earth. One of these tellurial cavities was almost sure to be selected as "the den," now called the home plate. There were no masks or mitts or protectors. There was no science or chicanery, now called "headwork." The strapping young oafs, embryonic teachers, presidents and premiers were too honest for this. The pitcher was the one who could throw a ball over the "den," and few could do this. His object was to throw a ball that could be hit.

The paddleman's object was to hit the ball, and if he struck at it—which he need not do unless he chose—and missed it the catcher, standing well back, tried to catch it after it had lost its momentum by striking the earth once and bounding in the air—"on the first bounce" it was called—and if he succeeded the paddleman was "dead," and another took his place. If he struck it and it was not caught in the field or elsewhere in the air or "on the bounce," he could strike twice more, but the third time he was compelled to run. There was no umpire and very little wrangling. There was no effort to pounce upon a base runner and touch him with the ball. Any one having it could throw it at him, and if it hit him he was "dead"—almost literally sometimes. If he dodged the ball, he kept on running until the "den" was reached. Some of the players became proficient in "ducking, dodging and side stepping, and others learned to throw the ball with the accuracy of a rifle bullet.

No matter how many players were on a side, each and every one had to be put out, and if the last one made three successive home runs he "brought in the side," and the outfielders, pitchers and catcher had to do all their work over again. The boy who could "bring in his side" was a hero. No victorious general was ever prouder or more lauded. Horatius at the bridge was small potatoes in comparison. He was the uncrowned king. There were no foul hits. If a ball touched the paddle ever so lightly, it was a tick, and three ticks made a compulsory run. The score was kept by some one cutting notches in a stick, and the runs during an afternoon ran into the hundreds. If the ball was lost in the grass or rolled under a Scotch thistle, the cry "Lost ball!" was raised and the game stopped until it was found.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

What a Lie Did.

The madness of suicide as a relief from mental anguish was vividly illustrated years ago by an incident which occurred in an Italian town. Moretti, a tailor, was sent to prison on a charge of fraud. His sweetheart called upon the police officer to ask how long Moretti was likely to be confined and was told that it would be probably for many years. The policeman had been instigated to say this by the girl's mother, who disliked the match. Overwhelmed with grief and thereby driven to despair, the poor girl put an end to her life by poison. A few days later Moretti was released from custody, the accusation against him having been proved false. He returned home to find his affianced bride a corpse. Frenzied at the sight, he, too, destroyed himself. The lie wrought a double tragedy.

Lovely Liverpool Lasses.

Can you or your readers give any explanation of the remarkably heavy percentage of splendidly handsome ladies to be seen in Liverpool's city thoroughfares? When I say handsome, I refer not only to facial beauty, but also to symmetry of form and perfect physique. Walk from the Central station via Lord street to, say, the Landing stage, any day in the week, and you will behold a phalanx of superb womanhood. I am a Manchester man by birth and sentiment, but I must confess our city can produce nothing to compare with Liverpool's battalions of tall, lovely girls.—St. James' Gazette.

WOLVES HELD AT BAY

A GREEDY PACK OF ILLS SURROUND A CLERGYMAN'S WIFE.

Through the Arrival of Timely Aid She Escapes from the Terrors of a Prolonged Siege.

The Rev. W. A. Denton, of Girard, Crawford county, Kansas, tells the following story of a harrowing experience of one of the members of his family: "My wife," he says, "was assailed for fifteen years by a combination of ailments following the birth of our first child. The food she ate fermented in her stomach, she had frequent dizzy spells, her limbs were swollen and painful, her nerves were quite shattered, she was unable to sleep and she was many times on the verge of heart failure.

"Physicians gave her only temporary relief. Finally the favorable reports of some relatives and neighbors led her to make trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She experienced improvement almost at once. They relieved her sleeplessness, the smothering sensations have disappeared and have not annoyed her for years. They freed her from stomach trouble and the dropsical tendency was mitigated. The progress of the rheumatism, which had begun to make her fingers crooked, was stayed and the pain was banished. In every respect they gave her more help than any other remedy she had ever used, and she is today in better health than for many years.

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are our staple household remedy, and I am in the habit of recommending them to all who suffer from troubles like those which afflicted my wife."

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and repair shattered nerves are contained, in a condensed form, in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental strain, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold in boxes at fifty cents a box or six boxes for two dollars and fifty cents, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N.Y. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes never cured anybody.

TWICE-TOLD TALES.

James Jeffrey Roche was having a chat with President Roosevelt in the white house recently when the telephone began to ring. There seemed to be nobody at hand to answer it, so the president performed the duty himself. The visitor says that this conversation took place: "Well, what is it?" "Hello, is Archie there?" "No, he's not." "Who's this I'm talking to?" "The president." "Well, you'll do. Tell Archie to come over and play ball." And the president proceeded to execute the order as directed.

An irascible old colonel who used to play golf at Sandwich, on the River Stour in England, had a habit, common with many, of blaming everybody but himself for his bad strokes. Finally one day, becoming badly bunkered, he first took mighty vengeance on the turf with his club. Then, glaring around in expectation of the usual friendly comments, and nobody saying anything, he blurted out: "How can you expect a man to play decent golf on these cursed links with ships passing up and down the channel?"

Two fashionable women were recently calling on a new neighbor, and while awaiting her appearance a little girl came into the room, evidently bent upon the rescue of a doll recently abandoned there. Naturally she was viewed with some curiosity, and one of the callers, secure in the child's obviously tender age, spelled a low-voiced comment: "Not very p-r-e-t-t-y." To her horror, the small maiden paused on the threshold, and, fixing a contemptuous eye upon the culprit, remarked, with lofty composure: "No, not very p-r-e-t-t-y, but rather s-m-a-r-t!"

Prof. Simon Newcomb tells of the following incident which occurred during a recent visit paid by several young western women to the Washington observatory. "I had done my best," said the astronomer, "to answer with credit to the government and to myself the running fire of questions which my fair callers propounded. I think I had named even the remotest constellations for them, and was congratulating myself upon the outcome, when one of the younger members of the party interjected: 'But, as it has never been proved that the stars are inhabited, how do the astronomers ever find out their names?'"

RAILWAY RUMOR.

American railways handle about $12,000,000 worth of grain a year.

A new railroad planned to scale Grays Peak, near Dillon, Col., will attain a height at least 200 feet greater than the road which climbs Pike's Peak.

The experiment made about a year ago of employing Mexican porters in Pullman cars has not been successful. Forty Mexicans have entered the service of the Pullman company, and of that number only five are left.

Timothy J. Lee, an American locomotive engineer, has been held responsible for the wrecking of a train he was driving, near Zacatecas, Mexico, and sentenced to hard labor in the salt mines for four years. He was badly hurt in the wreck. His brother is a Denver police captain.

The Southern Pacific company has forbidden its men to bring cocaine into its yards or shops. It has been customary for the men to use it when they get a cinder in an eye, but it has been used for other purposes; and, besides, the doctors say, its unskilled use in the eye is dangerous. The men have the use of a well-equipped emergency hospital.

Of the sum which had been invested in the world's railroads at the close of 1902 it is estimated, according to the English Railway Magazine, that more than £3,760,000,000 has been spent on 184,000 miles of European railroad and £3,232,000,000 on the 337,000 miles owned by the rest of the world. On this basis it is found the roads of Europe represent an investment of £22,952 a mile, while those of the rest of the world average £11,402. Great Britain's railroads represent the highest cost per mile, figures standing at £51,368, while those of Belgium come next with £30,048.

ELANDS FOR SOUTHWEST.

South African Antelope That Are Able to Exist for Months Without Water.

The introduction of elands into this country is likely to be attempted before long, the department of agriculture having given its approval to the idea. All that is needed, says a Washington report, is money, which congress will be asked to give. The animals, which are the largest of all antelopes, would be valuable in the desert regions of the southwest as a source of meat supply. They require almost no water, are accustomed to forage for themselves and are quite tractable.

The eland is nearly six feet high at the shoulder when full grown, and weighs 1,600 pounds. It is not particularly swift (unlike most of its congeners), and a man can sometimes overtake it by running. Its flesh is considered a delicacy.

Commonly it browses in herds in the waterless deserts of South Africa, to which it is a native, its ability to get along for months together without water being a mystery. To some extent, doubtless, it depends upon moisture derived from succulent plants, such as the wild watermelon.

There are two varieties of eland, one being reddish in color and the other (known as the Livingston eland) striped. It is one of about 200 species of antelopes found in South Africa, where animals of this genus seem to have undergone the most extraordinary differentiation. Some of them are the swiftest runners of all animals and certain kinds are so wild and wary that hunters cannot possibly get within gunshot of them.

This may be done, however, with the aid of what is known as the artificial ostrich—a Hottentot contrivance, consisting of the skin of an ostrich arranged to disguise a man, who holds the head of the supposed bird aloft by means of a stick thrust through the neck.

Elands are becoming scarce in South Africa. Though they seem to be the most desirable species for importation into this country, there are others which might be valuable—notably the springbok, which is a graceful creature less than three feet in height, of a beautiful fawn color, a prolific breeder and suited to the conditions, climatic and otherwise, of the arid regions of Arizona, New Mexico and southern California.

HE WAS VERY PRUDENT.

And Yet, in Practice Mr. Shelley Occasionally Made an Awkward Mistake.

"My dear," said Mr. Shelley, the other evening, as he and his wife were about to leave the house for the theater, "in the first place, we will walk instead of taking a cab. By that means we will escape the germs and microbes of the cab."

"Very well, my love," replied Mrs. Shelly, relates an exchange.

"In the next place, I will smoke as we saunter along. Should there be any bacteria flying around in these winds, the odor of smoke will drive them away."

"How thoughtful of you!"

"In the third place, my dear, do not forget for an instant while in the theater that an alarm of fire may be raised. If such be the case, remember that I am with you; remember to obey me without hesitation. It will be my duty to save you, and saved you shall be."

Mr. and Mrs. Shelley proceeded to the theater. When they reached the place of amusement the prudent Mr. Shelley threw one of his gloves away at the door and put his half-consumed cigar in his coat-tail pocket in place of it. The curtain had scarcely gone up on the play when he began sniffing and snuffing, and presently he said:

"My dear, I think I smell smoke."

"I think I do, too," replied Mrs. Shelley.

"I think it comes from an overheated furnace."

"Yes."

"And that a volcano of flame will soon be sweeping through this theater. Smelling smoke, my love, and being a prudent man, my idea is that we should leave the place at once. Let us stroll out in a careless way, as if we had got word that the baby at home was in a fit, and be careful not to precipitate a panic."

They strolled out. There was no panic. They had walked a street or two on the homeward way, when the prudent Mr. Shelley observed:

"My dear, the smoke seems to follow us."

"Yes, it does."

"I wonder—I wonder—"

And then he jumped up and down and yanked off his overcoat and grabbed at the tails of his cutaway, and three or four men helped to tear the coat off and wreck him, and make him feel that the sun would never shine again.

Most Sober People in France.

According to a statistician, the people of Paris are among the most sober of France. Each one of them only drinks annually, on an average, 217 litres of wine, and the same quantity is consumed by the inhabitants of Bordeaux and of Angoulême. Nice is the thirstiest place, for the consumption there is 276 litres per head. Next to Nice come St. Etienne, in the Loire, with 265 litres. In the matter of spirits only eight litres represent Paris in the statistics, as against 17 for Havre, 16 for Nantes, 14 for Boulogne-sur-Mer, ten for Calais, and so on.—London Telegraph.

No "Graft" in Australia.

There does not seem to be much "graft" in Australia. All its public men who have died in recent years died poor. The late Sir George Dibbs, whose will was probated recently, left only about $10,000.

OFFICIAL CUP OF COFFEE.

Proper Method of Brewing the Beverage to Be Determined in Washington.

By direction of the secretary of agriculture the bureau of plant industry is to take up at once experiments to determine the best manner in which to brew a cup of coffee. To this end, says a Washington report, F. L. Lewton, a specially trained expert, has been engaged. The view of the department is that a cup of coffee is good because of the manner in which it is brewed, rather than from the quality of the bean from which the beverage is made. It will be appreciated by all persons acquainted with the art and mystery of coffee-making that various conditions, apparently trivial in themselves, have to be taken into consideration in producing the beverage.

For instance, in the process of roasting the beans may be more or less damaged by being under or over done, and the flavor of the coffee thus impaired to a corresponding degree. Hence the necessity for ideal conditions in roasting. Again, the effects of water at various temperatures upon the ground coffee and the proper period for infusion will, for the first time in the history of coffee-making, be thoroughly and accurately ascertained.

The retention of caffeine, the active principle of coffee, to which it owes its stimulating effects, and the elimination of the caffeotannic and caffeic acids, which are not only injurious to health, but communicate an unpleasant, bitter taste to the beverage, will be, of course, the principal objects.

MURMURS FROM GROUND.

Strange Sounds Heard for Many Centuries on the Red Sea Borders.

A singular phenomenon occurs on the borders of the Red sea to a place called Nakous, where intermittent underground sounds have been heard for an unknown number of centuries. It is situated about half a mile distant from the shore, whence a long reach of sand ascends rapidly to a height of 300 feet. This reach is about 800 feet wide and resembles an amphitheater, being walled by low rocks.

The sounds coming up from the ground at this place recur at intervals of about an hour. They at first resemble a low murmur, but ere long there is heard a loud knocking, somewhat like the strokes of a bell and which at the end of about five minutes becomes so strong as to agitate the sand. The explanation of this curious phenomenon given by the Arabs is that there is a convent under the ground here and that these monks ring for prayers. So they call it Nakous, which means a bell.

The Arabs affirm that the noise so frightens their camels when they hear it as to render them furious. Philosophers attribute the sound to suppressed volcanic action—probably to the bubbling of gas or vapor underground.

Her Mistake.

"Mamma," said a little West side girl yesterday morning, "I can't go to school to-day. My tooth is achin' awful."

"All right, Lucy," said her mother, "get your jacket and I'll take you to a dentist and have the tooth pulled."

The child hesitated a moment and then said: "Oh, mamma, I made a mistake. It ain't my tooth—it's my head that's achin'."—Kansas City Times.

A Teacher's Testimony.

Hinton, Ky., Nov. 28 (Special)—It has long been claimed that Diabetes is incurable, but Mr. E. J. Thompson, teacher in the Hinton school, has pleasing evidence to the contrary. Mr. Thompson had Diabetes. He took Dodd's Kidney Pills and is cured. In a statement he makes regarding his cure Mr. Thompson says:

"I was troubled with my kidneys for more than two years and was treated by two of the best doctors in this part of the state. They claimed I had Diabetes and there was little to be done for me. Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they did for me was wonderful. It is entirely owing to Dodd's Kidney Pills that I am now enjoying good health."

Many doctors still maintain that Diabetes is incurable. But Diabetes is a kidney disease and the kidney disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure has yet to be discovered.

Miss Whittaker, a prominent club woman of Savannah, Ga., tells how she was entirely cured of ovarian troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, MISS EASY WHITTAKER, 604 39th St., W. Savannah, Ga."

No physician in the world has had such a training or such an amount of information at hand to assist in the treatment of all kinds of female ills as Mrs. Pinkham. In her office at Lynn, Mass., she is able to do more for the ailing women of America than the family physician. Any woman, therefore, is responsible for her own trouble who will not take the pains to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free.

A letter from another woman showing what was accomplished in her case by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I am so grateful to you for the help Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me that I deem it but a small return to write you an expression of my experience.

"Many years suffering with weakness, inflammation, and a broken down system, made me more anxious to die than live, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound soon restored my lost strength. Taking the medicine only two weeks produced a radical change, and two months restored me to perfect health. I am now a changed woman, and my friends wonder at the change, it is so marvellous. Sincerely yours, MISS MATTIE HENRY, 429 Green St., Danville, Va."

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women prove beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

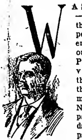
WASHINGTON GOSSIP

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND THE OPPOSITION NEWSPAPERS.

ADMINISTRATION'S POLICY

To Consult Party Leaders on Federal Appointments—Regret Over Retirement from the Senate of Senator Cockrell.



WASHINGTON.—"The idea that the 'Blank' is my personal organ is entirely erroneous," is the way President Roosevelt discredited the alleged authoritative statement of a big New York newspaper the other day. This newspaper had opposed Mr. Roosevelt during the campaign with all the vigor of its editorial columns, but since the sweep of election day it has been descanting upon the great responsibilities that rest upon the president, has undertaken to advise him as to his duties and has put out what some were inclined to regard as a forecast of what the president would do on the tariff, currency and other questions.

The solicitude of this journal and other newspapers that were particularly strong in their attacks upon him before election is very amusing to the president. He gets a little out of patience with them sometimes and expresses wonder that they do not appreciate just how presumptuous they are. According to their way of thinking before election Mr. Roosevelt was actuated by anything but patriotic motives in his public actions and he was a bad sort of a man to be president of the United States. But since the people by a popular majority of over 2,000,000 have decided that Mr. Roosevelt is just about the sort of American citizen they want to see at the head of the government, these [illegible] him and the government too.

Anyone who supposes that the great majority he received has turned Mr. Roosevelt's head will be corrected in his ideas if he calls at the white house. The genial, energetic young American who has been president for over three years is just the same today as he was before the election and the same as he was when he was in public life 20 years ago. He is the same, plain, honest, straightforward, wholesome man who seeks advice and follows it when it squares with his idea of what is right.

"De-lighted!"

THERE is one little change that the visitor at the white house will notice in Mr. Roosevelt. He no longer declares that he is "de-lighted," as he has abandoned that much quoted and caricatured expression. The president, who is as sharpwitted as anyone, was not slow to appreciate the fact that this expression of his was being used by the satirists and funny men in the public press and he trained himself to refrain from it. Nowadays when visitors offer their congratulations and speak of the wonderful triumph of the election, Mr. Roosevelt smiles as broadly as ever, but says:

"I am very, very happy over the result. It was most gratifying, most gratifying." He carefully avoids saying that he is "de-lighted," as that might convey the impression that he regarded the result of the election as a personal triumph, which he does not. The president is constantly told by his admirers that it was a personal triumph, but he is more inclined to attribute it to a vote of confidence by the people in the principles of the party which he represents and in the administration which was started by McKinley and which he has faithfully endeavored to carry out on the McKinley lines.

While the president will take the oath of office anew on the 4th of March next without, he says, a single pledge, political or otherwise, to redeem, it does not mean that he will depart from his past political policy. He is a firm believer in party organization and he will do, as he has done in the past, what he can to strengthen the republican organization in a legitimate way. He proposes to consult party leaders, particularly senators and congressmen, on all federal appointments, his only requirement of them being that they present to him high grade candidates for office and men who will fill federal positions with honor and ability.

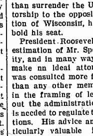
Regret for Cockrell.

THERE is universal regret expressed that the fortunes of politics will retire from the senate the veteran statesman from Missouri, Senator Francis Marion Cockrell. He is a democrat of the old school, but he enjoys the respect and love of his associates of the opposite political faith to the highest degree. Except upon measures of purely political significance, Senator Cockrell knows no partisanship. The administration has had no stronger supporter of those policies that are intended to build up the country and put the army and navy in a high state of efficiency than the Missouri senator.

No man in the senate could be missed more than Mr. Cockrell. His has been a familiar figure in that body for 30 years. It will seem lonesome without him. The picture of this gaunt old Missourian bending over his desk, scanning closely every printed bill and document, has been an interesting one for many years. Nothing in the way of legislation escapes his notice, and as an editor or proof reader of bills and reports he is without an equal. He will detect a faulty sentence or an incorrect statement where a dozen of his colleagues would pass them over. He studies the most trivial bill with as much care as he devotes to an appropriation of millions of dollars, and his honest criticism and investigation of all money bills have earned him the title, usually applied to those who want to hold down appropriations, of the "Watch Dog of the Treasury." This does not mean, however, that he is parsimonious, for he is ready to vote for appropriations for public improvements and the support of the government that would astonish a less liberal-minded man.

Senator Cockrell is the personification of the mythical "Uncle Sam." He is tall, lank, and wears the goatee that always adorns the chin of this national character. It is a sight to see the old senator atop a street car. He [illegible] and, stretching out his long arm, works it up and down like the signal of a railway semaphore until the car is brought to a stop. He has always lived a frugal life, and while most of his colleagues in the senate are given to indulgence in the good things of life, Mr. Cockrell ever since entering that body has made his midday luncheon of two big red apples. He will go out of the senate a poor man.

Spooner for Cabinet.



SENATOR SPOONER, of Wisconsin, who was one of the stalwart leaders in the recent bitter political fight in his state of Wisconsin, which ended in the defeat of his forces, is talked of for the position of attorney general in Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet. Mr. Spooner says he is pretty well disgusted with the politics of his home state, and it is argued that he would welcome a change that would take him out of that field. He has four years more to serve of his term and it may be that rather than surrender the United States senatorship to the opposing republican faction of Wisconsin, he will continue to hold his seat.

President Roosevelt has a very high estimation of Mr. Spooner's legal ability, and in many ways the latter would make an ideal attorney general. He was consulted more frequently perhaps than any other member of the senate in the framing of legislation to carry out the administration's ideas of what is needed to regulate trusts and corporations. His advice and work were particularly valuable in perfecting the Panama canal legislation and the administration felt confident that after its provisions had been studied by him they would stand any test as to their constitutionality.

If he should leave the senate the latter body would sustain a distinct loss. He is by long odds the best extemporaneous debater on the floor of the senate. There is not one of the opposition who can successfully cross swords with him on any great issue. His mind is a perfect encyclopedia of constitutional and legal lore and no statement of his, involving a point of law, is questioned on the spur of the moment. His arguments always send the other lawyers of the senate to study their law books, and it is very rarely that they can controvert his statements. One of the delights in the senate chamber is to have Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, and Senator Spooner indulge in a running debate.

More Behind.

She—And are you really so much better since you returned from your trip abroad?

He—Yes, indeed! I'm quite another man, I assure you.

She—Well, I'm sure all your friends will be delighted to hear it.—Cassell's.

The dirty work that is being done now days, to try to defeat senator Clapp from re-election, is being done by politicians, not the people. We noted in the last campaign that when a representative asked for votes he usaly mentioned the fact, that he was for Moses Clapp for U. S. senator.

A teacher in one of the country schools not many miles from Duluth has what she believes to be the brightest class of youngsters in the state. She comes to the city almost every week and always has a new story to tell about "her kids," as she affectionately terms them. Several days after election the teacher had some trouble with the boys of the class. "Boys she said, "you must all be good and industrious, and there is no telling what high position you may attain Even the presidency is within your grasp. Now all of you who will try to behave as boys should who have a chance to become president, stand up."

All rose but one boy.

"Why, Johnny" said the teacher, surprised, "don't you want to be president?"

"Why don't you stand up then?

"Aw, what's the use? I ain't got no show. My paw's a Democrat.

Holmes' Inspiration.

There is hardly room for doubt that Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was encouraged to write his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" by reading "Table Talk"—being "The Discourses of John Selden, Esq., or His Sence of Various Matters of Weight and High Consequence Relating Especially to Religion and State." The work belongs to 1634-54 and treats of such topics as articles, baptism, Bible, bishops, books, ceremony, Christmas, clergy, confession, conscience, creed, duel, epitaph, faith and works, gentlemen, holy days, idolatry, Jews, juggling, king, law, lectures, liturgy, marriage, money, oaths, oracles, poetry, popery, presbytery, proverbs, religion, sacraments, trade, truth, university, wit and women. For the thousandth time, "Nothing new under the sun!"—New York Press.

Good Watch Stands Hard Knocks.

"The knocks a good watch may be subjected to and yet come out uninjured are most remarkable," said the jeweler as he attached his glass to one eye and peered into the workings of a timepiece. "This watch is supposed to have fallen a distance of more than a hundred feet, and I can detect not the slightest disorder. A few days ago a countryman brought a watch to me which he wished examined. He had lost it in a field, and it had lain out there, exposed to the elements, for six weeks, part of the time being submerged in water. It was in perfect condition, not even a speck of rust in the case."—Columbus Dispatch.

A Knowing Dog.

Traveler—Here, landlord, what's the matter with your dog? I've driven him away a score of times, but he always comes back again and sits close up to my armchair watching every mouthful I take. Do turn him out and let me have my dinner in peace. Landlord—Please, sir, my Carlo is such a knowing brute. I expect you have got the plate he generally eats off.

Considerate.

"Why don't you take me with you sometimes of evenings, dear? I get so tired of staying at home alone."

"Because I can't afford to dress you as well as myself I don't want to be seen around with a woman dressed as you are."

A Tragic Lament.

"Did you say that you were wedded to your art?"

"Yes," answered Stormington Barnes, "I'm tied to it for life, all right. But I don't hesitate to confess that the honeymoon was over some years ago."—Washington Star.

LOVE WAS THE BEST

The young women around the tea table had discussed the reigning tenor, touched delicately on the last scandal and were now busy with Jack Rodney's name and money. A decision of the court had given his inheritance to another heir, and then he had gone into Wall street and been caught on the wrong side of the market.

"I can't picture it," said Sally Littlejohn, balancing her little gold spoon. "What will become of him? The spoiled darling! Why, he will have to go to work!"

"Work!" said Julia Montressor. "With those aristocratic hands? What sort of work? Why, what will he do?"

"The only thing he can do—stop living."

"Oh, Bab! How horrid of you! Jack Rodney, the dear, splendid fellow! Has any one seen him? I wonder what he is doing now?" said Sally.

"Walking on his uppers, don't they call it?" said Bab.

"Every one else was letting Will de Luys reap what he sowed, but Jack made good all the misappropriation—isn't that the next term? And if it was Jack's yacht that went cruising up the Mediterranean and had princes on board for guests it was his steamer that took those children from Seven alleys down the harbor every afternoon all the hot summer"—

"Where is Jack? Does any one know?" said Sally.

"Going to Texas, ranching. He has cleared up everything and starts at once, some one said. He'd like it if it were play, the poor fellow!"

"Oh, it is really getting dark!" exclaimed Arabella. "We must be going. Why, Felicia, how white you are! I should think you were ready to faint yourself!"

"The sudden light," murmured Felicia.

It was while the last dinner guests that night were still saying tender nothings to Bab that a slender shape slipped swiftly down the steps and passed along in the shadow of the houses like herself. Felicia shrank behind her veil from every passerby. A half hour's rapid walk, and she ran up some steps to make sure of the number, rang the doorbell, said something explanatory to the man who answered it, passed in and followed him to the door up one flight of the broad, low stairway there.

A man sat there with his head bowed upon his arms as they lay along the table in an attitude of utter dejection. He did not look up when the door opened and closed. But the girl crossed the room quickly and, standing behind him, stopped with her arms laid across his shoulder.

"I am not a dream, Jack," she said, bending lower, her soft, cold cheek touching him. "I am Felicia."

For one moment there were silence and rapture here. And then the transfer men came for the luggage.

"And this parcel, too," said Felicia.

"Felicia!" he exclaimed.

"This parcel," she repeated. "You know I cannot go back after coming here," she said when they were alone again. "I have burned my ships behind me."

"Do you mean it?" he exclaimed joyously. And then his tone fell. "I thought—oh, yes, certainly. I must take you home before my train leaves."

"You will take me home? My home is with you, Jack."

"You don't know what you say," he answered her. "Oh, no. I cannot accept the sacrifice!" the eager gleam of his eyes belying his words.

"Jack," she murmured, "the sacrifice in my coming here unasked!"

"Don't make it so hard for me!" he exclaimed. "An hour ago it was the darkness of despair. I was going to bury myself in the ranch, as if it were a grave. Now I shall go out in that new life, radiant with the happy knowledge and my hope. And even if I should never prosper enough to come for you," he said after a moment, taking a step toward her, "if you should weary in the long waiting and give some other man the love I have won—well, I could bear it perhaps, remembering and living again in this night's joy."

"Some other man!" she exclaimed, unclasping his arms and looking for the hat and jacket that had been thrown aside. "I am going with you, Jack. If you can live summer and winter in a tent in Texas, I can too. I have the fit clothes in that parcel. I have my jewels here. They were my mother's and are mine, and I have the right to take them, and their price will hinder my being a burden."

It was a year after that Felicia sat one night in the refulgent moonlight of the high prairie after a day of heat tempered by the high gulf breeze over 300 miles of flowers.

"Are you sorry I came?" she said. "Are you?"

"Do you know it seems to me precisely as if we were living on an outskirt of the holy land, with flocks and herds and the fig and pomegranate and the tender grape giving a good smell?" she said.

"Are you sure you never regret?" he asked.

"Regret? Well, I confess I should like to have heard Bab read out our marriage notice at breakfast—and Bab so bitter the day before for fear of it! But regret those days of littleness and idleness and gossip, the confining clothes and cramping life—

"I—I miss my father," she said, and her lip quivered.

"But even," she said presently, "if he never forgives us or comes to see us, and if poor Bab should never come down here and learn what it is to live, I shall be sure, my dear, that love is best."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A LESSON IN MANNERS.

The Way a Clever American Woman Managed a Duke.

A story which belongs to a time several years ago when an English duke was a much sought after personage in New York society is told by Mr. James L. Ford in "The Brazen Calf."

This duke, contemptuously noting the eagerness with which New Yorkers fawned upon him, had formed the habit of going out to dinner without troubling himself to put on evening dress. A lady had invited him to dinner without knowing of this peculiarity and was awaiting his arrival when her butler opened the door and cast a glance at her over the heads of intervening guests which said plainly that something was wrong.

She hastened into the hall to find the duke standing there clad in the checked sack suit and flaming red tie which had seemed to him "good enough" for a dinner party of American calf worshipers. This woman, however, had presence of mind, and she advanced upon him radiant and smiling.

"No," she said decisively as she took him by the hand; "I won't accept any excuses. You've come round to tell me why it is that you can't dine here to-night, and it's ever so much nicer of you to do that than just to send a note. The dinner's a little late, and you've just time to go home and dress and be back here before we begin."

The nobleman opened his mouth to reply, but his hostess shut him off in a second: "No; you needn't make any explanations or excuses. Remember, you've only twenty minutes, so you must hurry."

A moment later the astounded duke found himself hurrying toward his hotel and perhaps wondering what new social force it was that was impelling him in that direction.

A WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW.

The Things That Most Impressed a Feminine Tourist Abroad.

"What impressed you most?" said the gushing girl to the woman who had just returned from a trip abroad. "You must have seen such wonderful things."

The woman who had traveled thought deeply a few minutes; then she said slowly: "I think it was the lack of napkins in Scotland. Yes, that was it. My dear, there isn't a sign of a napkin on the tables in Scotland. If you ask for one, you may get it, and then again you may not. I was entertained in the homes of some of the finest people in Scotland, and never a napkin did I get.

"The next most impressive thing was the size of the coins in England. I used up a great deal of good, nervous energy trying ways and means to stuff those cart wheels into my little purse. One day, when my pocketbook had become unusually clumsy, I became almost hysterical, and that night I dreamed that I was using belt buckles for the coin of the realm.

"There's one queer thing, though. You know I never could get it through my head how one made double change. You know what I mean—some one gives you too much change, and then you give them some money, and it's all right or something of that sort. Well, I never could understand that process in good United States money, with which I'm more or less familiar, but over there in England I accomplished that feat again and again without a tremor. Don't ask me how I did it. I don't know. It just came to me. Can I do it now in United States money? No, I can't. I left that special ability behind in England."—New York Tribune.

SPORTING RIGHTS.

Only Source of Income of Many Titled English Families.

Were it not for the enormous sums paid for fishing and shooting rights many people of ancient names and goodly title would, in the most literal sense, have no means of livelihood whatever, and only the other day one of the best known property agents of the west end of London drew up for the writer a list of a dozen people mixing in society of an exclusive kind, every penny of whose income is derived from the letting of sporting rights.

Nearly all the money thus expended has been made in commerce, and the agent referred to above showed documentary evidence proving that there are lots of men who do not mind paying as much as £100 for every deer, £3 for every trout and £20 every salmon they kill, plus the sport of killing them. One of the most remarkable features of this letting is the fact that only about one in every hundred of the owners of ancient sporting rights ever enjoys his privileges as a sportsman. He either prefers or is compelled to part with such privileges, and those who take advantage of them are nearly all people in business.

This renting of fishing and sporting has even extended down to comparatively humble people in the provinces. Many a small Yorkshire farmer is being kept, and well kept, not by his farming, but by the letting of some comparatively insignificant sporting right.—London Tit-Bits.

Now They Are Strangers.

Edyth—Jack proposed last night, and after I accepted him I thought he would never stop kissing me. Mayme—How nice of him! But, then, that's the way he always does.

Stingy Steps.

An old man was passing our house one afternoon, taking exceedingly short steps. My little cousin watched him for several minutes and then said, "Mamma, doesn't he walk stingy?"—Exchange.

A Bird Friendship.

The rector of Woolstone, Mr. Gilbert Coventry, told me of a wild rock dove which one of his stable boys had reared from the nest. It slept in the open, however, and had full liberty. Soon the good things on the rector's table attracted it, and it would appear through the open window at mealtimes, taking hot soup with much zest and even sipping sherry from a wineglass. At night it often slipped in and slept in the rector's bed on its back under the coverlet. One Sunday morning during the reading of the lesson the dove flew swiftly through an open window into the church and settled on the rector's head. Broad smiles spread over the faces of the elders and audible titters came from the youngsters. A gentle touch sent the bird down to the edge of the clerk's desk below, where it sat undisturbed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later:—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. EVERY WALK IN LIFE.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer, living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say I was more than surprised and gratified to notice the back ache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped."

Doan's Kidney Pills sold by all dealers or mailed on receipt of price, 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

AN INVITING PROSPECT.

Will Canada in the next quarter of a century take the place of the United States as the great wheat exporting section of the western hemisphere? Everything points that way. In the opinion of experts the United States has reached high water mark as a wheat exporting country. The increasing population over there has reached the point when home consumption is becoming annually greater in proportion than the increase in wheat production. As a matter of fact wheat production is decreasing over there as the land becomes more valuable and by reason of the demand for other forms of produce for home consumption. It is said that the wheat crop this year is not more than 70 per cent. of the crop of 1901 and much below the crops of 1902 and 1903. It is estimated that this year the United States surplus for export will not be over 100,000,000, which is less than any year since 1878 with two exceptions. Not only is this the case, but a considerable quantity of the best Canadian wheat is being imported into Minnesota and also Chicago.

All this tends to keep the price of wheat near the dollar mark, and "dollar wheat" is the loadstone that will attract farmers to the Canadian Northwest, where land is cheap and can be farmed on a wholesale basis, particulars of which may be had from any agent of the Canadian Government. The reduction of American exports will have the double influence of increasing Canadian production and keeping up the price. It constitutes a roseate prospect for this country, and needs no exercise of optimistic enthusiasm to foresee the near expansion of the Dominion into the actual position of the "granary of the empire."

The Pills That Cure

Sick Nerves

Mrs. Dora B. Frazier, No. 140 Althea St., Providence, R. I., has been cured of Nervous Prostration by the use of

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills For Pale People.

She says: "I suffered for three years and was several times at the point of death. My weight went down to seventy-five pounds. I was afflicted with nervousness, dizziness, suffocating spells, swelling of limbs, sleeplessness and irregularities. I had a good doctor but he could not help me. The first box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did me good and I continued their use until I was cured. I am now perfectly well."

These pills are a specific for all disorders of the nerves from neuralgia to partial paralysis.

THE OLD FAITH.

"Thus saith the Lord: Stand ye in the ways and see, and look for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls."—Jeremiah 6:16.

As a man who is travel weary, as a man who is travel worn,
Who carries anew the galling loads he over the road has borne,
Who carries anew each burden when counting them o'er alone,
While trudging his way through bog and fen and stumbling on bruising stone,
As a man who is travel weary remembers
the first fair way
So a man goes back to the simple faith that was all his own one day.

The simple faith he cherished; the faith in the grass and sky,
The faith that he held in innocence with never a doubting "Why?"—
When valley and hill and forest and everything that is
Was wondrously rich with a breathing truth, and all of that truth was his;
When twilight and dawn were peaceful,
and his were the dreaming stars—
The faith that he held unconsciously ere ever his soul had scars.

As a man who is travel weary, he stands on a lonely height,
And longingly looks at the stretching way
that ends in the fading light,
And yearns for the pleasant pathways as once he sought out their end—
The faith that he held in an honest hold as one does a faithful friend.
He turns to the unforgotten, the years
when he wrought no wrong,
And seeks for the faith that once was his—all simple and sweet and strong.

THE INITIATION

By BELLE MANIATES

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

HELEN WHITE, most becomingly gowned, came into the music room after dinner, shaded the lights, turned on the gas logs and arranged the music on the piano.

"Nell, I see you are making elaborate preparations to receive callers," said her brother Fred, banteringly. "I'm sorry to convey to you the disappointing intelligence that there is no prospect of your receiving a call to-night—that is, from a man. All the men you know are otherwise engaged."

Helen's face fell perceptibly.

"Oh, Fred, what is going on?"

"Can't tell you."

"Stag?"

"Nell," he laughed, putting on his outer coat and taking a cap from his pocket, "you always ask too many questions. Would it give you a ray of comfort if I told you it was purely stag?"

But Helen swept from the room without condescending to speak further on the subject. Fred was surely the most provoking of brothers. He was so mean about introducing her to the "new man," Wendell Lane, who was a friend of Fred's. He was not a society man, so she had no prospect of meeting him at dances. He was extremely good looking and so desirable in every way, but Fred had stubbornly refused all her entreaties to bring him to the house.

"He doesn't care for girls—sensible fellow—and besides you've turned down hard two or three of my friends whom I have introduced to you."

"I wonder what's on to-night!" she thought, going to the library window and flattening her face against the pane. Through the dusky gloom she discerned Fred's vanishing figure faintly outlined. He wasn't going toward the street, but across the lawn.

"To the stable!" she thought. "And the cap! He only wears that when he drives or goes on 'expeditions.' Perhaps he is only going for a drive with some other man and said that about no one's calling to tease me."

She hoped devoutly that some one would call. The time was so propitious. Her father and mother were away on a journey and now Fred out for the evening. She did everything she could think of to pass away the time of that awful interval from seven to eight—the hour of suspense. She read the evening paper, played the piano abstractedly with her foot on the soft pedal that she might hear the doorbell. Finally she went upstairs to see what her little brother Tom was doing. She found him putting on his coat and hat.

"Why, Tom, where are you going?"

"Out with some fellows. Mother said I might have one night out, you know."

"Yes. Everyone is having a 'night out' but me," said his sister, with a mirthless laugh.

"Well, I guess Fred'll be back soon," said Tom, consolingly.

"What makes you think so?" she asked, curiously.

"You just look in the den and you'll see," he replied, with a chuckle.

Helen quickly sought Fred's den and gazed in consternation at the preparations and supplies for a spread that she encountered.

"The plot thickens!" she thought, following Tom down stairs. He went out the front door and from the window she saw him, too, cross the lawn and go in the direction of the barn.

"Well," she exclaimed to herself, "the whole White family seem to be drawn barnward. I think I had best follow suit."

She sat down for a few minutes to plot and ponder. Fred had evidently planned a sub rosa feast, else he'd have asked her to help in the preparations. He probably counted on returning after her retiring hour, which was early when there were no callers. It occurred to her that he was going to drive first. Well, she could prove or disprove that suspicion right away.

She stole out across the lawn, down the graveled walk, around the curve and out to the stable which was at considerable distance from the house. It was entirely deserted. She had a key with her and easily found a lantern in the carriage-room. Investigation showed her that the team of dapple grays were quietly resting, as was Fred's own horse.

She locked the door and extinguished the lantern. When she came out she was startled to see three or four men come out of the old root cellar. She drew back into the shadows with palpitating heart and felt quite faint from fear until, as the men passed, she recognized Fred's voice. Then her fear was superseded by curiosity and excitement. She felt that she was on the track of the mystery.

As soon as the figures had disappeared from sight she relighted the lantern and sought the cellar. The door was partially open and a faint streak of light shone out. She looked in. Lying on a pile of lumber was a man, bound hand and foot, gagged and blindfolded.

Again terror seized her and she was about to flee when she recognized the form as that of Wendell Lane. In an instant she had removed the gag from his mouth and the bandage from his eyes.

"Isn't this Miss White?" he asked. "You'll pardon my not rising. I am—"

"Mr. Lane," she replied. "But how can I cut these cords. I cannot untie them."

"There's a knife in my pocket."

Helen soon severed the stout cords that bound him and he was on his feet.

"Quick!" he exclaimed. "Let's get away before they come back!"

Leaving the lantern they sped away in the darkness, not pausing until out of range of the cellar.

"Do tell me why you were in there and bound so cruelly."

He laughed.

"I have recently joined the club of which your brother is a member, and they were initiating me to-night. They took me in that place, telling me it was the vault of the cemetery, and I almost believed them. This was only the preliminary to several pleasant things they had in store for me."

"Oh, what a good one on them!" cried Helen, ecstatically. "Fred thinks he is so 'foxy.' He has a banquet spread out in his den for you all. Won't you come up to the house. We'll make way with the 'eats.'"

"Indeed I will!" was his hearty rejoinder. When they reached the house and enjoyed a friendly chat, he suddenly exclaimed:

"When they come back and find me missing they'll get out a search warrant. Won't they come here?"

"Oh, no! Fred will never look for you here!" declared Helen, confidently.

"Why not?"

She blushed a little but frankly told him how she had tried in vain to prevail upon her brother to bring him to the house. Presently they adjourned to the den and Wendell made caviar sandwiches and opened olives while Helen made the coffee.

As they were enjoying a cozy little meal they heard the outer door open.

"Fred!" cried Wendell, in consternation.

"No," said Helen, listening, "its Tom!"

"Come up here, dear!" she called. "This is Mr. Lane, Tom. You can sit down and have luncheon with us, if you like."

"Oh, Helen!" cried the lad in a tone of wild excitement. "I've got more to tell you. You see I belong to a secret society and we were going to meet at the root cellar. I got there first and I saw some men carrying another man in there and he was tied and gagged. The men went away and left him and I ran and got our fellows all together, and we thought it was a murder, so we went and told the men in the grocery and they got a policeman and all went to the root cellar, but the man wasn't there. They found the rope and the gags, though. They are going to find out all about it."

Wendell and Helen listened to this recital with delighted interest and at its close gave vent to laughter.

"Well, 'taint no laughing matter," said Tom, indignantly.

"You'll think it is when we tell you," assured Helen. "Tom never tells anything," she explained to Wendell.

"I'd never tell anything Helen told me not to; she's a brick," declared Tom.

"I think so, too," agreed Wendell, and he proceeded to relate the circumstances of the initiation to Tom, who highly appreciated the situation.

"I really think you had better go now," advised Helen to Wendell. "Fred may be coming any minute now."

"And may I come soon—to-morrow night?" he asked, earnestly, as he was taking leave.

Later, Helen, locked in her room, laughed softly to hear her brother and his companions go into the den and give exclamation of regret and consternation.

"Fred," she said, languidly, at breakfast the next morning, "Tom and I got hungry last night and we found such lots of delicacies in your den!"

But Fred was cross and irresponsive. That evening when he came home he was dumbfounded to find Wendell there chatting away and on friendly terms with Helen.

"Where did you two meet?" he asked, bluntly.

"Oh, Mr. Lane introduced himself to me one time when we were thrown into each other's society," she said, demurely, and Tom didn't even smile.

Drought Costs Big Sum.

Weather can often be reduced to figures. The last Australian drought was calculated to have cost sheep-farmers the enormous sum of twenty-five millions, and the rain which followed it to have been worth half a million an inch. A day's rain in midsummer has cost the Midlands nearly £100,000. At the same time compensating advantages will be derived by other industries.—London Tit-Bits.

Arlington, Ind., Dec. 5th (Special).—Mr. W. A. Hysong, the photographer, who moved here recently from Sapp, Ky., is firmly of the opinion that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the greatest Kidney Remedy the world has ever known.

"In the years 1901 and 1902," says Mr. Hysong, "and for some time before I was afflicted with Kidney Trouble. My joints were sore and stiff and I finally got so bad I could not turn in bed without assistance. In the Spring of 1903 I was induced, by a friend, to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after using one and one-half boxes I was and am still completely cured. Several of my neighbors, too, used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in every case they did as recommended."

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with a terribly painful, itching, and bleeding eczema, my body and face being covered with sores. Never in my life did I experience such awful suffering, and I longed for death, which I felt was near. I had tried doctors and medicines without success, but my mother insisted that I try Cuticura. I felt better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap and one application of Cuticura Ointment, and was soon entirely well. Any person having doubt about this wonderful cure may write to me. Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 216 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." (Mrs. Fairbanks is one of the most successful and highest salaried travelling saleswomen in the West.)

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues, and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I suffered more than tongue can express with kidney and bladder trouble. My physician pronounced my trouble catarrh of the bladder, caused by displacement of the womb. I had a frequent desire to urinate, and it was very painful, and lumps of blood would pass with the urine. Also had backache very often.

"After writing to you, and receiving your reply to my letter, I followed your advice, and feel that you and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have cured me. The medicine drew my womb into its proper place, and then I was well. I never feel any pain now, and can do my housework with ease."—MRS. ALICE LAMON, Kincaid, Miss.

VOL. 4. GULLY, POLK COUNTY, MINN., FRIDAY, DEC. 16, 1904. NO. 40.

HAPPENINGS OF A WEEK IN BRIEF

SUMMARY OF MOST INTERESTING EVENTS OF PAST SEVEN DAYS.

WHAT CONGRESS IS DOING

Progress of the Russo-Japanese War in the Far East—News from All Parts of the Union and the Latest Foreign Intelligence.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The last session of Fifty-eighth congress begun. Bill introduced in house providing for appointment of special commission to inquire into and ascertain amounts of money expended by both parties at all elections for presidential electors from 1892 to 1904 inclusive.

The president's message was read in both branches of congress. The house adjourned without transacting any business. The senate received a preliminary report from the merchant marine commission. Senators Knox, of Pennsylvania, and Crane, of Massachusetts, successors of the late Senators Quay and Hoar, were sworn in.

In the senate Senator Platt (N. Y.) introduced a bill providing for a reduction of the congressional representation of the southern states on the ground that many of the citizens of those states are deprived of their right to vote. A joint resolution was presented providing for a commission to investigate campaign contributions. In the house the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was reported. The bill carries $28,838,709.

An attempt to secure consideration of the pure food bill by the senate failed. The appointment of Crum as collector of the port of Charleston, S. C., was discussed at length in executive session. The house discussed the legislative appropriation bill. Pay of stenographers to house committees was reduced from $5,000 per annum to $3.000.

The house passed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill practically as it came from the committee. A resolution was adopted to adjourn on December 21 until January 4, 1905, for the usual Christmas holiday.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

The London Daily Telegraph's correspondent before Port Arthur, telegraphs that all of the Russian battleships and cruisers, together with the gunboats Giliak and Fusadneek, were sunk or destroyed, and that only the torpedo boat destroyers remain intact.

The assault on Port Arthur, beginning November 26, was the most furious of the siege. The Japanese gained the interior of several of the main forts, only to be repulsed by the bayonet after a hand-to-hand struggle lasting from noon until daylight the next day.

A Japanese force sent to turn Rennenkampff's flank was led into an ambush and repulsed with a loss of 1,500 dead.

The capture of 203-metre hill and assault on Ehrlung and Keekwan forts are said to have cost the Japanese 15,000 men.

THE CHADWICK AFFAIR.

Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was arrested in New York by federal officers. She is charged with aiding and abetting officials of the defunct Citizens' national bank, of Oberlin, O., with embezzling $12,500 of the institution's funds.

Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was locked up in the Tombs in New York, following her arraignment before United States Commissioner Shields and her failure to give the $15,000 bond required by him.

The mysterious package held by Iri Reynoles and said to contain $5.000,000 in securities belonging to Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was opened in Cleveland and found to be worthless.

Banker Beckwith, of Oberlin, confesses that he and his cashier signed for Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick two notes for $500,000 each that bore the name "Andrew Carnegie." Mr. Carnegie emphatically denies that he has signed any such notes or had any transactions with the Cleveland woman. Beckwith and Cashier Spear were arraigned in court, pleaded not guilty and were held to the grand jury in bonds of $10,000 each.

FRIGHTFUL LOSS.

Trenches at Port Arthur Are Captured at the Point of the Bayonet.

Paris, Dec. 12.—The Port Arthur crisis is shaking the faith of the French ministry critics who heretofore have been positive that the fortress was impregnable. They say there is an inner line of defenses, whereas the British critics deny that an inner line exists. There is reason to believe that the French view is based on the recent personal observations of Lieutenant de Cuverville, the French naval attache at Port Arthur, who mysteriously disappeared. Prior to his disappearance he furnished the headquarters staff with elaborate reports leading to the belief that the fortress was capable of further lengthy endurance.

Headquarters of the Japanese Third Army before Port Arthur, Nov. 28, via Tientsin, Dec. 12.—(Probably held at headquarters for censorship.)—The general assault on Port Arthur, which began at noon, Nov. 26, is still in progress. In the first series of assaults an attempt was made to capture the forts at Rihlung and Kekwan mountains by penetrating the principal line of fortifications surrounding them, and to envelope the city from the east. At the same time a strong force pushed up the gorge of Shishi valley between two fortified ridges and attacked to the west of Rihlung mountain, officially called Sungshui mountain, with the intention of enveloping the city from the west. The attempt failed, after the most furious fighting that has been witnessed since Port Arthur was invested. The fighting lasted from noon of Nov. 26 until after the of the following day without cessation.

SCORES DEER SLAUGHTER.

Duluth Land Register Says City Hunters Kill Solely to Get Antlers.

Duluth, Dec. 12.—Former State Senator W. E. Culkin, register of the United States land office here, has returned from a hunt for big game on the north shore in Minnesota, and is filled with indignation at some things regarding hunting he heard and saw while there. He says:

"City sportsmen should be severely condemned for the practice of hunting big game for the sake of the heads for trophies. They have been killing deer at points where it was impossible to get the carcasses out. The hunters merely cut off the head with the antlers, to prove their prowess as Nimrods. A remedy for the existing state of affairs would be hard to devise, but if one can be proposed it would be a mighty good thing.

"The mere slaughter of valuable game animals for the antlers certainly will not be approved by true sportsmen."

Stabbed in a Quarrel.

Cokato, Minn., Dec. 12.—Oscar Gustafson of this city was fatally stabbed while walking towards his home with four companions. One of these, Harry Foster, is sought by the police, and the Minneapolis authorities have been asked to look for him.

WASHINGTON LETTER

SOME CURRENT GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

THE COMING INAUGURATION

It Is Always a Big Quadrennial Jubilee — Two Hundred Thousand Strangers Are Expected—Possible Cabinet Changes.

WASHINGTON.—Washington is preparing for its quadrennial jubilee. The rest of the country elect the presidents, but the citizens of the capital city claim the privilege of inaugurating him in great style. From now until after the 4th of March the inauguration committee will be one of the most important bodies in the United States. There is great rivalry to secure the place of chairman of this committee, and also conspicuous positions upon it. Denied the right of franchise, the citizens of the District of Columbia can only look on during the excitement of an election, but they come out strong when the people of the country send their president here to be inaugurated.

Mr. Charles C. Glover, a prominent real estate man and banker of the district, will head the inauguration committee, and his corps of assistants will number most of the prominent business men and public-spirited citizens of the capital city. The expenses of the inaugural ceremonies and pageant are guaranteed by a public subscription, and it is calculated that $60,000 will be required to induct President Roosevelt into office on the 4th of March, with all the honors and glory befitting a man who has received the greatest popular indorsement of any presidential candidate in a century. This large amount of money is likely to be refunded, as there are several sources of revenue connected with the inauguration.

In the first place, the inaugural ball, if everything is favorable, can be counted on for $50,000 or $60,000. There are usually sold some 10,000 or 12,000 tickets to this function at the rate of five dollars per ticket. If the weather is propitious and a proper hall is secured, the hall will itself approximately reimburse the contributors to the inauguration fund.

The Inauguration Ball.

JUST now there is some uncertainty as to where this great ball is to be held. Ever since the erection of the big brick barn, known as the pension office, that structure has been utilized for inaugural halls. It is a huge quadrangle, with a court in the center, which can be converted into an immense ballroom, and which lends itself to a very handsome scheme of decoration. Congress has prohibited the use of the hall for public functions, however, and unless that action is reversed some other place will have to be secured. The holding of the ball in the pension office has hitherto resulted in stopping work in that important bureau virtually for a week. This was thought to be unfair to the thousands of old soldiers who have claims awaiting adjustment, and it is also regarded as unfair to the clerical force of the bureau, who have been compelled to take an enforced vacation during the inauguration season.

There has been some talk of building a huge temporary structure or wigwam for the purpose of holding this hall. One thing that militates against this proposition is the memory of the inaugural ball held at the time of Gen. Grant's second inauguration, in 1873, when an immense temporary wooden building was erected and used. The temperature dropped to five or six degrees below zero on inauguration night, and it was impossible to heat the building sufficiently to make it either healthful or comfortable. Numerous cases of pneumonia resulted from exposure in that building, and not a few deaths occurred. It is impossible to forecast the kind of weather that will prevail on the night of the 4th of March long enough before to insure the safety and comfort of a temporary structure. Even the very efficient weather bureau of the government would not undertake to say two months before inauguration what the temperature would be on the date of the latter event. There is a painful recollection of a slip made four years ago when Chief Willis L. Moore the day before inauguration predicted "McKinley weather" of the brightest kind. The 4th of March opened up with a snowstorm, hail and rain, and it was about the nastiest day that had been experienced in Washington for years.

Big Crowd Expected.

WASHINGTON is counting on at least 200,000 strangers to be here on inauguration day. The crowds on this occasion have been constantly increasing in late years, and the above estimate is not at all extravagant. It is the one great national show day in four years. The parade is one of the greatest features, and it is a sight worth witnessing. The journey of the president from the white house to the capitol, seated in a handsome open carriage drawn by four magnificent horses, and an escort of cavalry, opens this fine sight, and then comes the trip back, when the president, after having taken the oath, leads the column from the capitol up Pennsylvania avenue to the white house, where he enters a reviewing stand and reviews the parade, which sometimes lasts five or six hours. Every branch of the army and navy is represented, usually with a full regiment each of infantry, cavalry and artillery from the army; several companies of United States marines, and battalion after battalion of blue jackets from the war vessels from within reach of Washington. Then come the various national guards to the number of 15,000 or 20,000, followed by political and civic organizations in fancy uniform.

The post of honor in this pageant is that of escort to the president. It is about settled that Black Cavalry, troop A, of Cleveland, will again have this honor. It acted as escort to President McKinley at both of his inaugurations, and performed similar service for Presidents Hayes and Garfield. It is a fine body of horsemen, each member owning his own mount, and each animal being a splendid black. In addition to this, the president has indicated a desire to have a troop or at least a section of his old rough riders, most of whom are now in the Fifth United States cavalry, to act as part of his escort. He would like to have the boys appear in the uniforms they wore when they served under him in the Spanish war.

Cabinet Making.

THERE will be some good jobs distributed by President Roosevelt after the 4th of next March, as there are sure to be some changes in high positions in the government service at home and abroad. The majority of the present cabinet are likely to remain and receive their portfolios anew on the 4th of next March, but it is known that there will be some changes in that body. Secretary of State Hay has been invited to remain, and has accepted the invitation. This fact has created much satisfaction, not only in this country, but among the important foreign powers, who all admit that John Hay is now the greatest living diplomat of the world. Secretary of War Taft will continue, but there is some doubt about Paul Morton retaining the secretaryship of the navy. His old railroad ties are very strong and the Santa Fe management wants him back to help run that system. Attorney General Moody may hold over until the new administration, but there are strong inducements for him to retire and accept a partnership in a law firm in Boston that has been held open for him for several months. Secretary Shaw, of the treasury, is to be invited to continue as the financier of the administration, and he will accept.

Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock may give up his seat in the cabinet, in which case it is believed that Secretary Metcalf, of the department of commerce and labor, will take the portfolio of the interior. National Chairman Cortelyou is to be made postmaster general, while Secretary of Agriculture Wilson can stay where he is as long as he likes. Mr. Wilson is regarded as the best head of the department of agriculture the government has ever had, and the great work that he has inaugurated, especially in the west, in the way of introducing new crops, new methods of cultivation, and, above all, his advocacy of irrigation, make him the farmers' friend, and a great howl would go up if President Roosevelt should leave him out of his next cabinet. There is no danger, however, that the president will let such a valuable man go.

Rate per year in advance.—$1.00.

The Red river vally representatives, in the next legislature will ask for an appropination of $100.00 for the drainage of state swamp lands in the district. The state could not appropiate money for a more worthy purpose, as evry dollar put into drainage will bring big returns.

Congressman Steenerson has introduced a bill in congress, provideing for the extension of the commutation privilege of the homestead law to lands in the Chippewa reservations in Minnesot opened sice May 17,th 1900, the date of passage of the free homes act. The last named act provides for the commutation after fourteen months residence residence on lands opened prior to its passage. Mr. Steenersons expects to get the bill through at this session of congress as it is so fair and just that he apprehends no difficluty in passing it, as it gives all settlers equal rights. The big congressman from the ninth has surely proven himself thefriend of the homesteader.

A Busy Secretary.

A Democratic member of congress for whom President Roosevelt has a high regard called at the White House during the recent campaign about a war department matter of considerable importance to his district. The question involved was one in which the secretary of war has discretionary powers, but those temporarily in charge of the department were not disposed to take the Democratic representative's views of the situation.

"Mr. President," he exclaimed, "I know that if I could present this matter personally to the secretary of war he would see it right. When will he return?"

The president leaned toward his caller, and his face became tense with seeming earnestness and feeling.

"Mr. Congressman," he said, speaking slowly and with the emphasis a man uses when he wants each word to find a lodging place, "the secretary of war now is and for the next thirty days will be absent from the capital engaged in offensive political activity."—Washington Post.

Lincoln's Response.

An enthusiastic supporter from Buffalo made the trip to Washington during the civil war to see President Lincoln. The visitor, whose name was Johnson, had prepared this polite speech to address to the president as he reached him at the public reception: "Tha people of Buffalo, sir, believe in Almighty God and in Abraham Lincoln."

The president gave an extra warm grasp of his visitor's hand, whispering in his ear, "You tell them that they are more than half right."—Buffalo Courier.

Bartholdi's Art.

The late Sculptor Bartholdi was best known in this country by his statue of Liberty, the chief feature of which is its size. Its artistic merits were succinctly summed up by a distinguished foreigner when sailing into New York harbor. Pointing to the gigantic figure, he asked:

"Is that Liberty?"

"Yes," said a bystander.

"Then give me death," said the foreigner, who evidently knew his Patrick Henry.—Boston Herald.

To Promote Politeness.

The pupils and alumni of an academy in Chicago have organized a club known as the Knights and Ladies of Courtesy, "to promote politeness and a more accurate and dignified use of the mother tongue." The club has elected an official optimist and pessimist, who are to report upon the evidence of improvement or decadence in public and private manners.

Beautifying Paris.

The Avenue des Champs-Elysees, Paris, is to be extended to the forest of St. Germain, at a cost of $2,000,000. The avenue will be about eight miles long and 135 feet wide. In the middle will be an electric railway, and at each side of the railway will be tracks for motor cars, cycles, horse vehicles and pedestrians.

Keep Lime in the Cellar.

A damp room or cellar can be kept purer and drier if a jar of lime is kept in the corner.

REFORM IN ENGLAND.

Considerable Progress Made in Temperance Since Shakespeare's Day.

John Bull sober is the defense of London Tit-Bits. It admits that John is no total abstainer, but it avers that he is not the champion guzzler of the world. He drinks an average of 500 glasses of beer a year, but your Belgian drinks 710. For every glass of wine he drinks the Frenchman drinks fifty-six, and for every gallon of spirits that John takes the Dane takes seven. This is encouraging. It shows progress in sobriety since Shakespeare's time. In "Othello" we have this:

> Cassio—'Fore God, an excellent song!
> Iago—I learned it in England, where, indeed, they are most potent in potting. Your Dane, your German and your swag bellied Hollander (Belgian) are nothing to your English.
> Cassio—Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?
> Iago—Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

This is good evidence, and had Tit-Bits used German instead of Frenchman in its comparison the parallel would have been exact. As it is, it would seem that since Iago beguiled poor Cassio and made him lose his reputation the Englishman has become less potent in potting. It is well for him if it be so, for the measure of drinking is no bad gauge of a nation's progress. It is well known that the decadence of France is intimately connected with the use of alcohol. Whether as a cause or effect, the increase of the consumption of alcohol in France goes with the decline of physique and the dwindling of stationary population. Improvement in manners and increase in population and the attainment of a higher standard of living keep pace with decrease in the use of alcohol.

AMERICA'S DRINKS.

Consumption of Spirits Decreases Considerably—That of Beer Grows.

During the year which ended June 30, 1903, the average American used 46.72 gills of distilled spirits, 577.28 gills of malt liquors and 15.36 gills of wine, making a total of 639.36 gills, or 1.75 gills for each day of that year. Really, that does not seem to show that he is altogether given over to guzzling alcoholic drinks, says the New York Globe. Besides, he certainly did not drink all of the spirits he used.

Nor does he seem to be using so much strong liquor now as he used years ago, for in the year 1871 he made away with 51.84 gills of distilled spirits, and it is fair to assume that much more spirits are used now in mechanics, arts and science than in that olden time. Of wine he uses 2½ gills more in the year than he used thirty-three years ago. But the influence of the German has been strong with the American; therefore, he used 383 gills more of beer in the year 1903 than he used in 1871, and it would be difficult to convince folk that he used much of that in mechanical works, however much of it may have gone into mechanics. A third of a century ago he used only .71 of a gill of alcoholic liquids a day, and all the increase of 1.04 gills a day is beer.

CHESTNUTS A DRINK CURE.

Nature's Remedy Vouched For by a Philadelphia Specialist.

"There should be less drunkenness at this season of the year than at any other time," said a specialist in nervous disorders in an interview printed recently in the Philadelphia Record. "It is not generally known—in fact, I claim the honor of the discovery—that roasted chestnuts are a good antidote for liquor.

"The average man who drinks under high nervous pressure, not for the sake of sociability, but because the alcohol stimulates him, is the one whose nervous system is most quickly undermined. He may never get drunk, but there is a constant demand for overstimulation that works damage in the end. No sooner does the effect of one drink wear off than there is the craving for another.

"Now, if that man would eat a few roasted chestnuts instead of taking another drink when the feeling comes on him he would find that the substance of the nuts, having quickly absorbed the liquor already in his system, had appreciably decreased his longing for more alcoholic stimulant. It isn't a theory. I know it to be true."

Ireland's Apostle of Temperance.

Father Theobald Mathew, Ireland's apostle of temperance, born in 1790, had a career which is the inspiration of all Irish Catholic total abstinence societies today. His birthday, Oct. 10, is annually observed by such societies throughout the world. Father Mathew is credited with having personally administered the pledge to over 5,000,000 people. In three years he reduced the consumption of spirits in Ireland by one-half. He was received with profound respect in England and Scotland, and during his two years' visit to America he made a tour of twenty-five states, preaching to Catholics the doctrine of total abstinence. Father Mathew was one of the very few persons accorded a formal reception by the United States senate.

Antialcoholic Campaign in Italy.

The first antialcohol congress ever held in Italy took place recently at Venice, the principal address being given by M. Luzzato of the University of Padua. The following resolution was passed: "The Federation of the Antialcoholic leagues affirms that abstinence from every alcoholic drink is the surest and most logical means for securing to man his normal condition and the well being of the individual, the family and society. It is the best means of fighting against alcohol."

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made, executed and delivered by Frank Sabalka and Ida Sabalkak his wife, mortgagors, to Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 9th day of September, 1903, with power of sale therein contained, and was recrded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 7th day of November, 1903, at 4, 10 o'clock P. M. in book 119 of mortgages on page 263, and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

And Whereas, said mortgage contains a clause provideing that if any installment of the debt secured thereby is not paid when due, that the whole sum secured thereby shall become due and payable at once; and whereas by reason of said clause there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice the sum of $56,26; and whereas said motgage contains a clause provideing that if the party of the first part shall fail to make payment of interest due upon a certain prior mortgage upon the land described in said mortgage, that then the party of the second part may pay such interest and have a lien therefore upon said premises under this mortgage; that and whereas porsuant to said clause, and party of the first part haveing made default in the payment thereof, party of the second part has paid such interest to the sum of $62.25, making the total sum due under the terms of said mortgage the sum of $118.51.

Now, therfore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuent to the statute in such cases made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described and conveyed by said mortgage viz

CONDENSED STORIES.

How an Irishwomen Beat Jay Gould in a Financial Bout.

While Jay Gould was superintending the building of the old Rutland and Washington railroad, between Rutland, Vt., and Eagle Bridge, N. Y., in the late summer of 1852, it became necessary to cross a large farm in the town of Castleton belonging to Mrs. Ann Dineen, so a strip of her property was obtained.

"WILL YEZ PAY ME NOW, MR. GOULD?"

A fine patch of watermelons on the place was too strong a temptation for the hundred or more men in the construction gang, and in a day or two the patch was melonless,

Mrs. Dineen complained to Gould. but he disclaimed any responsibility for the acts of the workmen and refused to recompense her for her loss.

A day of two later Mr. Gould and one or two of his engineers were obtaining relief from the effects of the hot weather by taking a swim in the Castleton river when suddenly Mrs. Dineen appeared on the bank. Gathering up all tha clothes of the bathers, the woman made a motion as though to throw them into the water and shouted, "Will yez pay me for thim watermillions now, Mr. Gould?"

The promoter's trousers contained a timepiece worth a large sum and other valuables which immersion would not have benefited, so he agreed to settle for the stolen fruit if she would go to his office the next day. The promise was satisfactory, and Mrs. Dineen retreated in triumph.—New York Herald.

Carlyle's Courteous Side.

In the "Retrospects" of Professor William Knight of the University of St. Andrews are some interesting anecdotes. Among these is a bit from a letter by Dr. Maclagan, who attended Thomas Carlyle during Carlyle's last years: "My personal experience of Carlyle was this: He was the most courteous man I ever met. Never once did that old man fail to rise up to receive me nor allow me to leave his room without walking to the door with me while he had strength to do so. After death all the ruggedness and the wrinkles disappeared from his face. But for the beard it was like that of a woman, so delicate and beautifully molded it was."

Protect the Back.

People are more likely to catch cold in the back than they are generally aware of, and if neglected it may prove a serious matter. The back, especially between the shoulders, should always be kept well covered, and never lean with your back against anything that is cold. Never sit with the back in a direct draft, and when warming it by the fire do not continue to keep the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do so is debilitating.—Journal of Health.

"Burned" by Cold.

Intense cold, as is well known, burns—if we may use the term—like heat. If a "drop" of air at a temperature of 180 degrees below zero were placed upon the hand it would have the same effect as would the same quantity of molten steel or lead. Every one who has the care of horses ought to know the pain inflicted by placing a frosted bit in a horse's mouth. It burns like [illegible]

When Animals Go Bad.

An animal trainer says that "no man living knows" all about animals or more than a very little about them. Some who are dead thought they knew. That is the reason they are dead. Only those who realize their ignorance and supplement it with untiring watchfulness last long at this queer business that I'm in.

"Sooner or later most animals of the cat kind become utterly intractable and remain so. 'Going bad' is the professional term for this. Rarely do they return to their old amenable ways. Henceforth they are of no use as performers and are relegated to the exhibition cages, for any man entering the cage of a lion or tiger that has gone bad is instantly attacked. This is one of the terrors of the trade. Symptoms of the change of heart are apparent enough sometimes, particularly in animals which are growing old. Occasionally, however, some young beast, formerly as obedient as you could wish, will turn murderous without cause or warning. If her trainer gets out alive he is lucky. If he ever enters her cage again he's a fool."—McClure's.

The Noisy Birds of the Night.

All the night birds are noisy. They cannot consort with one another in happy companies, as do the warblers and thrushes and finches, and sing and whisper, but must call loudly and long to one another in the darkness. On coasts where petrels and certain other night hunting sea birds abound, all day sitting on their eggs or hiding in burrows, you will hear no sound from morning till night, but after dark the air is filled with shrill cries. The loud, reiterated calling of the southern chuck-will's-widow and of its northern cousin is familiar. A whippoorwill will sound its cry several hundred times in succession without a pause. Owls hoot or utter a harsh sort of laughter, rarely pleasant to listen to, and night herons and bitterns squawk and boom. Sweet songs occasionally heard in the darkness are those of wakeful day birds, as the nightingale or our own oven bird.—Ernest Ingersoll in Harper's Magazine.

Right Living and Good Looks.

Today our great cities show proportionately a higher average of dress and general striving after personal attractiveness among both men and women than the great cities of any other country.

Success depends in the largest measure upon health and the personal impression one makes upon his fellow men, and properly to develop and to maintain the "points" that make for personal attractiveness is to develop and maintain health.

For example, how many men and women stop drinking and overeating because fat is fatal to good looks? The struggle to keep looking young is a struggle to keep in perfect health. And what a blessing that is to the present and all future generations!

The price of good looks is right living, and the reward of right living is health.—Saturday Evening Post.

His Gentlemanly Resentment.

The Judge—You called him a liar, did you? How did he take it? The Colonel—He agreeably surprised me, suh, by acting like a perfect gentleman. He knocked me down, suh.—Chicago Tribune.

Not Fatal,

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk the block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. FLOCKING INTO CANADA

IMMIGRATION FROM DAKOTA AND ADJOINING STATES.

Major Edwards, United States Consul-General at Montreal, Describes the Movement as Due to Scarcity of Land.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—Major Allison Edwards, United States Consul-General, who returned to-day from a visit to his home at Fargo, North Dakota, said in an interview: "The proper way to describe the manner in which the people of North Dakota are coming over into Western Canada is to say they are coming over in droves. Among the people there did not seem to be any thought of there being a boundary line at all. It is simply a question," added the major, "of there not being any more land in North Dakota and the surrounding States, and the people are flocking to Canada to get good farms. Naturally the number that will come over will increase all the time, and I may say the people you are getting are the best people in the west. They are well supplied with money and are well acquainted with the conditions under which they will have to work.'" The agents of the Government located at different points in the United States are prepared to give the fullest information regarding homestead and other lands.

NOTES FROM ABROAD.

At the International poultry show, Alexandra palace, London, November 9, a partridge Wyandotte rooster was sold for $825—a record price.

In spite of the war, the cultivation of European classical music is rapidly extending among the better classes in Japan. A native Beethoven society has been formed at Tokio.

England has more doctors, proportionately speaking, than any country in Europe. For every 100,000 persons England has 150 medical men; Germany, 48; Switzerland, 42, and Russia, 15.

A railway is about to be constructed near Elsinore, which will run across the spot traditionally believed to be the grave of Hamlet. Numerous signed protests against the projected railway have been addressed to the government.

A sausage exhibition is to be held in Berne next spring. The Berne butchers have offered a prize for a popular sausage which must be "nourishing, strengthening and cheap." It is stated that 1,785 varieties of sausage will be shown at the exhibition.

Prof. Mendelejeff, who occupies a prominent position in Russia, declares in a recent article that all Russians, from the czar down, know that many things in their country are not as they ought to be, and that reforms are urgently called for. "These reforms," he adds, "will come inevitably after the war with Japan, because this war has, I think, opened everyone's eyes."

The Blindness of Love.

"My fiance is so different from other men."

"Of course he is, since he proposed to you."—Kansas City Star.

Miss Hapgood tells how she escaped an awful operation by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for four years with what the doctors called Salpingitis (inflammation of the fallopian tubes and ovaritis), which is a most distressing and painful ailment, affecting all the surrounding parts, undermining the constitution, and sapping the life forces. If you had seen me a year ago, before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and had noticed the sunken eyes, sallow complexion, and general emaciated condition, and compared that person with me as I am today, robust, hearty and well, you would not wonder that I feel thankful to you and your wonderful medicine, which restored me to new life and health in five months, and saved me from an awful operation."—MISS IRENE HAPGOOD, 1023 Sandwich St. Windsor, Ont.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries or fallopian tubes which adjoin the ovaries, may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries, indicated by dull throbbing pain in the side, accompanied by heat and shooting pains, should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation, with all its terrors, may easily result from neglect.

Strawberry and Vegetable Dealers

The Passenger Department of the Illinois Central Railroad Company have recently issued a publication known as Circular No. 12, in which is described the best territory in this country for the growing of early strawberries and early vegetables. Every dealer in such products should address a postal card to the undersigned at DUBUQUE, IOWA, requesting a copy of "Circular No. 12."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Judge Greenleaf Clark.

Judge Greenleaf Clark, one of St. Paul's best known and most respected citizens, died at 8:10 o'clock Dec. 7, at Lamanda Park, Cal.

Judge Clark was one of the pioneers of Minnesota, and during his lifetime was one of the most prominent and influential men of the state. He was known as a man of sturdy and rugged character, a gentleman of the old school, who placed honor and integrity above everything else. He held important public positions, and his administration of public affairs was always characterized by the close attention to detail and policy which careful men apply to their own affairs.

At the time of his death Judge Clark was president of the board of regents of the state university and president of the State Historical Society. He was appointed associate judge of the supreme court of Minnesota in 1881 by Governor Pillsbury, serving one year.

Judge Clark was born Aug. 23, '35, in Plaistow, N. H. He fitted for college at Atkinson academy, entering Dartmouth college in 1851, from which he graduated in 1855.

Attempted Safe Robbery.

Three unknown men attempted to blow the safe of the State Bank of Barnum, and, being foiled, held up and robbed R. O. Dye, a farmer living near Moose Lake.

F. A. Goetz, president of the bank, who lived but a few feet from the bank building, was awakened by the sound of a muffled explosion. Hastily dressing and going over to the bank, he found a man on guard outside the building and two more at work on the vault within.

Mr. Goetz returned to the house and telephoned a fire alarm to the telephone station.

A few minutes later the village was alive with half-clad men, some of the men carried lanterns. Under the leadership of Mr. Goetz, the crowd proceeded to the bank, but before they reached the building the robbers emerged from the front door and took flight. The third man had already disappeared.

Many Medals.

A preliminary report of awards made in connection with Minnesota's magnificent exhibits of fruits at the world's fair, shows how lavishly the goddess Pomona bestowed her favors on the offerings of the North Star state.

Not only did Minnesota receive the grand prize for the best collective exhibit of fruits, but she was triumphant over other states in many individual exhibits, and now proudly wears five gold medals, forty bronze and thirty-six silver medals.

It is small wonder that members of the Minnesota State Horticultural society are enthusiastic over this magnificent showing or that the society is receiving scores of congratulatory letters.

Brave Women.

But for the presence of mind and prompt action of Mrs. W. F. Watters of St. Cloud, she might have been burned to death in an explosion of a gasoline stove in her kitchen.

Mrs. Watters was working over the stove when it exploded, throwing the burning fluid over her. She did not lose her head, however, but snatched the stove, which was a small one, up and threw it through the open kitchen door.

Her hands and face were severely burned in doing so, and she undoubtedly saved her own life and her residence.

Butter Makers.

Another large delegation attended the closing meeting of the state butter and cheese makers at St. Anthony Park. The announcement of scores in the butter and cheese contests were made. There were 129 entries in the butter contest and Charles Levenik of Lakefield carried off first place with a score of 97.7, G. H. Schenel of Rapidan being second with 97.25, and C. H. Jensen of Bernadotte third with 97.

In the cheese contest, A. W. Parkin of Stanton scored first with 96.5; A. L. Parkin, second, 96.5, and Mr. Reeatz of Beaver Dam, third, with 93.

Prize Essays.

At the thirty-eighth annual encampment of the department of Minnesota held in Minneapolis March 15 and 16, 1904, the commander of the department was authorized to offer prizes for the most meritorious papers on subjects touching the war of the rebellion, as an inducement to the youths of our high schools to become posted in matters pertaining to the history of their own country.

Poor Heating.

Unless defects in the boilers and heating plant at the new state capitol are remedied at once, it is probable that the legislature will not meet in the new structure this winter. The capitol commissioners spent a whole day in discussing remedies for boiler defects and in purchasing flags for the staffs.

News Notes.

The Grand Army men of Crookston and other Minnesota cities will endeavor to secure the passage of a state law this winter exempting post property from taxation.

George H. Fifield, a well-known resident on the Minnesota road, was working with a lantern in his cellar, when in some manner a can of gasoline which was stored there fell down and ignited. Mr. Fifield was badly burned on the face and hands.

Fire partly destroyed a building owned by A. H. Reed at Glencoe.

"GIMLETS" BORED THEM.

Book of Conceited Author Lacked Popularity with the Reading Public.

Though Robert W. Chambers is a popular author, he will rarely talk about his books, says a literary exchange.

"I hate literary conceit," he said the other day. "If an architect builds a good house, his friends, on account of it, don't regard him as a god, and he doesn't regard himself as a god. The same with an engineer. If he builds a good bridge it is in the day's work, and that is all there is about it. But if a man writes a good book, why, then there must be genius in him, and before this genius he himself, as well as all the world, must bow down. Rot.

"Literary conceit is distasteful to me," Mr. Chambers said, "and I like to see it taken down. It was well taken down in the case of a New York man recently. He has written a novel, 'Gimlets,' and the public libraries have put this book on their shelves. The man called at one of the libraries to find out how his work was going with the public. He hoped to have his vanity tickled a little.

"'Is "Gimlets" in?' he said to the librarian.

"'It never was out,' was the reply."

Reads Like a Miracle.

Moravia, N. Y., Dec. 12th.—(Special)—Bordering on the miraculous is the case of Mrs. Benj. Wilson, of this place. Suffering from Sugar Diabetes, she wasted away till from weighing 200 lbs. she barely tipped the scales at 130 lbs. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her. Speaking of her cure her husband says:

"My wife suffered everything from Sugar Diabetes. She was sick four years and doctored with two doctors, but received no benefit. She had so much pain all over her that she could not rest day or night. The doctor said that she could not live.

"Then an advertisement led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and they helped her right from the first. Five boxes of them cured her. Dodd's Kidney Pills were a God-Sent remedy to us and we recommend them to all suffering from Kidney Disease."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney Diseases, including Bright's Disease, and all kidney aches, including Rheumatism.

"I think," said the officeseeker, "that my work during the campaign should entitle me to the office." "What did you do?" asked the political boss. "I 'also spoke' on a dozen or more different occasions."—Philadelphia Press.

TORTURING, DISFIGURING

Humors, Eczemas, Itchings, Inflammations, Burnings, Scalings and Chafings Cured by Cuticura.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurements, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt by the testimony of the civilized world.

COMPLETELY CURED.

Mrs. P. Brunzel, wife of P. Brunzel, stock dealer, residence 3111 Grand Ave., Everett, Wash., says: "For fifteen years I suffered with terrible pain in my back. I did not know what it was to enjoy a night's rest and arose in the morning feeling tired and unrefreshed. My suffering sometimes was simply indescribable. When I finished the first box of Doan's Kidney Pills I felt like a different woman. I continued until I had taken five boxes. Doan's Kidney Pills act very effectively, very promptly, relieve the aching pains and all other annoying difficulties."

INCORRECT USE OF WORDS

Examples of the Misuse of Language Common Among People of Education.

If education doesn't teach a man how to use words correctly, it teaches him little, says the San Francisco Bulletin. Thought is conveyed from one mind to another by words; and in order that there may be a perfect meeting of minds among men—in order, that is, that the hearer or reader may take the exact meaning which the speaker or writer intends to express, it is necessary that words be used and understood rightly. If a word means one thing to a speaker and another to his hearers, they will fail to catch his thoughts, or, rather, they will attribute to him thought that is not his. Many times persons who are quite in accord with one another dispute because they mistake the meaning of words. It should, therefore, as Herbert Spencer said, be a matter of conscience not to misuse words; it should also be a matter of conscience to resist misuse of them. "Especially," added Spencer, "should our own language be thus guarded. If, as several unbiased foreign judges hold, the English language will be, and ought to be, the universal language, it becomes the more a duty of mankind to check bad habits of speech."

Possibly no other vernacular tongue is so greatly misused by the commonalty as English. The English is a polyglot language reaped from many sources, and words imported from other languages, such as the Latin and Greek, are very liable to acquire strange, incorrect meanings. Take, for instance, the word "exemplary." The true meaning of "exemplary" is that which serves for an example. In the popular mind, however, "exemplary" is a word of general approval. Even when used in the sense of serving as an example, the example is presumed to be a good example; that is, an example which ought to be followed. There is no good reason for thus narrowing the meaning of a useful word. A drunkard may be as exemplary of drunkards as a sober man of this kind. Exemplary conduct may be very despicable.

To a precisian—and a precisian is not always contemptible, though he is frequently contemptuous—the ordinary newspaper gives offense constantly by misusing words. The term "real estate," for example, is employed by the newspapers as a synonym for land. "Real estate," however, is a technical term of the lawyers and means not land, but an interest in land. When a man sells groceries he does not speak of selling personal estate. Why, then, when he sells land, does he describe the transaction as a sale of real estate?

Another word, commonly misused, is "execute," which is employed in the sense of putting to death by sentence of a court. A man is hanged or shot or beheaded, or killed with electricity. It is not the man but the sentence that is executed. "Limited" means restricted to certain limits. It does not mean small or brief, as in the phrases a "limited price" or a "limited acquaintance." "Replaced" means put back into the same place. A book taken from a shelf may be replaced. But it is error to say that Mayor Schmitz replaced Mayor Phelan, or that, among the moderns, agnosticism has replaced religion. To replace is not the same as to displace or to supersede.

"Superior" means higher. It does not mean noble or virtuous, as in the common phrase "a superior person." "Transpired" literally means to breathe through, and is employed correctly, though figuratively, of anything that passes off insensibly. Perspiration may transpire; so may a secret; but it is absurd to say that an event transpired when one means that it occurred or took place. The news of a concealed forgery may transpire a long while after the forgery was done. "Witness," which, however, is a Saxon word, means one who gives testimony from personal knowledge. One does not witness a balloon in the air. "Defalcate" is used in the newspapers as a synonym for embezzle. Defalcate, however, means nothing more than to lop off or detract from. A defalcation may be an act of honesty as well as of theft. One defalcates when he takes from a sum of money an amount justly due to himself.

Of course, the meanings of words change from time to time, and what was incorrect in the nineteenth century may become correct in the twentieth. "Pecuniary" once meant wealthy in cattle. "Nice," in Chaucer's day, meant foolish or ignorant. "Fond" formerly meant foolish. But in words, as in dress, a gentleman should be conservative; should lean slightly to the archaic.

Lambs' Homing Instinct.

A remarkable instance of a homing instinct in sheep comes from North Yorkshire, England. A gentleman named Pickersgill, of Wood Hall, Finghall, purchased 30 valuable lambs at Masham fair, and after keeping them for three weeks moved them to another field, from which they managed to break one evening. Although the night was pitch-dark they succeeded in hitting on the road along which they had been driven, and traveled 18 miles to Ripon, straight for their previous pastures.

Safe Place Sometimes.

It is said that the safest place in the world is the deck of a ship. The boast is not unjustifiable. Out of the enormous passenger service to and from the British isles only 57 persons lost their lives through the wreck of a British vessel last year. This is not the lowest figure on record. Two years before the number was only 13, and in 1893 it was 44.—London Tit-Bits.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Pe-ru-na in the Home for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR and MRS. SCHWANDT, Sanborn, Minn.
MR and MRS. JNO. O. ATKINSON, Independence, Mo.

Remarkable Cures Effected By Pe-ru-na.

Under date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife has been a sufferer from a complication of diseases for the past twenty-five years. Her case has baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing. She was also passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life.

"In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of twenty-five years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me. Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more."—John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. I am still cured of catarrh."—John O. Atkinson, Independence, Mo., Box 272.

Mrs. Alla Schwandt, Sanborn, Minn., writes:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and catarrh for twenty-five years. Could not sleep day or night. After having used Peruna I can sleep and nothing bothers me now. If I ever am affected with any kind of sickness Peruna will be the medicine I shall use. My son was cured of catarrh of the larynx by Peruna."—Mrs. Alla Schwandt.

Why Old People are Especially Liable to Systemic Catarrh.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safeguard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that entirely meets these cases. Nothing but an effective systemic remedy can cure them.

A reward of $10,000 has been deposited in the Market Exchange Bank, Columbus, Ohio, as a guarantee that the above testimonials are genuine; that we hold in our possession authentic letters certifying to the same. During many years' advertising we have never used, in part or in whole, a single spurious testimonial. Every one of our testimonials are genuine and in the words of the one whose name is appended.

HAPPENINGS OF A WEEK IN BRIEF

SUMMARY OF MOST INTERESTING EVENTS OF PAST SEVEN DAYS.

WHAT CONGRESS IS DOING

Progress of the Russo-Japanese War in the Far East—News from All Parts of the Union and the Latest Foreign Intelligence.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The senate, by a vote of 44 to 23, passed the Philippine civil government bill. In the house the senate amendments to the urgent deficiency bill were agreed to.

In the senate a number of private bills and a few bills of a semi-public character were passed, and there was some discussion of the pure food bill. The house adopted a resolution providing for the impeachment of Judge Charles Swayne, of the Northern district of Florida, for "high crimes and misdemeanors."

The senate committee on territories has authorized a favorable report on the statehood bill providing for the admission into the union of Oklahoma and Indian Territory to become the state of Oklahoma, and of Arizona and New Mexico, to become the state of Arizona.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

Capt. P. C. March, of the United States army, who has returned from the Japanese-Russian war, declares Gen. Kuroki is not dead.

Seven Russians arrived at Chefoo from Port Arthur with dispatches for the czar. They escaped from the fortress in an open boat.

That the Japanese may abandon the active siege of Port Arthur, having secured the destruction of the Russian fleet, is the opinion of people from the Kwantung peninsula reaching Chefoo.

Gen. Stoessel, the Russian military commander at Port Arthur, according to a dispatch from Chefoo, has again been wounded, this time by a rifle bullet. The wound is not serious.

Japanese are actively engaged in preparations to assault the main forts defending Port Arthur on the west. The city, as seen from 203-Metre hill, is almost deserted and presents a wide expanse of shattered buildings, and sunken warships dot the harbor.

THE CHADWICK AFFAIR.

Under an order of court, Mrs. Chadwick will, from now until the time of her trial or arraignment, be rigidly excluded from all visitors, and even her son and nurse will be denied permission to see her.

Mrs. Chadwick was greeted by a hooting mob on her arrival in Cleveland and collapsed in her cell in jail after running a gauntlet of insults on the streets. Five more indictments were found against her and she says she will not accept bail.

Mrs. Chadwick and Banker Beckwith met in the Cleveland jail. She ignored his plea to tell the whole truth about her financial deals.

Two indictments against Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick were found by the grand jury in Cleveland, O., charging forgery and the uttering of forged papers. Andrew Carnegie is summoned to testify, but on the ground that he is suffering from lumbago arranged to avoid a trip to Cleveland.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Three men were arrested at St. Cloud, Minn., on a charge of having robbed the bank of Rice, at Rice, Minn., of $2,000 in currency and several thousand dollars in negotiable securities.

Joseph Ryant and Paul Wienewsky, fishermen, were drowned in the Grand Traverse bay.

With the completion of the agricultural palace, which is now ready for occupancy, the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Ore., stands practically finished, so far as exhibit palaces are concerned.

The big ice gorge above Cincinnati broke and a great mass of ice moved down the river for several hours, threatening damage to property, but finally gorged again without having caused much loss.

The engine of a Wisconsin Central train became unmanageable at Chippewa Falls, Wis., and George Rosine, the fireman, and Walter Mohr, the brakeman, jumped from the cab. Rosine was instantly killed and Mohr was fatally injured.

Prominent citizens of Chicago will invite President Roosevelt to dedicate the new federal building, of which President McKinley laid the corner stone.

A small steamer was driven ashore in a gale off the coast of Scotland. The whole crew, numbering ten, were drowned.

Mrs. Bridget Daugherty, aged 75; her son James, aged 50, and her daughter, Anna, aged 55, were asphyxiated by natural gas at Springfield, O.

James Connors, the murderer of Deputy Sheriff Swest, of Blackfoot, was executed at Boise, Idaho.

The body of former President Paul Kruger was interred with impressive ceremonies at Pretoria.

Will Jones, colored, was hanged at Helena, Ark., for the murder of A. W. Robertson.

Mr. Davis, the American consul at Alexandretta, who recently got into trouble with the Turkish authorities because he lowered the flag from the consulate during a celebration in honor of the sultan's birthday, will resign.

Augustus Macon, an attorney, died at Denver, Col., of acute stomach trouble, aged 73 years. He was a native of Kentucky and studied law in Abraham Lincoln's office.

One girl was killed, two fatally injured, and score of others hurt by jumping from windows during an explosion which wrecked Lloyd Adams & Simpson's toy pistol factory at Portsmouth, O.

Plans are forming for the establishment of an exhibition of American manufactures in Paris, France.

A Minneapolis man shot his fiancee dead and killed himself. Illness is supposed to have unbalanced his mind.

Weekly trade reviews show that holiday sales have reached an unusually large volume. Railroad traffic increases and collections are good. The number of unemployed men is growing less and fewer labor disputes exist.

A great meeting was held at Carnegie hall, New York, in the interests of international arbitration. Archbishop Ireland and Oscar S. Straus were the principal speakers.

Mail Clerk George Burr, of New Albany, and Fireman Harry Hardin, of Jeffersonville, were fatally injured in a collision between a passenger train and a switch engine at Jeffersonville, Ind.

Robert H. Patton, newly elected national chairman of the prohibition party, refuses the place. O. W. Stewart, the deposed leader, declines to call another meeting.

Owen Kelly, a wealthy Philadelphian, prominent in Irish societies and once a Clan-na-Gael leader, has been missing since October 25. Violence is suggested as a clue to the mystery.

Henry Wellington Wack, who says he suffered in the recent slump of Amalgamated copper, asks the district attorney of New York to indict Thomas W. Lawson.

W. W. Kimball, pioneer of the piano and organ-making business, died at his Chicago residence at the age of 76 years.

A fast mail train on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway was wrecked near Bristol, Ill. One person was killed outright, two fatally injured and a number of mail clerks bruised. The wreck was caused by a spreading of the rails.

The contract for the sale of the property offered by the world's fair company to a Chicago wrecking company for $450,000, has been signed in St. Louis and the first payment of $100,000 made.

August Belmont has been elected president of the National Civic Federation to succeed the late Senator Marcus A. Hanna.

Fire in Goshen, Ind., destroyed Hawk's hardware store, Hawk's Electric company, Collin's saloon and the Globe Milling company. The loss is about $100,000.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

All About Butter.

The biennial report of the state dairy and food commission soon to be presented to the legislature, will show that Minnesota is today making 28,000,000 pounds more butter annually than it did four years ago when Gov. S. R. Van Sant, then dairy governor, first came into office.

In four years the number of creameries has increased from 530 to 781, and the product of butter for this year will equal 72,000,000 pounds. At the same time the quality has increased to a point where Minnesota has won first place in competition with the world for both dairy and creamery butter.

Since January, 1, 1903, cheese factories have increased in number of seventy-three to ninety, and skim stations from fifty-two to sixty-six. This is a gain for the year of 111 new creameries, seventeen cheese factories, and fourteen skim stations. The point has now been reached where Minnesota probably produces more butter than any other state in the union. And with the fact long established that it produces more flour, Minnesota now has unquestionable right to the title Gov. Van Sant has given it of "The Bread and Butter State."

To supply the 111 new creameries with milk means an increase of 40,000 cows.

Since two years ago the number of farmers supplying milk to creameries has increased from 50,380 to 58,990; number of cows from 382,356 to 435,740; pounds of milk from 1,217,786,450 to 1,351,042,019; butter from 67,720,808 to 72,260,384; amount paid to patrons from $10,941,466.38 to $12,988,682.21.

A Close Call.

The four small children of Mr. and Mrs. Tiernet, living on a farm near Duluth, barely escaped death in flames which destroyed the family residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Tiernet left their four small children in the house while they went to get some wood some distance away. Mr. Tiernet suddenly observed smoke issuing from the roof and he and his wife hurried to it.

Mr. Tiernet broke the bedroom window, and, leaping in, he rescued the baby. The interior of the house beyond the bedroom was a mass of flames. To enter there was impossible, either to seek the other three children or try to save the contents.

The husband and wife stood by and wrung their hands in agony, for nothing was to be seen of the three older children. It was taken for granted that they had perished. To the intense joy of the parents the three missing children soon made their appearance from the bushes near by. They took fright when they found the house on fire.

Benefactor Rewarded.

Charles Madden, one of the early residents of the city and who for several years has lived at the Dewey hotel, Minneapolis is dead. When his will was read, John Nelson, who took care of the old man in his last days, was found to inherit $23,000 in cash.

Madden was usually thought of as a pauper, and when his health began to fail him, Nelson, proprietor of the hotel, gave him a room and waited on him personally.

A few days ago the old man called for a lawyer and made his will, leaving all his money to Nelson, who, he said, had been his good friend. His wealth at that time was not known, but when the attorney searched the room he found certificates of deposit on the Farmers and Mechanics' bank for $23,000.

The amount of money was a complete surprize to Nelson, who had believed Madden a penniless man.

Statues for the Capitol.

The Minnesota State Art society purchased at the St. Louis fair two beautiful casts for the adornment of its rooms in the new capitol. These are reproductions of Donatello's John the Baptist and of the "Gooseman," by Adam Kraft, a German sculpter. The society also secured an option on the figure representing Minnesota modeled by Gustav Gerlach of Hoboken, N. J., which stood in the colonade of streets.

The report of these transactions was made at a meeting of the governing board of the society. Designs for furniture for the new rooms were submitted, but no selection was made. The selected designs will be submitted to the capitol commission.

To a Higher Place.

At a general request of the leading agricultural colleges, experimental stations and state universities, Prof. W. M. Hays of the Minnesota experiment station at St. Anthony Park has been appointed assistant secretary of agriculture to succeed Joseph H. Brigham, whose death last summer left the position vacant.

The Christmas Story

By Charlotte Whitcomb

The robed and sandalled prophet stood
And prayed, 'neath Eastern skies;
God to reveal some coming good
To his dim and ageing eyes.
He spoke,
endowed with prophecy—
"Look ye! For war shall cease!
The Wonderful!
The Counselor!
Shall come as Prince of Peace!"

The weary years
rolled on apace,
The prophet's tongue
was stilled,
But 'neath the blue
Judean skies
His vision was fulfilled,—
What time the herald angels sang
Of love
that shall not cease,
And reverent kings
came bearing gifts
To One,
the Prince of Peace!

The kings, the shepherds
and their flocks,
The stall, the manger low,
Have,
like the prophet,
now become
A part of long ago:—
But the prophet's words, the angels' song
Ring on, and shall not cease,
For love on earth,
Good will to man
Came with the Prince of Peace!

It is reported, that C. T. Leuman was very active at the fneral of the McIntosh Tribune, but wether as a mourner or an ordinary spectator we have not learned, but he certainly helped to dress the corpse for burial.

What may be the last grand jury, ajourned on Friday last. What law will be passed by the next legislature to take the place, of the assembling of that grand and expensive body is not known but the voters of said on Nov. 8th, that the should provide an other method for the investigation and prosecution of crime.

The McIntosh Tribue gave up the strugal, last week, and McIntosh will have to get along with one newspaper, The Times, in the future. Editor King, says in his final bow to the public. "We now realize the folly of attempting to publish two newspapers in a field to limited in its patronage to properly support one." Correct you are Mr. King, there is no use putting time and money into a newspaper, just to please the public.

The line from now hence-forth. is to be more strictly draw in regard to making final proof on government lands. The fact that you are a School teacher, a Preacher, a Lawyer, or Country editor, will not assist you to make final proof on lands on which you have not made the proper residence. The tims is past for anyone to take a homestead and make a fiew visits to it and then make final proof on it. The intention of the goverrment is to provide the actual settler with a home, and not to sell him the land for speculative purposes. The rule in regard to residence on the new lands on the Red Lake Reservation, that is being bought at four dollars per acre. will be the same as on the free lands, so when you look over these lands you should make up your mind, if you wont to live there in Red Lake county Minnesota, or Cook county Illinois, and if you conclude to live in Illinois you had better not buy, as you can not obtain title to the lands without the residence, and you simply annoy the officials of the government by making the attempt, to obtain lands, that you have no right to under the roulings of the department.

Iced Apple With Cream.

Pore and core six large apples and cook in a sirup made of one cup of sugar and two of woter. When they are tender lift them out and cover with a thin layer of meringue. Sift a little sugar over this and let it brown slightly. Reduce by boiling the sirup until there is one and a half gills left. When this is cold it will be a firm jelly. Cut into squares and ploce on and about the apples. Servo cold with sugor and cream.

To Remove Scorch From Linen.

The following is an excellent mixture for taking scorching out:

One-half ounce of white soap, two ounces of fuller's earth, the juice of two onions and half a pint of vinegar.

Boil these things together for a few minutes. Spread on the scorched parts with a knife and allow it to dry on, when the stain will disappear. Keep covered in a jar for future use.

To Remove Paint.

While fresh, paint may be removed by repeated applications of spirits of turpentine or spirits of wine, rubbed on with a rag. Another method is to rub the spots with paraffin oil. Boil quickly till the stains disappear. They require to be well rinsed in several waters to get rid of the smell of the oil.

NOVEL RESCUE WORK

SALVATION ARMY'S NEW METHOD OF DEALING WITH DRUNKARDS.

System Already Successfully Tried In Germany—Carrying Stretchers, Soldiers Pick Up Drunks and Carry Them to Stations For Treatment.

In tho past there has been but one haven for the helplessly intoxicated person who sinks to slumber with his head pillowed on a paving stone—the cell of the police station nearest to the patrolman who fails to awaken any response to the tattoo beaten on the inebriated one's feet. Now, thanks to the tireless efforts of the Salvation Army to uplift the fallen, under which head the chronic drunk who falls recumbent in an alcoholic stupor surely comes, there will be another and more promising harbor, says the New York correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. General Booth's followers in this country have decided to borrow an idea that has been successfully tried by the army in Germany and establish a drunkards' rescue brigade.

An interesting scene enacted recently at the Salvation Army headquarters, West Fourteenth street, New York, depicted the manner in which the new brigade will work. The army leaders undertake no new work without the most careful preparation and a thorough drilling of the men into whose hands the crusade is to be intrusted.

"Drunks," said one of the leaders of the new brigade, "present a problem separote and distinct from all others in our work. You can't instill reason into a whisky sodden brain. It is useless to talk of heaven and the angels to a maudlin individual who receives your well meant efforts with a vacant stare and cuts them short by falling in a heap on the sidewalk. And yet something ought to be done for such a person for the sake of wives and mothers and children if not for the drunkard himself. There is a way out of every difficulty, but we had our own troubles when we tried to see daylight in this one. The German Salvationists led the way with the drunkards' rescue brigade."

The officer paused to exhibit a picture in one of the publications of the movement. It showed a corps of uniformed Salvationists equipped apparently for firemen's work. They carried stretchers, ropes, lanterns, ladders and other paraphernalia. It was explained that these were the members of the original drunkards' rescue corps, established in Germany for the purpose of hunting out intoxicated men and transporting them to the nearest army station.

"We have not reached the perfection that they have in Germany," continued the army man, "but in time we shall get there. At present we are instructing our men how to improvise stretchers by the method employed in 'first aid to injured' lectures. The other paraphernalia we shall add later. The first lesson we teach our rescuers is that the drunkard must be treated very much as a man who has met with an accident in the street and is as powerless to help himself as a baby. They must seek him out, lift him up and carry him in as a wounded man is carried in from the field of battle.

"When the inert body is brought in, the man will be cared for until he recovers consciousness. Then our chance will have come. Then will be the time to talk of reclamation and the better way of sobriety. Sober, headachy and penitent, the rescued one will be in fitting mood for the reception of advice. It will make him feel in a better frame of mind to be told that Christ died to save drunkards than to hear the ultimatum, 'Ten dollars or ten days.' Now, I will show you how our drunkards' rescue brigade will work."

The object lesson was given on the roof of the Salvation Army headquarters. Under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Miles a squad of Salvationists who are in training for the work were shown how to approach a recumbent inebriate, the latter impersonated by one of the band; how to judge of his condition by his pulse and his appearance and how to administer an emetic in the case of a drunk who has apparently succumbed to knockout drops or who is in the last stage of collapse from the effect of bad whisky.

"Now take off your coats," said Colonel Miles to two of the men, "and I will show you how to make a stretcher to carry the man in."

With the coats and a couple of poles produced from somewhere (broom handles would do, it was explained, if nothing else was available) a passable stretcher was made. The sleeves of the coats were passed through opposite ends of the poles and the tails pinned in the middle with strong safety pins. On this stretcher the supposed drunk was tenderly laid, and with four of the rescuers at the pole handles and Colonel Miles at the head with a lantern the procession made for the imaginary reception room for drunkards.

"Now," continued the lecturer, "we do not allow the efforts at curing the drunkard of his unwholesome appetite to rest with a mere talk when he is sober. We are believers in the gold cure, and we have a clinic in operation at our Chatham square establishment. Here daily rescued drunkards may be seen taking the little jab that helps them to overcome the thirst for rum.

"We have already tried this idea for rescuing drunkards in some of the towns where our work is established and have found it to answer admirably. It is the only reasonable way to save a drunkard.

"We have had some very touching letters from relatives and wives of men whom we have rescued in this practical way. Such letters are the best possible indorsement of our new plan to save the whisky sodden ones."

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Frank Sabalka and Ida Sabalka his wife, mortgagors, to Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Mortgagee, which mortgage bears date the 5th day of September, 1903, with power of sale therein contained, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 7th day of November, 1903, at 4, 10 o'clock P. "I remember it."

"You said that if you stayed out until 4 o'clock there was no one to look at you reproachfully and sigh and make you feel mean."

"Yes, and I stayed out until 4 o'clock, didn't I?"

"You certainly did."

"And I gave a war whoop on the front doorstep."

"Yes, and you sang a verse from a comic opera song and tried to dance a clog."

"Yes, and my wife missed that train. Now, please go awoy and let me alone."—St. Louis Republic.

The wedding dance and reception of Nels N. Bolstad and wife on Saturday eveuing last, was attended by a large number of envited guests, who were loyaly entertained by them. The presents made them were numerous and well selected with a view to their usefullness. Music for the dauce was given by the Egeland string band and the banqet was served at the hotel Jordahl, and was an elegant supper.

Miss Stella Widness, the eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H C. Widness, of Winsor, met with a searious accident on Saturday last. Mr. Widness has a trap door in his store, which leads to the celler, which had been carelessly left open, and the little one coming into the store and not noticeing that the door was up plunged head foremost to the bottom of the celler, where she was picked up in an uncoucious condition, and for a time her parents dispaired with hope for her recovery, but we understand she is getting better now.

The Snubbed One.

MODERN MAGAZINES.

The Work That Must Be Done by a Successful Editor.

The poor editor who should be so fatuous as to depend for the contents of his magazine on the driftwood that came in to him would soon be replaced or his magazine would needs go out of business. Not only has the day gone by when editors sat in easy chairs and majestically sifted wheat from chaff in the piles of stuff sent prayerfully to them; but gone, too, is the day when an editor could sit in his office and plan a good magazine out of his inner consciousness. A good magazine today represents the skillful collaboration of several bright, keen men, or men and women, and its make-up is a nice medium between what the editors have reason to think their subscribers want and what they have reason to think their contributors can do best.

It is an important part of good editing nowadays to keep in as close touch as possible with the greatest possible number and variety of persons who write. It is part of an editor's business to keep well informed on all the new books and all his contemporaries among the periodicals—to know (better, perhaps, than the man himself knows) what kind or kinds of work any given man can best do and to have the knowledge filed away in his memory for ready reference. It is part of his business, too, to see and talk with, whenever he can, not only the persons who are trying to write for him, but all persons whose situation in life is at all interesting in a way which ought some day to make them valuable to him.—Clara E. Laughlin in Reader.

On the Christmas Tree.

The old fashioned stockings and hearts and crosses and animals cut out of tarlatan outlined with worsted and then filled with flat candies and tied on the tree are always popular ornaments. Sugar figures bought in the confectionery store will serve to break the monotony. The baker at Christmas time usually has his windows filled with horses, dogs, cats and men and women made of delectable cake dough and artistically ornamented with colored sugar curlycues. These are toothsome and attractive to the small boy and girl.

Candles in small candle holders are always scattered well over the tree. It is a wise precaution to keep a pan of water in which is a wet sponge in case of accidents. When a spark falls upon a bough, the sponge quickly applied to the spot will check the spread of the fire.—Washington Star.

Railroads and Hacks.

We don't know what there is about a station that calls for a hack. Every day women who carry market baskets from downtown home and are proud of it send for a hack to take them to the station, though they take nothing with them but a little handbag.—Atchison Globe.

He Asked.

Papa (severely)—Did you ask mamma if you could have that apple? Three-Year-Old—Yes, sir. Papa—Be careful now. I'll ask mamma. Three-Year-Old—Truly, papa, I asked her, but she said I couldn't have it.

Reassured.

Sick Man—Am I to take all that medicine? Wife—Yes; all of it. Sick Man—There's enough in that bottle to kill a donkey. Wife—No, there isn't, John, or the doctor wouldn't have prescribed it.

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise, Smothering Spells, Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. DEFECTIVE PAGE

RIGHT NOT RECOGNIZED.

Son of Busy Traveling Man Indignant at Familiarity of Scarce Parent.

The story of the hard worked newspaper man who devoted so much of his time to his work that he did not recognize the youngest member of his family when he met the youngster unexpectedly is not without its parallel. In this case, says the New York Press, it was the baby, who, not having sufficient opportunity to become acquainted with his proud parent, made a remark which led to resolves of reformation.

A traveling man naturally gets home but once in each week, sometimes drawing a two-week trip, and in other cases being away from his home for even a longer period. He usually tries to dash in home for Sunday, and on one of these dashes, in a certain home, the young man of the family having acquired that title some four years previously, was very bad, indeed, and finally forced the father to administer the merited, though mild, punishment. The injured youngster immediately made a wild dash for his mother, wailing at the top of his voice: "Mother, mother, moth-e-r; that man that comes here on Sunday has been spanking me."

Rude Woman.

Doing Great Work.

Florisant, Mo., Dec. 19th.—(Special.)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing a great work in curing the more terrible forms of Kidney Disease, such as Bright's Disease, Dropsy and Diabetes, everybody knows. But it must also be noted that they are doing a still greater work in wiping out thousands of cases of the earlier stages of Kidney Disease. Take for instance Mrs. Peter Barteau, of this place. She says:—

"I have been subject to pains in my back and knees for about three years, but since I have been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I have been entirely cured."

Others here tell similar stories. In fact, in this part of Missouri there are scores of people who have cured the early symptoms of Kidney Disease with Dodd's Kidney Pills. The use of the great American Kidney Remedy thus saved not only the lives of Kidney Disease victims, but thousands of other Americans from years of sufferings.

"I suffered with la grippe for seven weeks, and nothing I could do or take helped me until I tried Peruna.

"I felt at once that I had at last secured the right medicine and I kept steadily improving. Within three weeks I was fully restored, and I am glad that I gave that truly great remedy a trial. I will never be without it again."

In a letter dated August 31, 1904, Mrs. Marsh says: "I have never yet heard the efficacy of Peruna questioned. We still use it. I traveled through Kentucky and Tennessee three years ago, where I found Peruna doing its good work. Much of it is being used here also."—Henrietta A. S. Marsh.

Mrs. Tawker Speaks

By Mrs. William Bengough.

MERRY CHRISTMAS, James. Don't tell me you forgot what day it was; I have been reminding you every day for a week! Yes, it is a beautiful day, and no doubt Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Benson and Mrs. Topham are enjoying it. Why? Oh, because their husbands always give them beautiful Christmas gifts. Last year Mrs. Topham received diamonds, Mrs. Williams a gold watch, and Mrs. Benson the loveliest set of ermine I ever saw! Hinting? Don't know what you mean, Mr. Tawker; I never stoop to such a thing. You have never noticed that for the last six weeks I have been wishing for an Austrian china dinner set of 500 pieces and decorated with pink roses. It has not interested you to hear me repeatedly declare that I hadn't a decent set of furs to keep me from catching my death of cold, because the set I got last year is out of style. The fact that Sellem & Co. have the exact style of mink palerine and muff that would suit my complexion and ward off a case of pneumonia has never penetrated your inner consciousness.

"A fine day for Christmas, eh? Yes, and I am going to church, where I shall meet Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Benson and Mrs. Topham. Mrs. Williams will show me the amethyst chain her husband gave her as a Christmas gift. Mrs. Benson will want me to stop in on my way home to admire the point lace bertha, which is her husband's present. Mrs. Topham will expect me to notice the opal ring with which Mr. Topham surprised her.

"How do I know what they were to receive? Well, after Mrs. Williams has been explaining for two months that the thing she most desires is an amethyst chain, such as Glitter & Co. are selling, it will be a wonder if she doesn't get one. Why, she even took the trouble to tell her husband exactly what they cost! She is a model wife, but then her husband appreciates her. Mrs. Benson had a lace bertha sent home on approval yesterday; she will tell Mr. Benson that she knows, of course, that she can't afford one, but she wants to know how she would look in one if she could afford it! Mrs. Topham was once engaged to a man who is now a millionaire. She has mentioned that she needs an opal ring and that Mr. Roxy would have given her one, if she had married him.

"I KNEW YOU WOULD BE GLAD."

"Well, I am thoughtful, if others are not. I have a lovely Christmas gift ready for you. You hope you can afford it? Well, of all the ingratitude. What is it? Oh, you are interested at last. Well, I know you will be delighted—it is a set of dinner china, Austrian ware, 500 pieces, decorated with pink roses. You have never noticed that for the last month I have been wishing for such a dinner set! I am, however, more thoughtful than you; I knew you would be glad to see your table so adorned that your wife could ask her own mother to dinner, without being pitied for having married a poor man! I am more considerate of your wishes than you are of mine, so I carefully selected the set for you.

"Is there anything else I have bought? Why, yes, now I think of it, I did get the sweetest mink pelerine and muff I ever saw. I knew that if I didn't get one to-day every woman who knows me, and how badly I want one, will pity me for having a husband too poor or too stingy to give me one! Yes, it was expensive; but, let me tell you, I am not the woman to allow others to calumniate the one who promised at the altar to love and cherish me, because of a little thing like that!"

Bobbie's General

By Jane Crawford.

IT WAS the day before Christmas, and Bobbie stood looking out the window, watching the big snowflakes fall and cover all the ugly places in the road. People were hurrying along the streets, carrying bundles big bundles, little bundles, smooth bundles, bulky bundles, many bundles.

"I wonder if there really is a Santa Claus," mused Bobbie, "or if it's papas and mammas that give us the things. I just do wonder!" It was a question that had puzzled Bobbie for some time. For weeks he had heard mamma and Aunt Nan talking about the things they were going to give to people.

"Anyway, to-night I bet I'll stay awake and watch, just to see if it's really Santa Claus, or if it's mamma," the youngster decided.

At the usual time that night he toddled off to bed and in his own room he found a nail in the mantel that papa had fixed, and there he hung up one long black stocking.

"Go to sleep quick, darling, because Santa Claus is very busy to-night and there are lots of places for him to go," and mamma tucked him in bed and kissed him good night.

"Say, mamma," called Bobbie, as she was leaving the room.

"Yes, dear; what is it?"

"Well—nothin'."

He would stay awake and see for himself, so he lay there very still, with his big blue eyes wide open, staring at the fireplace. But the Sand-man, who is a very particular friend of Santa Claus', came very early that night.

It was just at the peep of day that Bobbie awoke. He sat up in bed and blinked toward the fireplace. There, scattered over the floor, were a lot of things. He scrambled out of bed and ran to look. The stocking, that last night hung limp, was now all over humps. There, saddled and bridled, stood a beautiful white rocking horse, whose long white tail seemed to be waving like a flag. "Oh, goody," said Bobbie right out loud, "here's the sleigh."

Bobbie grabbed the stocking and, squatting Turk fashion on the new new red sled, began pulling out tin soldiers, whistles, and—

"For goodness' sake, take me out of here!" exclaimed a deep voice down in the toe of the stocking.

Bobbie almost jumped out of his night gown.

"Don't be afraid, but take me out, I'm most smothered in here." Then Bobbie bravely poked in one chubby hand and brought out another tin soldier—a gay one, in a bright red and yellow uniform and a helmet and a sword, a regular general.

"Whew!" panted the general, shaking himself so that his sword rattled. With arms folded across his tin chest, he stood looking sternly at the white clad figure on the sled.

"Well, such a trip as I've had!" he exclaimed. "I've come way from the Santa Claus country in his big sleigh, packed in boxes and bags, and drawn over the snow with the swiftest reindeer! I've been flopped and banged about like a rag doll, and I'm just worn out!"

He glared at Bobbie, while the little boy gazed back in admiring awe.

"Please, sir, is there really and truly a Santa Claus?"

"Is there really and truly a Santa Claus?" mimicked the general. "Now look here, young fellow!"

"Young fellow!" Bobbie's chest began to swell and he straightened up. Eight years of baby, sweetheart and kid were instantly forgotten. Here was a play fellow that was worth while, to call him by such grown-up names.

"Young fellow," continued the general, "you don't want to begin to wonder if there is a Santa Claus."

"But," interrupted Bobbie, "I don't want to be a—a—ignorormous; I want to know about things."

"Well, it isn't a good thing for a young fellow to know too much. Perhaps you have never heard that in Santa Claus' workshop, where he makes all the toys, he keeps some books, and he has written down the name of every child in the world. Just as soon as he learns that a boy wants to find out his secrets, he scratches that boy's name off one book and puts it into another, and after his name he writes, 'caps, mittens, coats, shoes—'"

Bobbie shivered and put his arms tight round the neck of the new rocking horse.

"How does Santa Claus find out?" timidly.

"He sends fellows like me to find out what fellows like you say," giving Bobbie a look that made him wriggle and his teeth begin to chatter.

"You're cold; get into bed," commanded the general, as if he was talking to one of his own soldiers. "And as I am not in the habit of sleeping with horses and common soldiers, I'll go to bed with you."

They both got into bed and the general's bright red uniform snuggled down to the white night gown and the two were soon fast asleep.

It was broad daylight when Bobbie woke next time, and the sun was shining brightly through the frosty window panes. He sat up and rubbed his eyes and at first thought it was all a dream; but, no, there on the hearth were the rocking horse, the tin soldiers, the Noah's ark, and there on the pillow beside him, in all his brilliant splendor of red and yellow uniform and sword, was standing the general. He was just as beautiful as ever, with his arms folded across his breast, but he was stiff and cold and still.

Bobbie looked at him and then at the toys and the sled.

"Maybe he's better like that," he murmured, "for dead generals can't tell what they hear."

HAD FINE EYE FOR HAIRS.

Professor of Natural History Was Too Keen for Mischievous Students.

An eminent naturalist who holds—and fills, as well—a chair in a university, announced to the members of his class one morning that he had something of unusual interest to show them, relates Youth's Companion.

"I have here, gentlemen," he said, "some hairs from the skin of a young crested seal, and we will proceed to study their peculiarities."

Unfolding the small piece of paper that contained them, he spread the hairs out on a sheet of white cardboard and turned to get his microscope, which was on a desk behind him.

While his back was turned a roguish student quickly swept the hairs off the desk into his hand, and substituted others very closely resembling them.

"Young gentlemen," said the professor, severely, a moment later, as he glanced at the sheet of cardboard, "there has been some underground work here. These are mole hairs."

They never attempted to fool the professor again.

Economical.

Mr. Brown—Shall we have to buy new woolen underwear for all of the boys this year?

Mrs. Brown—No, dear. Yours have shrunk so they just fit John; John's shrunk so they just fit Jimmy; Jimmy's shrunk to fit Willie and Willie's are just snug on the baby. You are the only one that needs new ones!—Detroit Free Press.

Assistance Needed.

The real-estate man was doing his best to sell an undesirable lot.

"I guess you're a good deal like the man who caught the bear," said his prospective victim, who was pretty foxy.

"What do you mean?"

"You want some one to help you let go."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

TWO YEARS OF AGONY.

One Cake of Cuticura Soap and One Box of Cuticura Cured Baby's Awful Humor.

"When my sister was eighteen months old a humor broke out on her shoulders, extending clear across the back. For two years it caused her intense suffering. It would scab over and then crack open and a watery matter ooze from it. Then the scabs would fall off and it would be raw for a time. We had several different doctors and tried everything we could think of, but without effecting a cure. Then we got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment, which cured her completely and without scar or blemish. (Signed) Lillie Chase Walker, 5 Tremont St., Woodfords, Me."

Mrs. Anderson, a prominent society woman of Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, who witnessed her signature to the following letter, praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—There are but few wives and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any I ever knew and thoroughly reliable.

"I have seen cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit, who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable came out cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—MRS. R. A. ANDERSON, 225 Washington St., Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. Reed, 2425 E. Cumberland St., Philadelphia, Pa., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you the good I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I have been a great sufferer with female trouble, trying different doctors and medicines with no benefit. Two years ago I went under an operation, and it left me in a very weak condition. I had stomach trouble, backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, and was very nervous; in fact, I ached all over. I find yours is the only medicine that reaches such troubles, and would cheerfully recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all suffering women."

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such trouble at once by removing the cause and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition. If in doubt, write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass, as thousands do. Her advice is free and helpful.

No other medicine for women in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any substitute.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

May Abolish Grand Juries.

Later returns received by the secretary of state indicate that the so-called grand jury amendment to the state constitution passed at the last election, and legislators expect a spirited controversy at the next session over a bill abolishing the grand jury system and substituting a plan of indictment on presentation by the county attorney.

The proposal to amend the constitution in this respect was introduced in the senate by George R. Layhourn of Duluth and was passed after a hard contest. The amendment changes the constitutional provision that no one shall be charged with a crime "except on indictment by the grand jury," to read that no one shall be charged with a crime "except by due process of law." This allows the legislature to prescribe any plan of indictment it desires. The legislature may abolish the grand jury system entirely, or it may provide that in ordinary cases indictments shall be made on information by the county attorney and authorize the judge of the district court to call a jury to consider extraordinary.

Good Records.

The legislature committee of the county good roads associations of the state were in session at the Minneapolis Commercial club rooms. The various county associations of the state were represented in the session and a discussion was made of the bills to present to the next legislature seeking the establishment of better roads throughout the state and placing the construction of roads in the hands of capable and responsible men. George W. Cooley, president of the State Good Roads association, acted as chairman, and G. A. Will, president of the Hennepin county association, acted as secretary.

News in Brief.

The election of Alderman D. P. Jones to the mayoralty chair has been conceded by Mayor Haynes of Minneapolis who announced that he had decided to give up his contest.

The Morning of the Year

By C. C. Harbaugh

TO THE EAGER, WAITING NATIONS COMES THE MORNING OF THE YEAR
FROM THE GLORY OF THE ORIENT AFAR, WITH GLAD BELLS ALL A-RINGING OUT THE SORROW AND THE TEAR, AND IN THE HALLOWED LIKENESS OF A STAR;
WITH ONE-HALF THE OLD WORLD SLEEPING 'NEATH ITS COVERING OF WHITE,
IN THE STARLIGHT OF THE MORNING ON THE MOOR,
HIS LITTLE HANDS HAVE BACKWARD ROLLED THE SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT
AND HE STANDS, A CHILD OF WELCOME, AT THE DOOR.

YOU CAN HEAR THE BELLS A-RINGING IN EARTH'S NEWEST JUBILEE
WHERE THE ORANGE TREES ARE WAVING IN THE SUN,
FOR THE NEW YEAR THROWS HIS SMILES UPON THE MOUNTAIN AND THE SEA
AND UPON THE GOLDEN RIVERS AS THEY RUN;
THE LILY BLOOMS IN BEAUTY IN THE EVER SHADELESS CLIME,
BY THE NEW YEAR'S HANDS UNFOLDED IN THE MORN,
AND ACROSS THE TOSSING OCEAN YOU CAN HEAR THE SWEET BELLS CHIME
AS FOR EVERY HEART AN ERA NEW IS BORN.

HAIL THE GUEST THAT COMES A-SMILING DOWN THE PATHWAY OF THE STARS, IN THE HEAVEN-GIRDLED BEAUTY OF HIS BIRTH,
NOT A JOY AMONG THE PEOPLE NOW HIS HAPPY COMING MARS, FOR HE BRINGETH LOVE AND PEACE TO ALL THE EARTH:
THE OLD YEAR, SENT AND HOARY, SLOWLY FLITS ACROSS THE SNOW,
WITH A WISTFUL LOOK BEHIND HIM EVEN NOW;
AND HE SIGHS TO SEE THE NEW YEAR IN HIS BEAUTY AND HIS GLOW
WITH THE HOLY BEAMS OF MORNING ON HIS BROW.

OPEN THROWN BE EVERY PORTAL TO THE YEAR'S INITIAL GUEST, FOR TO US HE GENTLY COMES TO BIDE A-WEE;
WELCOME HIM AMONG THE VALLEYS, GREET HIM ON THE MOUNTAIN CREST, RING THE FAIR BELLS FOR HIS COMING ON THE SEA:
HIS HANDS ARE FILLED WITH BLESSINGS FOR THE NATIONS OF THE EARTH
NOT A CARE AND NOT A TROUBLE YET HE KNOWS,
WHERE SORROW SEEMS TO LINGER HE WILL SET THE SEAL OF MIRTH, AND 'NEATH HIS FEET WILL BLOOM A FAIRER ROSE.

LOUDER SOUND THE BELLS OF WELCOME, LET THE ANTHEMS FLOAT AFAR
TILL THE HEARTS OF ALL THE PEOPLE LIFT THE STRAIN, LET THE MUSIC OF HIS COMING REACH THE LOVE-LAND OF THE STAR
AND BE ECHOED ON THE FAR CELESTIAL PLAIN;
HE COMES, THE BABY NEW YEAR, IN HABILIMENTS OF WHITE,
FAIR AND FRESH AS NATURE'S EVER DEWY MORN,
WITH THE WORLD'S BELLS RINGING CLEARLY IN THE SOFT AND SACRED NIGHT
THAT USHERS IN TIME'S NEWEST, FAIREST BORN.

BIDE WITH US, O DAINTY COMER, TILL THE SNOW IS ON THY HAIR AND A STAFF IS IN THY HAND FOR JOURNEY FAR—
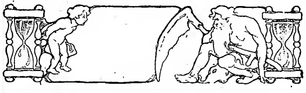
TILL AGAIN WE WAIT TO WELCOME FROM THE EAST ANOTHER YEAR
AND NO LONGER GLOWS FOR THEE THE MORNING STAR;
COME INTO THE HEARTS OF GLADNESS THAT HAVE WAITED FOR THEE LONG,
BRING THE HAPPINESS AND PEACE THAT ALL SHOULD KNOW,
AND THE WORLD WILL HAIL THY COMING WITH A GRAND, IMMORTAL SONG
'MID THE FALLING OF THE SOFT AND FLEECY SNOW.



The Old and the New Years

By Josephine C. Goodale.

THE OLD YEAR.

The Old Year, struggling in death's cruel throes,
Lies hoar and anguished in the darkening night,
Reluctant soul, to take his final flight,
Within his hand, with dregs of mortal woes
Defiled, behold the cup full well he knows
He pressed to lips of strong men in their might,
Who, vanquished, fell in life's relentless fight.
In irony of fate, the weakling rose,
His promise unfulfilled of proud career.
To death he doomed the youth, ah, cruel fate!
And spared the old, who longed and prayed to die.
This is thy record, O thou dying year!
Vain is thy suppliant cry to Heaven! Too late
In ashes of repentance thou must lie.

THE NEW YEAR.

Welcome, thrice welcome, O thou blithe New Year!
Thou comest smiling from the rosy sky,
Thy form alight with grace and dignity;
Within thy hand a scroll; we need not fear
To read what shall in lines of gold appear.
Light in thy eyes, to us a surety
Of happier days; and so we follow thee,
Humbly to meet the smile, bravely the tear.
Why should we not, glad year, be born anew,
Leaving behind the old, dead chrysalis,
To mount, on wings of service, heights unknown?
Yon kindly sun the scattered gems of dew
In casket stores, the needy earth to bless.
Thy garnered gifts shall by our hand be strown.
—Christian Work.

Winter Nasturtiums.

Nasturtiums for winter growing should be cut off from the plants before the frost injures them, taking stocky, healthy leaf stalks and sprays, those full of buds being the most desirable. No roots are taken. The stalks should be placed in a low vase with plenty of water, when they will thrive and blossom through the winter. This experiment has been successfully tested. The water should be renewed as it is required, but the plants can be displaced to do this only in a careful way.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Improved Diary.

"This," explained the bookseller, "is our latest patent diary. We think it is the cleverest thing in that line ever devised."

The shopper turns the leaves idly.

"But I can't see where it is different from any other," she observes.

"No? Well, if you will look at all the dates after January 23, you will see that in each space has been printed: 'Got up, ate breakfast, lunch and dinner, and went to bed.' That insures a complete diary for the year."—Judge.

An Annual Supply.

On New Year's day I shall renounce
My habits bad, with proper shame.
And when another year rolls round
Once more, no doubt, I'll do the same.

REGARDING FINAL PROOF.

During the past few months the general land office has been very strict in regard to final proof made by settlers upon government lands, and now when a settler wants to make final proof before any officer other than the regular land officials an examination by a special agent of the government is required before the final reciepts are issued. A recent ruling is to the effect that when proofs are made before officers other than those of the land office, a special agent must be present to examine the claimants and their witnesses. If no special agent is present the proof is suspended until the agent can make an examination of the land and the evidence offered by the settler.

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Advice as to the Starching and Ironing of Table Linen.

Many choose to omit starch when doing up table linen. In that case the cloths are merely dampened and then ironed bone dry with a very hot flatiron. Equally desirable is it to starch table linen with a very thin starch, sprinkling it like all other clothing on the previous night. Always have the iron hot. When ironing a tablecloth fold it the long way through the center, so that the edges exactly meet after once going over it. Then with the iron lightly rub over one side after the fold has been made. Before putting the cloth away spread it out to air awhile. A good method for its final care is to wind it on a roller. Get a pasteboard mailing tube and attach a narrow ribbon to each end so that a full yard hangs out. The tube must be just as long as a folded tablecloth is made. Roll the cloth on this, bring the ends of ribbon together and cross, then tie them around the roll. Cloths kept in this way have no unnecessary wrinkles in them and take up the smallest amount of room.

Smaller pieces of table linen are ironed in the same way, embroidered initials being ironed on the back always.

Four Points In Making Tea.

The president of the American Tea association, writing in a well known trade journal, says: "There are four exact rules to be followed in making tea, and the neglect of any one of them will render the article valueless. Nearly every housewife neglects at least one." The four rules are these: The water must be freshly drawn from the faucet. It should boil hard for five minutes before pouring on the tea leaves. It should remain on the leaves not less than seven and not more than ten minutes and should then be poured off into another heated teapot. Use one teaspoonful of tea for each cup of water unless a weak infusion is desired.

Apple Preserve.

Peel and core two dozen medium sized apples and place in a jar with three pounds of fine white sugar and one-fourth pound of ground ginger distributed in layers. Let them remain two days and during half that time let one-fourth pound of bruised ginger infuse in a pint of boiling water. Strain and boil the liquor with the apples for about an hour, adding another pound of sugar. Skim well and when the apples are quite clear remove from the fire.

Ivory From the Graves of Elephants.

As a species of rejoinder to the charge that the present consumption of ivory is threatening the elephant with extinction, it has recently been stated that 85 per cent of the supply of ivory is obtained from "elephant cemeteries"—spots met with here and there in the jungle, where elephants have resorted for centuries to die. W. L. Distant, editor of the Zoologist, points out that very few of these spots seem to have been discovered by travelers, and scarcely any record of them is to be found in books of travel.

ALL WHISKY IS BAD

MOST OF IT NOT EVEN PURE SPIRITS OF GRAIN.

Eighty-five Per Cent Adulterated, Declares Uncle Sam's Chief Chemist, With Such Poisons as Logwood Juice and Creosote.

The declaration of Dr. Wiley, chief chemist of the United States department of agriculture, that 85 per cent of all whiskies commonly sold in this country are adulterated has opened the eyes of a good many of those who maintain that an occasional drink is not harmful. And if Dr. Wiley's words needed any corroboration the deaths of twelve or more men in the "Stryker's farm" district of New York's east side from drinking wood alcohol disguised as whisky would give it.

In a recent interview on this subject Dr. Wiley said:

"If I could only talk I'd tell you things that would make your hair curl and that would result either in your becoming a total abstainer or else in demanding affidavits from the distiller, the bottler, the retailer and the government revenue officers with every bottle you purchased."

The investigation that the government chemist has been conducting has for its object the ultimate passage of a law by congress against adulteration of all foods, and in this the rectifiers and blenders of whisky see their doom. If the law should pass their occupation would become unlawful.

Dr. Wiley's analysis has found in so called "pure rye whisky" such ingredients as wood alcohol, prune juice, logwood juice and cologne spirits and other stranger things.

As to Scotch whisky, Dr. Wiley has received some interesting information from H. Clay Evans, United States consul general in London.

From the letters of Mr. Evans it appears that they make no secret about fake Scotch whisky in London and advertise freely what it can be made of, not omitting this ingredient of creosote. Talking on the subject, Dr. Wiley is reported as saying:

"One of the principal ingredients of this so called Scotch whisky is creosote. One pound of it, according to the label, will make 100 gallons of Scotch whisky if put into so much 'silent spirit,' as they call it in England, or pure alcohol, as we call it here. This pure alcohol may be made from potatoes. A small bottle of essence of real Scotch whisky is then used for coloring matter and your 'Scotch' is ready for the market."

Consul General Evans forwarded some of the essences from which some Scotch whisky sold in this country is made. These essences are on sale in the open market in London.

A MATTER OF BUSINESS.

Total Abstinence, Like Honesty, the Best Policy.

The cause of temperance or total abstinence has come on as a matter of business. Large corporations especially, where rules have to be somewhat sweeping and obedience rigorous, simply decree temperance of the most temperate kind on the part of their employees, the kind that is so closely akin to total abstinence as to figure the same in the result.

It is not a moral question, and (without wanting to discuss the question) it may be said that this is the right way to get at it. By saying it is not a moral question we mean that these prohibitions of drinking by the general business standard of the time are put on business ground, as if to say: "You may drink water or wine for your dinner, but it is at your own risk. Sobriety is the rule of business." It is this that the world is progressing along the better ways and that men are becoming better if on no higher ground than that "honesty is the best policy"—in other words, because it pays.—Indianapolis News.

Temperance Solving Labor Troubles.

"Refrain from treating. Let whisky alone and you will have taken a mighty step toward solving labor and other troubles that beset the workingman." This is the advice of S. L. Sumner, business agent of the Chicago Milk Wagon Drivers' union, who has started a campaign against the treating custom. "It is the work of drunken mobs which brings decent labor into disrepute. The state federation seems to consider the liquor question a joke. It is the most serious and vital thing labor has to contend with. Whisky is the greatest foe of the workingman and the trades unionists. It muddles his brain, and he can't work as he ought to. It ruins his body. It swallows up his salary, and he goes home on pay night with no money to buy food for hungry mouths and coal for the winter's fires."

Drunkenness Cured by Suggestion

An interesting case of curing a drunkard by suggestion during his natural sleep was related by M. Farez at the annual meeting of the French Society of Hypnology and Psychology. The man was a habitual drunkard, who spent his whole time in cafes consuming wine, beer, rum, absinth, vermuth, etc. Although not usually a "rowdy" alcoholic, he occasionally became very violent and at times refused any kind of treatment. Finally, suggestion was employed during sleep, without the man's knowledge, and after some weeks he had no outbursts of violence and improved steadily. After a year and a half of this treatment he was entirely cured and only drank a little light beer at his meals.

Sacrifice.

If it is a small sacrifice to discontinue the use of wine, do it for the sake of others. If it is a great sacrifice, do it for your own sake.—Samuel J. May.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by Frank Saballa and Ida Saballa, his wife, mortgagors, to Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., [illegible] which mortgage bears date the [illegible] day of September, 1903, with power of sale therein contained, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the [illegible] day of November, 1903 at 4.30 o'clock P. M. in book 116 of mortgages on page 203, and no action or proceedings having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

And Whereas, said mortgage contains a clause providing that if any installment of the debt secured thereby is not paid when due, that the whole sum secured thereby shall become due and payable at once; and whereas by reason of said clause there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice the sum of [illegible]; and whereas said mortgage contains a clause providing that if the party of the first part shall fail to make payment of interest due upon a certain prior mortgage upon the land described in said mortgage, that then the party of the second part may pay such interest and have a lien thereon upon said premises under this mortgage; and whereas pursuant to said clause and party of the first part having made default in the payment thereof, party of the second part has paid such interest to the sum of [illegible], making the total sum due under the terms of said mortgage the sum of $118.51.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The South West Quarter (S.W. ¼) of Section Twenty-seven (27) in Township One Hundred and Fifty-one (151) North of Range Forty-six (46) West of the Fifth P. M., in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the Court House in the City of Crookston, in said County and State, on the 28th day of January, 1905, at 2 o'clock P. M. of said day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said indebtedness of $118.51 and interest, and taxes if any, on said premises, the Attorney's fee of $25.00, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of sale as provided by law.

How to Be a Weather Prophet With the Aid of the Moon.

A clear moon indicates frost.

A dull looking moon means rain.

A single halo around the moon indicates a storm.

If the moon looks high cold weather may be expected.

If the moon looks down warm weather is promised.

The new moon on her back always indicates wet weather.

If the moon changes with the wind in the east, then shall we have bad weather.

If the moon be bright and clear when three days old fine weather is promised.

When the moon is visible in the daytime, then we may look forward to cool days.

When the points of the crescent of the new moon are very [illegible], visible frost may be looked for.

If the new moon appears with its points upward, then the month will be dry, but should the points be downward a good deal of rain must be expected.

Peanut Hunt.

The time is now here for indoor games, and about the jolliest of these is a "peanut hunt." A hundred or more nuts must be provided. Some of them are rolled separately in violet colored tissue paper, while yellow tissue paper is twisted about bunches of three or four together. These bundles of nuts are well hidden in nooks underneath chairs, under rugs, behind pictures and in many other places that will suggest themselves to the giver of the party. When ready for the hunt each hunter is given a silk bag in which to place his "game." The one who first fills his bag wins the first prize, the one who has the most violet covered nuts gets the second prize, and to the one finding the most yellow covered nuts is awarded the booby prize.

Our Dog.

Our little dog is very smart
He begs for cake and pie
By trotting round on his hind legs
So cute, when we are by

His paws he droops and wiggles them
And wrinkles up his nose,
And all us youngsters shout and scream
To see him on his toes.

The baby creeps and pulls his ears
And cuddles down to sleep,
And, though we call and whistle low,
Close watch does Towser keep

We're awful proud! Jim's great big Dane
"Must uses" all his legs,
While ours, with two, can waltz and dance
And with his front ones begs.

Will Work Much Hardship.

The recent closing of the various convents in France, it is learned, will cause the industry and art of lacemaking to die out. This charming and profitable work was fostered chiefly in religious institutions where the nuns were past mistresses in the art and the peasant girls of the neighborhood were pupils.

The Butternut.

The butternut is a variety of walnut and is well known in this country. It is sometimes called the white walnut. Its fruit is oily and not as generally liked as that of the English walnut. It is a smaller tree than the black walnut. From its sap sugar may be obtained. The inner bark and leaves are used for medical purposes.—Normal Instructor.

A tailor at Boston, England, has thought out one of tho most novel advertising schemes which have yet been brought to notice. He has placed ten turtles in his window, and on the back of each turtle is painted one letter of the tailor's name. He has offered a prize of $10 to any one who sees the turtles lined up so that the letters are in the order in which they appear in his name.

ENDURANCE IN DANCING.

Rome has recently entered the arena of odd competitions by promoting a dancing match. the prizes being awarded to the dancers who made the greatest number of steps in a given time. The records made were certainly astounding, for at the close it was found that a woman had actually danced 28,000 steps, while her nearest rival, also a woman, had the creditable score of 21,000 steps. It is a tribute to the terpsichorean superiority of women that the most nimble footed of the men did not reach even 15,000 steps.

In another dancing tournament at Paris M. Vincent and Mlle. Schcrin succeeded in waltzing for six hours and three-quarters without a moment's rest, while a Berlin man waltzed for sixteen consecutive hours, from 9 a. m. to 1 o'clock the next morning.

The Simplon "Subway."

The biggest thing in subways just now—next, of course, to Mr. McDonald's—is the Simplon tunnel under the Alps from Brieg to Isella.

The tunnel is twelve miles long and costs about as much per mile as New York's. Instead of running under a Tenderloin it has at one point more than 4,000 feet of solid rock above it.

The New York subway was troubled by underground streams of water. The Simplon work was recently almost stopped by hot water coursea in the rock. Whence came they? The mountains above are snowy much of the year and cool always.

The crown of the Simplon tunnel is nearly half a mile above the sea.

Last, but First.

John Lund, former president of the Norwegian house of parliament and a delegate to the recent international peace congress, can write English very well, but occasionally makes a mistake in rhetoric and the pronunciation of words. He made a rather funny break in responding to the address of welcome given by Secretary Hay. Mr. Lund was referring to the action of the United States in promoting the universal peace movement. As he strove to bring out the point of his argument he said, "And last, but not least, first of all, we must interest all nations as much as the United States has been interested."

The Quick Lunch.

Sir William McEwen, a professor of Glasgow university, is an authority for the view that "the quick lunch" is a health destroyer. In an address to the Charing Cross medical school of London he said that people seemed to act as though "food should be thrown into the stomach as a sandwich into the pocket." He complains that "mastication is not taught in schools" and says it is time that "certificates should be given in schools for sound digestion. Instead of doing that we appoint royal commissions to inquire into the causes of physical deterioration of the race."

Marriage Agreed With Him.

Those who hold that the married state is apt to age a man were refuted by the case of Edwin Garton in London. He was married three times. When the registers were compared in court recently his age at his third marriage was found to be less than that entered in the register of the second ceremony. "The more the man married," said Justice Bigham, bathing his temples with eau de cologne, "the younger he seemed to get."

Nerve Fag.

If You Waste Your Nerve Energy, After Awhile You Will Suffer For It.

You can waste nerve force by excess, over-work, worry, anxiety, etc.

You can weaken yourself by not eating proper food or securing sufficient rest to renew the nerve energy you use up.

The proper treatment, in addition to good phosphatic food, such as whole meal bread, prepared cereals, etc., is Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

This is as truly a brain and nerve food as any food you could eat, and besides, furnishes strength and tone of its own, which goes to the weakened nerve system, and sets it to rights.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a refreshing, revitalizing tonic food-medicine for the brain and nerves. It reconstructs worn-out nerve tissue, and fills your languid brain with new life and vigor.

Dr. Miles' Nervine has made so many marvelous cures, of people so sick the doctors thought they were incurable, that it is today the standard medicine in many thousands of American homes.

The first bottle is guaranteed to help you, or druggist returns your money.

"The extreme heat, close confinement and intense mental strain incident to the banking business, has caused me to suffer with nervousness and insomnia. It gives me pleasure to say that I have used Dr. Miles' Nervine with very satisfactory results in the treatment of these affections. I am now on my fifth bottle, and eat and sleep well, in fact have almost forgotten that I possess nerves."—R. L. DALBY, Asst. Cashier, State Bank, Texarcana, Ark.

TALES BRIEFLY TOLD.

During the funeral of an unpopular man in a New England village, a stranger having asked of the sexton: "Who's dead?" and "What complaint?" the sexton replied: "There is no complaint; everybody is satisfied."

"I meant to have told you of that hole," said the kindly host to his friend, who had suddenly disappeared in the course of a stroll through the grounds into a pit full of water. The friend climbed out and shook himself. "It doesn't matter," he said, cheerily, "I found it."

John G. Carlisle, who has a farm on Long Island, was discussing with his foreman the advisability of putting on a new man. "No," said the foreman, "I wouldn't bother to take on Frank. He wouldn't suit." "Why not?" "Well, because you couldn't place no dependence on his stickin' to the job. He's such a freckle-minded cuss he never stays at any one thing."

It was a new voluntary and the organist had been going through it for the first time. After she had finished the organ blower asked her if it had gone all right. With some surprise the young woman answered: "Oh, it went very well, thank you. But why do you ask?" "Well," said he, "I had never blown to this piece before, and I was rather anxious about it."

An Irishman traveling in France was challenged by a Frenchman to fight a duel, to which he readily consented, and suggested shillelahs as weapons. "That won't do," said the Frenchman's second. "As challenged party you have the right to choose the arms, but chivalry demands that you should decide upon a weapon with which Frenchmen are familiar." "Is that so?" replied the Irishman, coolly. "Very well, we'll fight with guillotines."

FACETIOUS FLINGS.

Johnny—Pa, what is tact?

Pa—It's the art of letting a person know you know enough not to know.

He—If I had never been in love before how would I have known what ailed me?

She—I would have told you.

Higgins—Here's a funny typographical error in this paper. It speaks of a man's "mother-in-jaw."

Wiggins—Well, isn't that all right? I can't see anything wrong about it.

Miss Passay—You may sneer at pet dogs, but they're faithful, anyway. I'd rather kiss a good dog than some men.

Mr. Sharpe—Well, well, some men are born lucky.

"What would you do if you were a king?" asked the man of vaulting ambition.

"I don't know," answered the matter-of-fact person. "I suppose I'd follow the fashion and wear a look of worry and a bullet-proof shirt."

"Now, if I were only an ostrich," began the mean man at the breakfast table, as he picked up one of his wife's biscuits, "then—"

"Yes," interrupted the patient better-half, "then I might get a few feathers for that old hat I've worn for three winters."

Possibly.

"I wonder what he ever saw about her that attracted him?"

"Perhaps the $50,000 worth of diamonds and pearls with which her parents had decorated her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Dawn of the Year.

Beside the gate of opening year,
While looking at its prospects fair,
I wish you every blessing, dear,
Whose beauty haunts me everywhere;
My heart goes out with throb of pain—
Beseeching deep the heavens above—
That you may every gladness gain,
With purest peace and smile of love!

Ah! sweet as rose that greets the June,
Is your heart's love, I surely know,
And like the springtide's rhythmic rune
The words that from your presence flow—
All deeper than the deepest sea—
All higher than the sky above—
Is love my darling holds for me,
Within the kingdom of her love!

Beside the portals of the year,
I wish you plenitude of grace,
May all the world befriend you, dear,
And bless the beauty of your face;
For like a song at eventide,
Like tender tones of cooing dove,
Are you my soul's delight and pride,
The queen of all my heart can love!

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.

New Year's Day in China

By Rev. Frederick Poole.

The Chinese boys and girls—especially the boys—get lots of fun out of their yearly festivals, and the little urchins look forward to their holiday times with as much glee and happiness as does Young America to the Fourth of July, Decoration day, Washington's Birthday, Christmas and New Year's.

There is the Lantern Festival, when all turn out to witness the brilliant display, for the whole country is ablaze with the light of thousands of paper lanterns made in all sorts of fancy shapes. Then there is the Moon Festival, when they worship the moon, and the little pigtailed boy and his chubby, small-footed sister look up and see, not a man, but a toad, in the moon; for there is a story of a beautiful Chinese lady who drank some medicine which would keep her free from death, and then went to the moon, where she was turned into a toad, and ever since the Chinese have seen a "toad in the moon."

But perhaps the chief reason why the little folks in China look forward to the Moon Festival is because they get all they want of those little moon-shaped cakes which are made only for this occasion. They are very prettily decorated, but oh! so awfully indigestible that the next day the little fellows who are suffering from stomach ache are apt to think that there was a toad in the cake instead of the moon.

The Chinese boys and girls may never have heard of George Washington and the holiday we keep in memory of the Father of his Country, but they know all about the wise and good Chinese official who lived about 450 years before our first Christmas, and who was scolded and degraded by an ungrateful emperor, so that in sorrow and disgrace he drowned himself. Well, his body was never found; and so, to keep his memory, the Chinese, once a year, ever since, have had a Dragon Boat Festival, and the children go out in swarms to see the long boat processions on the rivers, and to watch the offerings of rice and other foods as they are placed on the waters for the benefit of the spirit of the lost minister of state.

But the great day of all days for the children in China is New Year's Day. I think, if you were to ask a little Chinese boy what he meant by "New Year's," he would say: "Noise, and plenty of it." For weeks the Chinese are preparing for this great event. Houses are cleaned, and the shopkeeper looks forward to it with great satisfaction, because he knows that his customers, if they have any self-respect, will be sure to pay their debts before the new year; for it is considered a great disgrace to start the new year in debt.

The Chinese know nothing about Christmas, because, you know, that beautiful holiday belongs only to Christian countries.

By the way, boys, ask your father which comes first, Christmas or New Year's. He is sure to say "Christmas," and then you can laugh, and tell him that he is wrong.

Well, New Year's ever comes first in China, and, dear me, what a time of frolic and nervous expectancy it is for the little slant-eyed boys and girls! Lots of firecrackers are laid by in readiness, but none must be let off before the proper time.

Nobody goes to bed that night, but all sit up waiting for the first hour of the new day, when the father, and his wife and little ones, all worship before the spirit tables of their ancestors, and then at the shrine of the household gods.

Then the door is opened, and the whole family and servants go out outside and bow down to a certain part in the heavens which has been indicated in the Chinese calendar, and so worship heaven and earth, and receive the spirit of gladness and good fortune, which, they say, comes from that quarter of the heavens.

Then the noise begins, and when I was in China I often used to think that it was a good thing that the country was so big, for every one of the 400,000,000 are setting off firecrackers at the same time. This is to frighten away evil spirits, and I have thought many a time that those spirits must have a bad time of it during the dawn of the Chinese New Year. If the Chinese had been present at the time that Admiral Sampson's guns had their had coughing spell before the hills of Santiago on a certain day in July, they would have clapped their hands, and cried: "Good, good! Just like our New Year's!"

Yet, notwithstanding the noise, I always liked the New Year's in China, for after the first day the noise stops, and the shops are all closed for one or two weeks, for it is unlucky to do business during the birth of the new year (except at the back door—but don't say anything about this).

Then, too, we Americans could walk along the streets for once in the year feeling sure that nobody would curse us, or call us "foreign devils," for it is unlucky to use that bad word at such a happy time. Dear me, how I wish that New Year's would last 12 months!

But the first day has come, and the little Chinese children get ready to enjoy it for all it is worth. They are dressed in their best and gaudiest clothes, which are only worn on this occasion. The father has got from the pawn shop his finest silk gowns, which that obliging "relative" has taken good care of during the past 12 months, and, thus splendidly attired, the proud father and his little boys start out on a little visiting trip to his relatives and friends, to "Kung Hi, Fah Tsoi,"—wish them a happy new year and many riches.

"What," you say, "don't the little girls go, too?"

No; they must stay at home, because the little girl is not so important as her brother, and, besides, she would have difficulty in walking far in her tiny "golden lily" shoes, which do not measure more than three inches in length.

But what a day it is for the little boy! He has already got his first present when Santa Claus, that is to say, the boy's father (same thing, you see, as in this country), gave him a little string of copper cash tied on a red cord; for it is unlucky to start the New Year without any money in your pocket, and that is something both you and I agree with—isn't it?

But our little Chinese boy could never carry home all the money that is given to him, for it is the custom for every one whom he visits to give him presents of money, as well as candy and cakes. Of course, the father takes charge of this—I mean the money—and I have often wondered if his little son ever sees his money presents again. I really think that a little Chinese boy must be a good investment for his father on New Year's Day in China.

But the visiting is soon over, and then the little Chinaman is off, sometimes with his sister, to see the sights in the streets. They look at the peep shows and the Punch-and-Judy shows—which, by the way, is a Chinese invention. They spin their tops and fly their kites, until the sound of gongs and drums tells them that there is a theater or a juggling show somewhere near, and off they go, and soon are to be found in the front row, clapping their hands in childish glee at the funny antics of the performers, until the man comes round with the hat, and then there is a patter of small feet as the youngsters scurry away, for the Chinese boys have no use for the hat—like some other boys I know.

But twilight finds the tired little folks at home, for they are afraid to be out at dark; and little John Chinaman closes the day in eating sweetmeats, or in taking his turn at beating the unmusical gong, or in diving among the mass of red paper in the courtyard, where the fireworks were let off by his father and big brothers, in search for unexploded single crackers, which he at once puts to their proper use, until, tired out with his day's exertions, he is put to bed, and is soon sound asleep, dreaming of cakes and candy, copper cash, and Punch-and-Judy shows, and "Cr-cr-cr-crack — bang — bang—boom!"—Sunday School Times.

TIME FOR RESOLUTIONS.

They Come as a Happy Thought at the End of the Dead Year.

Oh, dear, another year gone, life slipping by, a herd of old mistakes, faults, trooping out the portals of the old, dead, used-up year into the new. It is uncomfortable. Banish them, wave them back!

With what force?

Ah, a happy thought—fresh resolutions! They stand beside one instantly—that Aladdin's lamp of belief in yourself is a remarkable "stunt." The crisp, brand new fairies smile at the ancient, ghostly crew, nod with their shining crowns, and, soft-muttering, the ragged lot slink to the shadows of the things we try not to remember.

We do this every year, forgetting that we have told the same story time after time and that the law of consecutive justice rolls on serenely while we babble and remain ourselves.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

In the New Year.

Let us not be unjust, ungentle, selfish, pushing, grasping, vain, hard, pessimistic. Let us get the best out of friends and workers, not by pinching them down, but encouraging them up. Let us be true and without fear. Answer our letters, keep gratitude as the foremost impulse, pay our bills, and say our prayers.

As Usual.

She—What kind of Christmas present shall I buy you while I am out, dear?

He—Oh, any cheap trifle, Maria. Remember, I can't afford to spend much this year.—Woman's Home Companion.

NOT SUCH A FUNNY TRICK.

Drummer's Joke on Waiter Turned Out a Costly One On Himself.

"I suppose there comes to every man a desire to do something smart on an occasion," said the drummer, as a sigh took the place of his smile, according to the New York Times.

"Well, such a desire came to me as I was leaving a certain southern city after a week's stay. The waiter at my table had called me 'Gineral' and been at great pains to care for me and I made up my mind to reward him with a $5 bill. It was a counterfeit with which I had been stuck, but I thought it would be the biggest kind of a joke to work off on Bob.

"I had got a hundred miles away when I was arrested on a telegram for passing counterfeit money, and when taken back I was arraigned in a United States court and had to give bail and appear on three different occasions. I had a lawyer and other expenses, lost a good three weeks altogether and just escaped prison by the skin of my teeth. In addition to this I had to make good to the waiter, who sorrowfully shook his head when he received the money and said:

"I'ze sorry for you, Gineral, but dis may be de means of savin' your contemptible soul from the gallus!"

Found at Last.

Heusley, Ark., Dec. 28th.—(Special)—That a sure cure for Backache would be a priceless boon to the people, and especially the women of America, is admitted by all interested in medical matters, and Mrs. Sue Williams of this place is certain she has found in Dodd's Kidney Pills the long-looked-for cure.

"I am 38 years old," Mrs. Williams says, "and have suffered with the Backache very much for three or four years. I have been treated by good physicians and got no relief, but thanks to God, I have found a cure at last and it is Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have taken only one box and it has done me more good than all the doctors in three or four years. I want all sufferers from Backache to know that they can get Dodd's Kidney Pills and get well."

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Thompson, of Lillydale, N. Y., Grand Worthy Wise Templar, and Member of W. C. T. U., tells how she recovered from a serious illness by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am one of the many of your grateful friends who have been cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and who can to-day thank you for the fine health I enjoy. When I was thirty-five years old, I suffered severe backache and frequent bearing-down pains; in fact, I had womb trouble. I was very anxious to get well, and reading of the cures your Compound had made, I decided to try it. I took only six bottles, but it built me up and cured me entirely of all my troubles.

"My family and relatives were naturally as gratified as I was. My niece had heart trouble and nervous prostration, and was considered incurable. She took your Vegetable Compound and it cured her in a short time, and she became well and strong, and her home to her great joy and her husband's delight was blessed with a baby. I know of a number of others who have been cured of different kinds of female trouble, and am satisfied that your Compound is the best medicine for sick women."—MRS. ELIZABETH H. THOMPSON, Box 105, Lillydale, N. Y.

Thousands upon thousands of women throughout this country are not only expressing such sentiments as the above to their friends, but are continually writing letters of gratitude to Mrs. Pinkham, until she has hundreds of thousands of letters from women in all classes of society who have been restored to health by her advice and medicine after all other means had failed.

Here is another letter which proves conclusively that there is no other medicine to equal Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered with poor health for over seven years, not sick enough to stay in bed, and not well enough to enjoy life and attend to my daily duties properly. I was growing thin, my complexion was sallow, and I was easily upset and irritable.

"One of my neighbors advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I procured a bottle. A great change for the better took place within a week, and I decided to keep up the treatment.

"Within two months I was like a changed woman, my health good, my step light, my eyes bright, my complexion vastly improved, and I felt once more like a young girl. I wonder now how I ever endured the misery. I would not spend another year like it for a fortune.

"I appreciate my good health, and give all the praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. M. TILLA, 407 Habersteen St., Savannah, Ga.

Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of such letters.

MISTAKES TO AVOID.

Judging the wealth of a woman by her apparel.

Thinking that people are always covertly criticising your actions.

Thinking that a man does not notice the details of the toilet of a woman in whom he is interested.

Criticising an absent person without being sure that your listeners do not know the person to whom you allude.

Imagining that passers-by are sufficiently interested in your appearance to notice that your hat or coat is out of date.

Then They Both Smiled.

"Gracious, my dear!" said the first society belle, spitefully, "I trust you're not ill. You look so much older tonight."

"Do I, dear," the other replied, sweetly. "I feel quite well. And you—how wonderfully improved you are! You look positively young!"—Tit-Bits.
